COLUMBUS, O.—Robert Livingston, of the Livingston Seed Co., has moved with his family to his farm on Byers road, disposing of his residence in this city.

THE registration of cable addresses by the cable companies will cost $2.50 per annum after October 31, 1919. Your name will be dropped from the registers if this fee is not paid.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district remain about the same, $2.75 for reds and yellows and $3.25 for whites, prompt shipment. The continued mild weather is very unfavorable to stocks in storage.

NEW YORK.—A number of the many claims against railroads for damage to lily bulbs frozen during the winter of 1917, due to delays, have been paid. Other suits will be commenced before the two-year legal limit expires.

VISITED NEW YORK: Frederick M. Clark, of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.; C. B. Whitted, representing T. W. Wood & Son, Richmond, Va.; J. L. Gardner, representing Joseph Breck & Sons, Corp., Boston, Mass.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. B. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., New York, returning from Japan; C. Spears, of E. F. Spears & Sons, Paris, Ky.; B. J. Robinson, of the Atascadero Seed Co., Atascadero, Calif.; Axel Knudsen, American representative of L. Daehnfeldt, Odense, enroute to Denmark.

BELLINGHAM, WASH.—James Hulbert, one of the smaller growers of cabbage seed in this section, is reported to have completed delivery of five and one-half tons of seed of this item to a Detroit, Mich., firm, for $17,500. It is announced that the crop in Skagit county will total 80 per cent of the country's demand this year.

New York Seed Trade.

The union leaders have called off the dock strike and ordered the men to go to work on the morning of October 22. Of the 54 local unions, it is believed that at least 31 will obey the order. The strike seems to be broken. While some dock laborers resumed work last week, and Dutch bulbs started moving, there is much congestion, and time will be needed to straighten out the tangle. Expressmen are not calling for, or delivering packages.

Out of a total of 14,500 Dutch cases which were held up on steamers from Holland, about 40 per cent only had been moved up to October 20.

Representatives of the Boston and Philadelphia seed houses are here this week seeking bulbs.

The S. S. Rotterdam arrived from Holland, October 20, with many Dutch drummers.

Kentucky Bluegrass.

From information received by the Goverment Seed Reporter, it is estimated that about 75 per cent of the 1919 crop of Kentucky bluegrass had left the hands of growers in Kentucky and practically all of the Missouri-Iowa seed had been disposed of by growers in these two states by September 30. As a matter of fact, only about five per cent of the crop remained in the hands of growers in Missouri and Iowa as early as August 22. The quality of the Missouri crop was very good but that of the Kentucky crop was about 10 per cent below normal and possibly five per cent below last year's quality because of the light weight of the 1919 seed. Prices paid to growers in Kentucky during September have been the same or 50 to 75 cents more per 100 pounds of stripped seed than those prevailing the latter part of August.

Seed Tape History.

The Sunday Call, of Newark, N. J., in a special feature section of its issue of August 24, under the title of "Business Romances of Newark," devoted one-half of a page to an interesting history of the seed tape from the time of its invention by Elisha E. Gray until the present day, and the formation of the American Seed Tape Co., a fast growing Newark industry, whose business has already extended to South America and Great Britain. The article traces the development of the idea and the difficulties encountered in the matter of paper, adhesives, etc., best adapted to economical production as well as proper germination, the first machine being built in 1908. The first factory was started in Hinsdale, Ill., where the inventor, with his brother, David E. Gray, as a partner, began operations with six machines, but was compelled to suspend operations for lack of capital to proceed on an extensive scale.

Additional finances were interested, however, which resulted in the organization of the present company, and the plant was moved to Plano, Ill., and in 1916, transferred to Newark, the present establishment being a four-story building occupying several city lots. The upper floors are devoted to a fully equipped testing department, where under conditions the same as exist outdoors, seeds are germinated. The factory has a capacity of several thousands of packages daily, the height of its activity being reached during the autumn months. Seeds remaining on hand at the end of the season are destroyed. Official recognition has been given the company by the United States department of agriculture, which has installed one of the machines at the agricultural experiment station, Fort Collins, Colo., for testing and experimental purposes. A number of Texas onion growing plantations are also reported to have entered into an agreement with the company, whereby large quantities of their seed are shipped to the factory, taped and reshipped to them. In this connection it is claimed that seeds which under the old plan would plant but two acres, under the tape system, are sufficient for 22 acres.

Recently the company has been reorganized and new financial interests have taken hold of it. The present officers are A. B. Churchill, president and general manager; C. F. Hanser, vice president; E. J. Churchill, treasurer, and J. A. Burke, secretary and assistant general manager.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $2.25 to $3.00; celery, Michigan, box, 50 cents to $1.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 20 to 22½ cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $2.50; tomatoes, per box, 50 to 75 cents.

New York, Oct. 20.—Celery, per doz. roots, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $1.50 to $4.00; mushrooms, $1.00 to $3.50 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 20 cents; lettuce, per package, $1.00 to $5.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.50.

Late Potato Production.

Under the title, "Production of the Late or Main Crop of Potatoes," the United States department of agriculture has issued Farmer's Bulletin 1064, 40 pages with numerous illustrations and tables being devoted to the late potato crop which comprises about 85 per cent of the total production of this vegetable in the United States. The Bulletin gives much interesting information regarding soil requirements, crop rotation, preparation of the land, application of plant foods and their kinds, methods of applying commercial fertilizers, varieties to grow, time of planting, importance of good seed, seed disinfection and cutting, cultivation, spraying, harvesting and storage.

Celery Culture.

During the last few years great changes have taken place in celery culture. It is generally conceded that the bleaching of celery is the greatest drawback to its extensive cultivation, as this bleaching process entails a great deal of labor. Formerly, the early celery crop was almost universally bleached by the aid of lumber, boards 1x10x16 being commonly used. Some celery fields presented the appearance of lumber yards, rather than farms. But recently, owing to the great advance in cost of lumber, and also partly owing to the great scarcity of labor, lumber is losing ground and paper has taken its place. While we admit the utility of paper, we still believe a better grade of celery can be produced by using lumber in warm weather. When the summer heat is over, say October 1, in the northern states, ground should be used. Not only does ground produce the best celery, but it also is a great protection against hard frosts. Right here we wish to state that while green celery does stand hard freezing with apparently no injury, a perfectly bleached celery is easily ruined by frost. Therefore, as we approach colder weather, we should gradually use the soil instead of either lumber or paper.

Recently, there has been put upon the market a horse-drawn hiller that is a great success. It will do better work than can be done by hand, and it does it surprisingly fast and with ease; in fact, what used to be a dreadful job, is now a pleasure. Given a good team of horses, a hiller, and a nice field of celery, the bleaching process is very simple indeed. We have now reduced the culture of celery to a point where the marketing is the biggest job. Owing to the many difficulties encountered, the price of celery has advanced more than any other crop, we think; in other words, provided we go at it right, there is more money in celery to-day than there was 10 years ago.

MARKETMAN.

Vegetable Markets.

Markets were stronger and fairly active during the period October 14-21, as indicated by reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture, with western markets stronger than those in the east and producing sections fully meeting the demand. In potatoes, there were general gains of 10 to 25 cents per 100 pounds and markets at the close of the period held a firm tone. Northern sacked white stock strengthened to $2.20-$2.30 per 100 pounds at Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Michigan shipping points, f. o. b., and held about steady in consuming markets at a general jobbing range of $2.40-$2.75. Carlots were quoted at $2.20-$2.45 at Chicago. Sacked Minnesota Red River Ohios sold at $2.55-$2.65 f. o. b. at the close, and at $3-$3.50 in middlewestern jobbing markets, while southwestern markets quoted $3-$3.25 for small lots. New York round whites closed at $2.05-$2.27 f. o. b. sacked and ranged $2.05-$2.50 in consuming markets, weakening at New York, but strong elsewhere. Maine sacked Green Mountains advanced 25 cents, closing at $2.03 per 100 pounds bulk in producing sections and ranged about steady in consuming markets at $2.10-$2.25 in Boston and New York. Many consuming western onion markets gained 10 to 25 cents. Middlewestern yellow stock advanced 50 cents in Chicago, closing at $3.50-$4 per 100 pounds. Middlewestern red globes were active and stronger, closing at $3.75, sacked f. o. b. shipping points, and strengthened in leading terminal markets to $3.50-$4. Eastern sacked yellow stock, medium and large sizes, was firm with quiet movement at $3.25-$3.50, f. o. b. shipping points, and $3.50-$4 in eastern consuming markets. California yellow and brown stock advanced quite sharply to $4.15-$4.35 in Chicago and held about steady elsewhere at $3.75-$4, but reached $4-$4.50 in several eastern markets. New York Danish seed stock cabbage was dull at most shipping points closing weak at $28-$30 bulk per ton f. o. b. shipping points in western New York with sales for storage at $25. Jobbing sales in Philadelphia and Baltimore ranged $30-$35. Domestic stock weakened slightly to $17-$20 f. o. b. and $20-$25 in Philadelphia and Baltimore, but reached $38 in Cincinnati and strengthened to $2.75 per barrel in Pittsburgh, Minnesota Holland seed strengthened slightly, reaching $26-$27 bulk per ton f. o. b. shipping points and held nearly steady in Cincinnati at $35-$40, but strengthened to $28-$30 in Chicago and to $35-$42 in St. Louis.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—The San Diego Floral Association is still carrying on the work inaugerated two years ago of sending flowers to the wounded soldiers in the Camp Kearny hospital.

Seattle, Wash.

BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT CONTINUES.

There has been a better demand for cut flowers the past week, with the offerings confined to practically the same items as the week previous. Collections are especially good, say the dealers, and this is naturally reflected in the orders placed with the wholesalers. Ophelia roses and chrysanthemums have been the featured lines with most retailers, as they were assured of an ample supply of these offerings. Carnations in the colored varieties and some late gladioli have also been common. Pot snapdragons also seem to have caught popular favor with the result that the trade used more of these than in several weeks previous, and one dealer brought business with a window of indoor pansies and Cecile Brunner roses. The dahlias are just reaching the height of their season, and sales as a whole are announced as considerably in excess of the normal for this season of the year. One feature in which most dealers have profited has been the notable increase in travel to the Orient, more or less curtailed last year by war conditions. There were seven big liners leaving here between Septembr 15 and Octobr 15, and fancy baskets were in big demand. A favorite combination in the large baskets has been the use of Maple and Gold chrysanthemums and the autumn leaves which are coming in so highly colored. Another combination frequently used has been Columbia roses, lily of the valley and orchids. California shipments have been uncertain, as water deliveries are still held off by the strike, and the tunnel repairs have broken down several times so that chrysanthemums have been the principal item brought in. Golden Glow are being produced locally in large enough supply to satisfy the trade, and the same has been generally true of roses and dahlias.

NOTES.

The possibilities of handling dahlia bulbs for the retailer has been clearly shown here this past week by the display of Lilly & Company. This house had a showing of 125 varieties, arranged on long tables with saleswomen on hand to book the orders for bulbs, to be delivered later. Very heavy sales were noted.

Lena A. McCoy, proprietress of the shop by that name, announces that work is coming along satisfactorily on the new building at Second avenue and Marion streets, which this firm will occupy. In the meanwhile, splendid business is reported from the temporary location on Third avenue.

American Association of Nurserymen.

THE GOULD BILL.

Secretary John Watson, of the American Association of Nurserymen, has addressed the following communication to all members, October 15:

"Your attention is asked to the Gould Bill, (H. R. No. 5939). It is short; here it is:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the secretary of agriculture be, and is hereby, authorized to assemble, grow, and test plant material deemed desirable or suitable for use in propagating fruit, nut, and ornamental trees and other plants, for the purpose of determining stocks better adapted to the climate, soil and other conditions under which fruit, nut, and ornamental plants are grown.

"To establish and maintain mother orchards or plantations for the purpose of providing domestic sources of seeds, cuttings, or other propagating material in order that the future of the American fruit, nut, and ornamental plant interests may be insured and placed under domestic control, dependence for such stocks now being largely on foreign sources.

"To investigate methods of growing stocks, study methods of propagation and to encourage the propagation of fruit, nut, and ornamental trees and other plants in this country.

"Sec. 2. That there be, and is hereby, appropriated out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $30,000 for the purpose of carrying into effect the objects of this act, including the rental of lands, the purchase of equipment and supplies, the payment of rent, and the employment of such person or persons and means in the District of Columbia and elsewhere as the secretary of agriculture may deem necessary.

"The bill provides for tests and experiments to provide suitable and adequate supplies for home-grown seeds, seedlings and stocks for propagating purposes. Most things formerly imported, are now excluded. Many of those things can be and are being propagated here now. Other and needed things are not being grown here, and their production in suitable quality and in adequate supply has to be undertaken by way of experiment and therefore at expense, and it is doubtful if individual effort can be depended on for experiments of doubtful results and uncertain returns. And there are some other things still permitted entry, like fruit-tree seedlings and rose stocks, whose future supply is uncertain for two reasons: the possible further action of the federal horticultural board, and the attitude of the foreign growers. It is not to be imagined that the federal horticultural board may act hastily or arbitrarily, but the inclusion of stocks now permitted entry with those excluded, would be logical, and may possibly be considered necessary at some future date.

"At the international horticultural trades conference, held in Paris last month, the matter of our prohibition order was considered, and while no official action was taken, according to the published reports, still, we can conclude from facts and circumstances known, that American buyers will not get any stocks that can be sold to nurserymen elsewhere.

"We are embarrassed by our dependence on other countries for our seeds from which to grow fruit-tree seedlings. In the event of over-supply, we can buy seeds abroad, but we can safely assume that they will be available to us only after all other buyers have been supplied. In short, we are answered, in effect, that inasmuch as we refuse to permit other countries to sell us their ornamental stocks, they feel relieved of obligation to let us buy their fruit-tree stocks, until, of course, they have supplied all other markets open to them. These conclusions as to what we may expect, may be wrong. They are drawn from facts open to all of you, and you can decide if, in view of the present and probable future supplies of foreign seedlings available to you, it may not be wise to provide for home production of our raw materials.

"If the members of the association should be practically unanimous in asking for the passage of the Gould bill, we can probably secure favorable action.

"If you favor the bill, will you write to your congressman? Also to Hon. Norman J. Gould, M. C., who introduced the bill; and to Hon. Gilbert N. Haugen, chairman, house committee on agriculture, Washington, D. C. I shall be glad if you will write me also that, as your secretary, I may intelligently represent your views and wishes. A hearing before the committee having the bill under consideration, will be held very soon, and opportunity has been offered the association to be heard. Will you give this important matter the prompt attention that its urgency requires?

"The bill affects the nurserymen immediately, but in a much larger way, it affects the vast orchard interests of the country. I, therefore, urge each of you to bring it to the attention of your friends who may be prominent in local and state horticultural societies, fruit-growing associations and other bodies whose interests are affected.

Executive Secretary.

How to Keep the Greenhouse Heating System PERFECT This Winter

WHEN you start the heating system this winter you may find water dripping from small leaks or cracks in the boiler.

Putting off the repair may mean serious trouble later with heavy bills to face.

The proper thing to do is to pour "X" Liquid into the boiler now. This will repair the leaks and prevent new ones.

"X" is a marvelous liquid. When poured in the boiler it instantly combines with the water. In sizzling out through the leak or crack the "X" is changed by the oxygen in the air from a liquid into a solid, thus repairing the break.

The heat in the boiler then hardens this repair, making it as tough as metal, so that it will stand over 2,000 pounds pressure!

The surplus "X" being left in the system automatically stops all new leaks which may develop due to expansion or from other causes. In this way "X" makes the boiler (and in a hot water system, the entire system) LEAK-PROOF. Keep "X" always in the water and you will never have trouble from leaks, cracks, rust or scale.

"X" Eliminates Rust and Scale. Saves Coal.

"X" positively prevents all metal from pitting and rust. It eliminates scale in the boiler by chemically preventing the lime and other scale-forming matter in the water from crusting on the boiler walls. In this way "X" Liquid makes the boiler RUST-PROOF and SCALE-PROOF

Greenhouse owners who use "X" Liquid report a gratifying saving in coal and greatly increased heating efficiency.

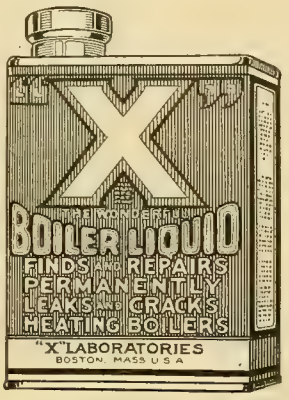
"X" Liquid is the surest and most economical method of repairing boilers. It is used by the United States Government, by thousands of apartment house owners, and is recommended by over 28,000 plumbers who use it regularly.

If you want to do the job yourself, get a can of "X" Liquid. Otherwise ask your plumber to do the job. His charges will be very reasonable.

The main thing is that "X" Liquid may save you thousands of dollars in an emergency. It is wise to keep "X" Liquid always on hand.

Unconditionally Guaranteed!

"X" will make good on any leaky or cracked boiler job—or we will return your money. You take no chances. "X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious substances. Beware of imitations which cannot do what the genuine "X" Liquid does.



1 Quart, $6 in the U. S. A.
2 Quarts, $10 in the U.S.A.
Get "X" Liquid from your steam-fitter—or we will ship direct, postage prepaid, on receipt of price.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Rambler Roses.

The wood of the several rambler roses that are to be forced should be well ripened up. Those that have been grown in the open ground should be lifted and potted. The pot-grown stock should be subjected to some freezing weather, but they should not be left out until the weather becomes severe enough to freeze the ground so that the pots become broken. A covering of leaves may be placed over the pots if the wood has not been thoroughly ripened, but they are better stored in deep pits or sheds, where the temperature may be kept just above the freezing point. The small twiggy wood should be cut out, leaving the strong canes, and these should be tied to a stake and kept erect. This will greatly reduce the labor when moving them and allow for closer packing when they are packed away and besides prevent the branches from lying on the ground and becoming soft or perhaps causing rot, if too damp. The stock that is lifted and potted should be given a rich rose soil and potted firmly, ramming the soil down hard with a wooden stick. All roses require a firm soil to get the best results. The baby ramblers can be carried into the houses and brought into bloom for Christmas. A temperature of 60 degrees to 65 degrees should produce plants with bloom if started at once.

Gladiolus Colvillei.

The winter blooming gladioli make a valuable addition to the late winter and spring flowers and are very useful as a cut flower or in all kinds of floral work. The blooms are much smaller than the Gladiolus Gandevensis and kindred kinds and can be artistically employed. The varieties grown are The Bride, white; Blushing Bride, white, tinged with pink, and Peach Blossom, light pink. The culture of these is very easy and by a succession of plantings the flowers may be had all through early spring up to June. The bulbs can be procured all at once and kept dry and cool, but do not leave them standing around in the room over the boiler or they will rapidly lose their vitality. They can be planted in deep flats and placed in an out-of-the-way location until they begin to grow, when they should be given a light location in a house with a temperature similar to that in which carnations are grown. The flowers will be larger and have more substance if grown cool, but it will take considerably longer to get them into bloom. Some growers plant these bulbs between the rows of the carnations or the violets, but our experience has been that it is far better to grow them in boxes by themselves, for the carnations will need all the nourishment in the soil if growing well, and if not, they as well as the violets when through blooming had better be cleaned out and some other crop planted and not have a crop mixed in, which would delay the planting or occupying of the space. These gladioli will be found very useful and well appreciated by the best trade.

Ferns.

A good stock of small ferns is a necessity at this season of the year to the florist having a retail trade, for the fern dishes will now be coming in to be refilled and this has become quite a feature of the business. While this branch of the trade is in many cases very unsatisfactory, yet it is greatly the fault of the dealer that it is so, and with a little care and method, can be made very remunerative and satisfactory to himself and his customers. In the first place a book should be kept giving the date when such customer's dish was filled, and above all things do not endeavor to buoy the customer up with any false hopes as to how long the dish will keep in good condition. In many cases the dish is placed on the center of the table 15 to 20 feet away from any light, the care left to domestics, and it may never be watered from the time it reaches the house until it is returned to be filled, and ofttimes the customers will say it was only a week or two since it was filled, when by reference to the book it will be found to have been two months. When the dish is returned make a note as to what varieties seem to have succeeded the best and use these in refilling. It is wonderful to note the effect on the different varieties in different houses. What will live and thrive in one house will often be the first to die in another. Have a few dishes put up ready for sale. It is often possible to make a sale when the customer sees them all ready, though he might not wait to have one made up or would never think of it unless his attention was drawn to it. Besides the ferns, have a good stock of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri in small pots; these will often grow where ferns will not live at all. And also a fine lot of small palms, cocos and kentias, and small dracænas for the centers of the fern dishes.

Violets.

The temperature of both night and day have now become settled enough to keep the violet houses in the best growing condition, and the plants should have made a strong, healthy growth, and be producing blooms of good quality. The first sign of disease will sometimes make its appearance as early as the first of November, yet it ordinarily does not show up until later in the year during the dark, dull weather. All leaves which show disease should be picked off at once, and if there should be any great amount making its appearance, run the plant a little dry, and under no circumstances allow moisture to remain on the foliage over night. Water only on bright days and then early in the morning. Give all the air possible during the day, and if the disease continues raise the temperature a little at night and do not open the houses quite as much or as early in the morning. A little warmer temperature will induce a new root action, and if this takes place the plant will begin to make a new growth and the disease will disappear. The disease only makes any great headway while the plants are not growing, for when "the elegant spring," as one grower always used to express it, comes, the plants take on new vigor and the disease is no more. As soon as the plants begin to grow, the temperature can be dropped to normal for the culture of these plants, which should be about 40° at night. Be careful in removing the leaves not to disturb the plants any more than necessary. Do not pull them off carelessly, but pinch them off with the thumb and forefinger.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Newell's $10,000 Shop, Kansas City, Mo.

The accompanying illustration is of a section of the beautiful new flower shop of A. Newell, the well-known florist of 1122 Grand avenue, Kansas City, Mo., no expense having been spared to make it one of the most complete and attractive establishments in the country, its cost being in the neighborhood of $10,000. As to how well Mr. Newell has succeeded in his aim, is best evidenced by the many compliments he has received from travelers who have visited all sections of the country. An interesting fact in connection with this establishment is that its owner entered the retail florist business 30 years ago, his first store, complete as to stock and fixtures, representing an investment of $48. Mr. Newell should be justly proud of his achievement.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

Now that the dahlias and other outside stock are out of the way, there should be a most careful supervision of the greenhouse supply, as prices stiffen very perceptibly when this competition is out of the way. Chrysanthemums are now at their height, and will rule the market until the final rush of Thanksgiving week. They are popular with nearly all flower lovers and appropriate with artistic arranging for all kinds of floral designing or decorative work. They can be featured in so many different ways, and are so attractive in themselves, that they should form a large part of the cut flower stock in every store. They are very largely used in decorations and in baskets and bouquets for the coming out teas. There are frequently a great number of orders for a popular young debutante, often as high as 25, or more, and some of the large firms have had as many as 100. Each of these should be made as distinctive as possible; 10 to 15, or even more, may be made of yellow chrysanthemums, yet each can have a distinguishing mark, if only at the ribbon, such as a large bunch of single or double violets, of white or pink bouvardia, or a cluster of smaller chrysanthemums of the same or different shades of color. Sprays of highly colored croton leaves are rich looking. Fancy nephrolepis also gives a good finish. A knot of pansies is attractive or bunch of Sweetheart roses. Snapdragon and calendulas are effective. As long as the highly colored autumn leaves are procurable, they can be used to the greatest advantage. Green and golden privet sprays are also valuable.

Vase baskets and hampers are largely used, being filled with combinations of all kinds of cut flowers, foliage and flowering plants. While there is no rule or standard of arrangement, color effects should be harmonious. Baskets that are a bit passe, can be covered with a fancy mat, which is ornamented with a band and bow of ribbon or chiffon. The tone of mats and ribbons should be such as to blend or contrast agreeably with the colors of the flowers. Some very pretty baskets are seen, made of mats hand painted, tied over skeleton baskets, fitted with fibre, or waxed card board vases. When filled, these are choice enough to command very good prices. Be careful to write on each card envelope, the name of the flowers used in the bouquet or basket, it is a great help to the hostess in the acknowledgment.

At all between-times, or slack hour or two, the making up of the various styles of Christmas wreaths should go on. In many stores, this work is well out of the way, the stock limit having been reached, but where this preparedness has not yet been completed, it is better to do it now, than in the midnight hours of the busy holiday season.

It will pay to look after the violet bunches. Most of these are sold in corsages to wear. The growers can be educated to put them up so they require no further handling. Small green galax leaves make a good backing, worked in just below the violet border leaves, keeping them in place and making the bunches look much larger. Prepared ribbon ties or a stock of plain ribbons, cut the right length, are economical. To cut ribbon by guess work, and attach as the flowers are sold, is often wasteful. Very effective moisture shields can be made of folded wax paper, which are held in place by the foil and ribbon and concealed by the flowers.

Keep the show windows up to their greatest efficiency; they make a silent appeal to almost every passerby. There should invariably be some special feature. It need not always be elaborate, but should be an interesting something, a little out of the ordinary, or with a finish that makes it stand out, sure to catch the eye. An explanatory card is certain to be read and remembered.

FLORAL DECORATIONS AT BANQUET OF THE GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BALTIMORE.

PARTIAL VIEW OF ARTHUR NEWELL'S NEW $10,000 STORE, KANSAS CITY, MO.

Feature a window of chrysanthemums, vases containing several of each variety in stock, all correctly labeled. They are sure to attract attention. Small vase baskets, filled with pompons, and a medium sized flower or two, in contrasting colors, will make an attractive showing. A price card will keep them on the move.

Well flowered pot plants of chrysanthemums are good stock at this time. Grouped in front of the store, they give a fine decorative effect, and will be found very salable. On a busy day, they are frequently cut off and sold for as much as on the pots.

Peppers and Jerusalem cherries are now in good color, and make acceptable pot plants. The first of the cyclamens are in, and a few of the begonias. All these should be featured with some kind of covering for the pots. Nothing is better or cheaper than white paper, with a tie of tape the color of the flower. It makes the plants look larger, and by contrast with the white paper, brightens the flowers.

Have you joined the ranks of the big men, who are endeavoring to elevate the business by means of publicity? They are putting in thousands of dollars annually to make flowers more popular, and create a greater demand that will benefit every branch of the business. Send your $5 or $10 and become a factor in this great uplifting movement. Send it to Secretary John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York. Do it today, and get your name on the honor roll.

Figuring the Profits.

How to deal fairly with his customers and at the same time, get all the profit possible out of his business, is the problem of the average retail florist. The one man shop, in which all the transactions are handled by the proprietor, or one or more of his family, has very little overhead expense. In most of such shops, the business is carried on at the house where the proprietor lives, in which case, he is on the job all the time, and has nobody to blame but himself if anything goes wrong. Such a personally conducted business should show the greatest percentage of profit on the gross amount done, as there is so little expense.

Where there is a larger business, with store rents, a number of employes, delivery and other expensive departments, very careful figuring and close watch on the overhead is necessary in order to close up each week or month showing a profit. There should be a weekly tabulated balance sheet with a column for miscellaneous and each major item of expense, which on the footings, shows how the total that often seems so large, is made up. Another sheet divides the income into plant and cutflower sales, decorations and funeral work, giving the volume of business in each department.

It will be a surprise to many retailers to find that their overhead foots up to 50 per cent of their gross sales, costing them 50 cents out of every dollar to carry on their business. Those who fix their prices at a 2 to 1 basis, charging $1.00 for what costs 50c will, at the end of the year, find nothing over, as the 50 cents overhead charges eat up all of the 50 cents gross profits on the dollar sale. Their salary is then their only remuneration.

The only safe plan in handling stock as perishable as plants and flowers, is to fix a rate of from 2½ to 3 for one; that is, selling cut flower or plant stock that costs $1.00, for $2.50 or $3.00. The salesman should never in stating the price, convey, either in manner, or voice inflection, the idea that the price is other than regular. Some salesmen volunteer the information that flowers are very expensive now, which purchasers would not have thought of or did not have in mind. Many salespeople and, in fact, proprietors as well, have the idea that people will not pay advanced prices, judging solely by themselves, and not the circumstances of their customers. This is one of the fundamental mistakes of the retail business.

Plants and flowers, and, in fact, every article handled in the flower shop, must be sold at a profit, not based on the first cost or actual worth of the article itself, but with the overhead percentage added, which will be very close to 50 cents on every $1.00 worth sold. It is then safe to price the article costing $1.00, which the overhead marks up to $1.50, at $3.00, or what is called 3 to 1.

The percentage of stock that goes to waste in the flower shop is much greater than many dealers will acknowledge or in fact realize. If all plants, cut flowers, greens and other perishable stock that goes down the chute into the waste barrel was charged up as when sold, it would make a big addition to the overhead.

The greatest demand in the business is for funeral flowers, and here is where a cost system should be rigidly enforced. The correct plan is to select flowers to cost one-third of the amount of the order. These are then worked up. If the result is not satisfactory, then the frame (if a design) is too large, or not enough money has been obtained to get the desired effect.

In far too many stores, the procedure is to select the frame, pillow, wreath or other design, and "stab" away at it until it looks good enough. No account is taken of frame, moss, wire, cut flowers or foliage, ribbon, lettering, other materials or the time consumed. There is supposed to be a good profit, but just how much, or whether not enough, is not known, as no record has been made.

The accompanying cost sheet, originated and in use by the Miller Floral Company, Salt Lake City, Utah, is a model of efficiency. This can be made out and attached to the order by one who knows the stock on hand. The makerup selects the flowers designated, which are all used, leaving no waste. Under the head of miscellaneous, should be included such percentages of the overhead, as rent and advertising. With such a system, it will be seen there is a guaranteed net profit of nearly 100 per cent on every such piece of madeup work.

It is all very well to say, "I wouldn't be bothered with this detail; it takes too much time on a busy day," but the busy day is when it is most necessary, for then, "haste makes waste." No matter how busy the grocer, the sugar or coffee is weighed, not guessed at. Try this "penciling for profits" as used by the Miller Floral Company. Also, find out your overhead, and do not fail to count in a salary for yourself and others of your family; allow as much as could be obtained elsewhere for such services, all of which is to go into the overhead. This, added to the cost of the stock, makes a proper basis on which to figure out the selling prices, which will show not just a mere living, but a profit such as is the object and should obtain results in every business proposition.

Penn's Wedding Window Clever Feature.

The sight of seven attractive little girls, with the utmost dignity, taking part in a wedding ceremony, was the feature that attracted immense crowds to the windows of Penn, the Florist, Boston, Mass., during the week ended October 18. It was doubtless one of the most clever ideas in the form of window arrangements ever seen in this country. The window was beautifully arranged with lily of valley, Ophelia roses, chrysanthemums, orchids and various plants, palms, crotons, etc. There were also 24 fine photographs of 1919 brides. The pantomine marriage was under the direction of Mrs. Mabel Lyman, directress of the Stage Children of New England, and it was followed by a reception, as every marriage should be, held in the flower shop itself, at which the ("newly weds") and their attendants stood in line.

Henry Penn, unknown to many of his friends and business associates, was at the time attending the convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at Buffalo, N. Y., and celebrating, with Mrs. Penn, the twentieth anniversary of a most happy married life, the trip being in the nature of a second honeymoon.

The Button-Hole Bouquet.

Clark, The Florist, Scranton, Pa., sends us the following, which was spread over an entire page of the Daily Republican of that city, October 18:

"If you want to put a smile on your face, if you want to get jauntiness in your step, if you want to flout your fate with a devil-may-care, happy-go-lucky, never-a-worry-or-care attitude, put a flower in your buttonhole!

"You may be down at the mouth and out at the heel, you may have all the trials and tribulations in the world weighing on your shoulders, your spirits may stand at about forty degrees below zero, and you may be wishing you'd never been born, but try this scheme once—stick a flower in your buttonhole and watch yourself perk up and take notice and veer around quick to a livelier, happier frame of mind.

"You'll find the posey not only has a rejuvenating, invigorating effect upon yourself but also upon your friends and acquaintances. Your old pal may have a grouch on and feel like speaking testily to you, but how can anyone speak testily to a man who feels so chipper, so gay and festive and happy as to wear a flower in his buttonhole? How can dreary gloom settle over an office when from the buttonhole of one of the men a saucy, impudent, dainty little flower is singing: 'This is a merry, merry world and we all should be mighty happy to be in it?'

"Put a flower in your buttonhole today—almost any old flower will do, even an artificial affair might do in a pinch and even help the cause along. But get a flower now and put it in your buttonhole and join the ranks of the forward-looking, happy-hearted individuals who are heartily glad to be alive."

Thorley in Politics.

Charles Thorley, the well known florist of Fifth avenue and 46th street, New York, whose business ability is unquestioned, recently gave an interview to a representative of the Evening Telegram of that city which occupied one column in its issue of October 27. Mention was recently made in our New York notes of Mr. Thorley's political activities. If he can turn Tammany hall into a business organization, he will have done a great service for the city. We quote the following extracts from his interview:

Politics His Hobby.

He is going to retire to enter politics, not for himself, but in the interest of Robert L. Moran, who is running for re-election as president of the board of aldermen. He has no political aspirations for himself and is only in politics for the recreation he gets out of it. As he so aptly puts it:—"Some men like golf and get their pleasure on the links; I like politics, and get my pleasure helping my friends."

"The mistake of a street car driver—we had horses in those days dragging the cars—was the luckiest thing that ever happened in my life. "A man followed me on the car and asked for a light from my cigar. I asked him what his business was and he said he was in real estate. I thought he was bluffing and told him so. The driver of the car became so interested in our conversation that he forgot to get out and turn the switch, and instead of turning down Seventh avenue, the way we should have gone, we started over Forty-second street.

"I looked up and saw a sign that said the property on which the Times building now stands was to rent and I told my new found companion to lease it. The next day he came to my shop and told me he had made an engagement with the man who owned the property, and I signed the lease shortly afterward at a low figure.

"Purple Roses."

"My real start in life was made when I happened to see another "For Rent" sign hanging over an abandoned florist shop in Fourteenth street. I didn't know a purple rose from a red violet in those days, but I took a chance and rented the store and put in a stock of flowers. "My first order was from a wealthy man who wanted a $250 bunch of flowers sent to the reigning stage favorite. From then on I knew I was going to stick in the florists' game. As I opened the door the first day, a nervy young kid walked in just behind me and said he was going to be my office boy. I hired him. He is still with me after 46 years of faithful service.

"And now, after 46 years of business, I am going to retire, but I'm not going to really retire. I'm just going to turn my florist business over to my faithful employes and sit back and really enjoy seeing them succeed.

Florist Telegraph Delivery Association.

LOST AND DAMAGED GOODS RESOLUTION.

The following resolution, presented by J. C. Harper, of the A. W. Smith Stores Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., and unanimously adopted at the annual convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at Buffalo, N. Y., October 15, was inadvertantly omitted from our report of the meeting:

"Whereas, the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association has been established upon the broad foundation of fair dealing; and

"Whereas, it is the conviction of this association that the same spirit of fair dealing should prevail also in such transactions in which the wholesaler-grower and supply house are a party; and

"Whereas, in transactions where goods are entrusted to a transportation company, and where such goods are lost or damaged, it has been the custom for the shipper to disclaim responsibility after delivery to such transportation company, resulting in the purchaser alone having to sustain all loss; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that this association record its conviction that the following agreement be insisted upon in all transactions involving delivery to transportation companies:

"'Lost or Damaged Goods Agreement.'

"'The purchaser and seller, in the transaction, agree that in case of loss or damage of the goods while in the hands of the carrier, a joint claim will be filed with said carrier, the bill to be paid upon adjustment by carrier. Should claim be disallowed, in whole or in part, then loss, inclusive of carrier's charges and costs of collection, to be borne equally by purchaser and seller.' And be it further

"Resolved, that all members of this association be furnished with a copy of this resolution, and be requested to use every effort to enforce the provisions of said agreement."

Aster Beetle.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please give us the most effective way to control the black aster beetle, which eats the buds and flowers.

Illinois. H. D. K.

The only really successful remedy against the black aster beetle we know of is careful spraying with a poisonous mixture, such as arsenate of lead or Paris green. The objection to both of these is a slight discoloring of the flowers, but this seems unavoidable. These bugs are ravenous feeders, and very little poison will put them out of business. The proper way is to have a high presure sprayer, and apply the poison in a very fine mist, and with evenness all over the patch. Very often, one application will be sufficient.

These beetles generally come flying from other parts, and one visitation is often all we get. This year, we had such a case on hand, and as quickly as we noticed them at one corner in the field, we hand picked them early in the morning, and saw no more. In this section, the tarnished plant bug is the great aster pest. This little mischief is as sly as a fox, and many a man has never even suspected him of doing any damage. He punctures the young growth just below the buds and causes wilting, with discoloration, crippled growth, and often, total destruction. We spray every few days during bud formation, using a nicotine spray, aiming to chase the pests out of the field. MARKETMAN.

NEPHROLEPIS MACAWII AT MACAW BROS., NORWOOD, PA.
House Containing 40,000 Young Plants, Together with Finished Specimens.

Nephrolepis Macawii.

There is no one plant in which the trade generally is more interested than the Boston fern and its numerous and steadily increasing list of sports or varieties. As far back as the time of the introduction of the Scottii Mr. Scott offered the stock to Henry A. Dreer, Inc. J. D. Eisele conferred with his heads of departments, and they all thought, that while the variety seemed meritorious, had a good dwarf habit, etc., there were now so many new forms coming into the market, they could not see their way clear to buy it. Mr. Scott then sent it out himself, and the first year the Dreer firm paid him more money for their purchases, than his original price for the entire stock.

There have been many promising sports that have come since that time. Most have gone, a very few remain. Teddy, Jr., is one that ranks with Scottii, which two are now the leading varieties in all commercial collections. The old Boston is still largely grown, as are several of the feathered varieties, and others with crinkled fronds.

The latest introduction is a sport from Scottii, in which the fronds are regularly crimped, or indented across their surface, in a manner similar to the varieties Harrisii and Theodore Roosevelt. This is a true sport, being identical in every other respect, such as habit of growth, length of frond, and general symmetry of the finished specimens in all sizes. Each frond remains free and separate, admitting light and air to the center of the plant. This variety originated with Macaw Bros., Norwood, Pa., three years ago, and has been named Macawii. It is being sent out this season, and has attracted the attention of all commercial growers as being a plant of undoubted merit. It received honorable mention at the trade exhibition of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., where orders were received for over 15,000 plants.

Macaw Bros. have become noted as fern specialists, being particularly successful with Scottii, their finished stock in all sizes being the choice of the market. Their range is a model of efficiency, comprising eight houses, each 36x150 feet. These extend at right angles, either side of a commodious brick shed, to which each house is connected with a glass corridor eight feet in length. The houses are eight feet apart, insuring an abundance of light with no dark corners. They also have side ventilation. The shed, 25 feet in width, 12 feet in height, with a cement floor and tables on the sides, is an ideal work shop, there being an abundance of room for packing and loading their large auto trucks, etc. The grounds consist of 13 acres, bordered on one side by the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, connected with which is a siding for coal.

A house just finished, 36x150 feet, is divided in the center, and separately piped. This is intended for forcing roses. It is now entirely filled with ferns, one half of which will later, at a lower temperature, hold their stock of Easter roses sufficient to fill the whole house when they are so far advanced as to be spread out.

Such intensive use of space prevails by various methods in all the houses. One filled with asparagus in the ground, grown for sprays, is canopied well above, with large ferns, which finish on posts, there being six rows the length of the house. In all the other houses, which are filled with ferns on benches, pedestals are used, and much stock is grown in pots, hanging to the roof supports.

After Chrysanthemums.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly advise me as regards following early chrysanthemums with a bench of asters? I will have considerable empty space and would like to grow something out of the ordinary. What would you suggest? I have some fine plants of delphinium in the field. Could these be brought in and planted this fall to bloom this winter and what would be the proper treatment?

Indiana. F. C. A.

This inquiry is a problem that is confronting many of the growers who have their bench space occupied with chrysanthemums, and what is the most profitable crop to follow them up with depends greatly on the kind of establishment under consideration. A grower whose place is devoted entirely to the production of cutflowers, has not such a wide range of material to choose from as the man who is so situated that he can handle pot plants successfully. There is an increasing demand for pot plants in bloom, and the grower who is quick to grasp the opportunity, and uses judgment in the kind of plants he devotes his space to, growing them well, has no reason to have his bench space vacant very long, because a great many of the plants for winter and spring sales are in waiting to fill the benches now occupied by the chrysanthemums. But the grower of cut flowers exclusively, who for one reason or another cannot see his way clear to take up pot plant growing, has to be very careful in the kind of plants he follows up his chrysanthemums with.

When considering this important question, it is well to take into account whether the stock to be produced will come into competition or be used for a similar purpose, as one of the standard varieties of cut flowers. Asters are mentioned as a crop out of the ordinary to follow up the chrysanthemums, but it must be borne in mind that under the best of conditions not much can be expected from them before early spring, because of slowness of growth during the dark days of winter, therefore, they will come in at a time when roses and carnations are of the best quality, as well as being at the height of their production, so that to be profitable the asters will have to be out of the ordinary, both as to quality of flowers and colors, but this will of course depend on how thoroughly their culture is gone into. There is getting to be a brisk demand for cut flowers of annuals of good keeping qualities, especially late in the winter and early spring, the public seeming to favor them as forerunners of the outdoor spring flowers.

Delphiniums can be flowered under glass, but the large clumps from the field are not so good for this purpose as are young, well-established, transplanted plants from spring sown seed, or those that have been potted, and are now well established in 4-inch pots. The best varieties to grow are Bella Donna and chinense, both blue and white, but when considering the growing of delphiniums, it should be borne in mind that the flowers are rather frail for shipping and not very good keepers after being cut.

The most important factor in the indoor culture of all perennial plants is to first encourage them in every way by natural growing conditions to become thoroughly root established in the soil and not treat them to a high temperature before this has been accomplished. They require the best fresh soil that can be obtained. That which is in the benches, having been used for the growing of the chrysanthemum crop, will not do for them at all. Let the plants have a freezing outside, and get thoroughly ripe before bringing inside. It is useless to try to hurry these plants, and will only result in failure. After being planted on the benches, water very sparingly and maiatain a low temperature of about 40 degrees until new growth starts, then it can gradually be raised and more water given, so that by the time the plants are in full growth, a night temperature of 50-52 degrees and a day temperature of 56 degrees is being carried. They need the lightest house than can be given them and will not do well under shady or dark conditions. Particularly close attention must be given to the work of keeping the plants free from insects, and do not crowd the plants. Allow them plenty of room so that the light and air can circulate freely all around them.

Among other perennials that can be grown successfully under glass, especially when well established pot plants can be obtained, are Coreopsis lanceolota grandiflora, centaurea (hardy corn flowers), gaillardia, rudbeckia, Scabiosa caucasica, Saxifraga umbrosa, stokesia, Veronica rosea, erica, Anthemis tinctoria and the anchusias.

Referring again to the annuals, many of which can be grown to follow the chrysanthemums with greater assurance of success than the asters. First, there are the calendulas, which are now grown in large quantities, Calliopsis coronata maxima, candytuft. Centaurea cyanus, clarkia, lupinus, the bush escholtzia, snapdragons and the Gypsophila elegansa grandiflora alba and rosea. The seed of these plants should be sown at once, then when the plants are large enough to safely handle, pot them up into 2-inch pots, and as soon as they become thoroughly rooted, transfer them to their permanent quarters in the benches where they are to flower. There must not be any check in their growth at any time. This is one of the reasons for potting them from the seed boxes instead of transplanting them. The pot grown plants will also start off better and make a more sturdy growth than transplanted plants from flats. The plants should be given sufficient room in the benches to grow without crowding, and their routine care ought to be as natural as possible without any forcing. The temperature of the carnation house (48-50 degrees at night and 54-56 degrees on cloudy days with a rise of 10 degrees during days of bright sunshine), is best suited for them. As also advised for the perennial plants, strict attention must be given to keeping these plants free from insects.

PLANTS TO FOLLOW CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The grower who is situated so that he can handle pot plants conveniently, has a wide range of stock to select from to fill up his benches after the chrysanthemums are out of the way. When spring bedding plants are grown, a great deal of the space must be used to accommodate them, but any spare space can be devoted to growing pot plants, which when grown well, are in great demand. The French hydrangeas are among the best of plants for this purpose. These are becoming more popular each year, and deservedly so, for when well grown, are beautiful subjects for sale as pot plants. Then we still have the old favorite, Hydrangea Otaksa, which when well done, with its large trusses of blooms, is in good demand. But to turn out high grade plants of these or any other variety of plants, they must have plenty of bench space. After the chrysanthemums are out of the way, the hydrangeas can be placed on the bench, held cool and on the dry side for a few weeks, until it becomes necessary to start them into more active growth. Young plants of these hydrangeas now in 3-inch pots, grown along slowly, make splendid dwarf plants for medium price sales at Easter. They can now be purchased from the plantsmen who grow them as a specialty and delivered before the very cold weather sets in.

Growers who have tried them, are finding an increasing demand for high grade plants of geraniums, which sell for a dollar up, according to their size. Some of the bench space left vacant after the chrysanthemum can be used for growing these plants, which, when well done, will sell at a good profit.

A great deal of bench space can be utilized for the growing of pot roses, especially the polyantha or baby rambler varieties. These can be grown into fine specimens, which sell readily. A great number of these plants are grown every year, and may not come under the term of "out of the ordinary," but they are worthy subjects for any grower's efforts, and bring good returns. The same can be said of all well grown pot plants, and many times small sizes of the most popular plants, including the different varieties of nephrolepis, can be bought at this season of the year to follow the chrysanthemums and grown on into very profitable stock. National Publicity for Flowers.

Our publicity committees and all connected with our campaign are fully convinced of the latent interest on the part of florists in our publicity work, an interest which only needs awakening to make forthcoming the support we so urgently need at the present time. They are also quite sure that among those who have already subscribed, are to be found many who could influence their brothers in the trade to rally to the campaign standard. To such, the following letter might furnish a suggestion: "Office of Charles A. Dards, Inc., New York, October 16, 1919.—To Albert Pochelon, 153 Bates St., Detroit, Mich. Dear Mr. Pochelon: Won't you kindly accept the enclosed cheque for $50 in connection with the Florists Telegraph Delivery Association's national publicity fund, this to be considered as a separate contribution to any contract we may have already. Henry Penn and wife, of Boston, Mass., who have just returned from the convention, have only this minute left the store, and Mr. Penn's personality, enthusiasm and good fellowship, so worked on my personal feeling, that it behoved me to immediately show my appreciation in the above matter. Cordially yours, H. C. Perry, General Manager."

Commenting upon the letter, Mr. Pochelon says: "Mr. Perry, of Dards', is not different from a good many other retailers—they are feeling the benefits daily, and believe that it is their duty to do more, or, at least, do as much as they can."

A just appreciation of the work of the campaign is the only reward expected for the labor of those engaged in it, and could any appreciation be shown better than in support to our project? A florist who fails to subscribe to the campaign fund is really failing to promote his own interests. Everyone in the trade is benefiting from the publicity we are securing, and the more we are able to secure, the greater the benefit resulting. Our committees spend as they go, therefore, must, if the campaign is to last, have money wherewith to keep on going. Our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," should remain for all time before the public, continuously. There should be no halt. Were subscriptions to stop, the work would have to be materially curtailed, and the present improved demand for flowers would necessarily decline. No real florist would want this to happen—it would be a calamity. To prevent it, and to enable the committees to fully carry out their plans, there should be an end to latent interest, and the many hundreds of florists—we could say thousands—who know in their hearts that the campaign is of immense benefit to our industry should lose no time in registering their subscriptions with the secretary. Making a subscription entails no sacrifice, for there is hardly a florist in the country who cannot afford one, and it should be considered a duty and a pleasure to support an undertaking which is productive of so much good to growers and retailers alike.

Florists who advertise locally, can have material assistance in their work, and connect in a profitable way with our magazine advertising, by using the various helps supplied by our promotion bureau. Pamphlets describing these aids will be mailed to anyone on application for them. It might be mentioned here that the advanced cost of labor and materials have obliged our promotion bureau to advance the price of the large electrotyped advertisements to $1.25 each, which is actual cost on quantity purchases.

A CORRECTION.

Two weeks ago we published a list or more each, aggregated one-seventh of the publicity fund as then collected. of the Publicity Fund as then collected. We gave the list as of 25 florists, but only 24 names were printed, the name of Schiller The Florist. Chicago, $200, being accidentally omitted. Another name omitted was that of The Jos. H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., $200, which would have made 26 names to the list instead of 25. The correction is made with due apology for the omissions.

Baltimore Florists' Annual Social Event.

DELIGHTFUL EVENING ENJOYED BY MANY.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, Md., and the trade in general in that vicinity are feeling a marked impetus in popularity as the result of that organization's annual banquet which far outshone any previous efforts, both in attendance and general excellence even to the smallest detail. Many ideas have been tried in the past to accomplish a change from the old order of things, the nearest being the banquet held about eight years ago at Mt. Holly Inn, but nothing has ever resulted in so much favorable comment as did the banquet, entertainment and dance held in the Southern Hotel ball room on the above date. The success of the affair can be attributed to no special person, wherein lies the secret. The co-operation manifested was the most pleasing thing of all. Wm. F. Ekas, the chairman of the entertainment committee, and Robt. L. Graham, Jr., chairman of the decorating committee, were never refused a request for time or material, and were admirably assisted by every member of the committees to a man. Mr. Ekas arranged the preliminaries, ably assisted by his committee. When the day came for the decorating, it proved a very simple matter for the chairman of this committee, for Samuel Feast had cheerfully taken charge of the table work, and George Black willingly agreed to superintend the arrangement of the hall, and the rest of the committee, working all day, made the ball room a veritable garden of flowers. The accompanying photograph gives some idea of the seating arrangement, and the following headlines in the daily papers show how the public was informed of the doings of the florists: Baltimore News—"Mayor Broenning dubbed 'Say It With Flowers' Broenning" by florists at most beautiful banquet ever held in city." Baltimore American—"Southern hotel ball room a veritable fairyland of flowers at florists' banquet." Baltimore Sun—"Mayor praises elaborate decorations at banquet of florists' club in southern hotel."

There were 142 representative florists present, which shows the interest everybody took in seeing that the attendance was large. The congeniality shown, the presence of the ladies, and the music furnished by the orchestra, made an occasion long to be remembered by all present. Wm. E. McKissick, who took the place of one of the members of the entertainment committee, prevented from working by illness gave valuable assistance in seating the guests, and was greatly complimented in placing each person next to someone who would make him feel at home. The programme opened with prayer by Dr. Bayless, and after the banquet, President Ekas welcomed the guests. After the singing of "Baltimore, our Baltimore," by the entire assembly, Mayor Broenning responded to the toast, "Baltimore." Hobart Smock, the well known entertainer, was present, and rendered a selection, after which everybody sang "Smiles," followed by some remarks about "Smiles" by Rev. David Carson Bayless, commonly known as the "smile captain of Camp Lee." After a monologue by Mr. Smock and another song by the assembly, Robt. Craig, of Philadelphia, Pa., spoke on "The Ladies." A few well-chosen remarks were made by Z. D. Blackistone, president of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., and Edmund Harvey, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. Wallace Pierson, of Comwell, Conn., spoke on "Publicity," after which the floor was cleared, and dancing was enjoyed for the rest of the evening.

The following guests were present: From Washington—Z. D. Blackistone, Otto Bauer, O. A. C. Oehmler, James Westcott, W. H. Ernst, A. E. Gude, George Dalglish, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schnell. From Philadelphia—Edmund Harvey, Robt. Kift, F. J. Michell, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Niessen and Rob Craig. From Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Chas. L. Siebold. From Cromwell, Conn.—Wallace Pierson. These were welcomed by a ladies' reception committee, composed of Miss Margaret Graham, chairman; Mrs. Wm. E. McKissick, Mrs. Isaac H. Moss, Mrs. Fred G. Burger, Mrs. Wm. Johnston, Mrs. Fred Bauer, Mrs. L. Beuttner, Miss Ethel Sieck, Miss Stevenson and Miss Lillian Bryant. The entertainment or committee of arrangements, consisted of Wm. F. Ekas, chairman; Isaac H. Moss, Fred Bauer, Chas. M. Wagner, Robt. L. Graham, Jr., Albert G. Fiedler and Wm. E. McKissick. The decorating committee was Robt. L. Graham, Jr., chairman; Chas. F. Feast, George Black, Robt. W. Johnston, George Eberle, Albert G. Fiedler and Harry Wagner.

The Late Mrs. Emma W. Lanham.

Mrs. Emma W. Lanham, widow of Truman Lanham, former superintendent of parks, Washington, D. C., and mother of the present superintendent, Ira Clifford Lanham, died recently at her home in Lanham, Md. She was 74 years of age. Death was due to an ailment of the heart. Mrs. Lanham was the daughter of Charles Edward and Mary Morsell Walker. Her husband was superintendent of parks in Washington for 30 years, the great majority of the 100,000 trees which beautify the city, being planted under his supervision.

The Late Mrs. Eva Pollworth.

Mrs. Eva Pollworth, widow of John Pollworth, and a resident of Milwaukee, Wis., for 70 years, died at her late residence in that city October 26, age 78 years. She was the mother of C. C. Pollworth, of the firm of C. C. Pollworth & Co., well known wholesale florists of that city, and Joseph E. Pollworth, of Chicago. Mrs. Pollworth was an honorary member of the Old Settlers' Club of Milwaukee, and her passing brings sorrow to a host of friends.

PAPER WHITE NARCISSUS flowers are 75 cents a dozen, wholesale, at New York, $12.00 per 100 at Chicago.

IT is a strange fact that the farmer is so rough and careless with his high priced tractors, and so gentle and careful with his automobile, worth only one-half to one-third as much.

PRODUCTION of bituminous coal during the week ended October 11, was 11,924,000 tons, 311,000 tons increase over the first week in the month, the best previous week. Anthracite production totalled 1,955,000 tons, a gain of 1.8 per cent over the preceding period.

New York Botanical Garden.

An exhibition will be given by the New York Botanical Garden in cooperation with the Horticultural Society of New York, November 8-10, at the time of the opening of the new general display house given to the Botanical Garden by Daniel and Murry Guggenheim. Schedules are now ready for distribution, and may be had by application to the Director-in-Chief, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, New York City.

International Trade Conference.

At the international trade conference, having for its object the re-establishment of normal trade relations between this country and Europe, which was held at Atlantic City, N. J., opening October 27, the Society of American Florists was ably represented by President J. F. Ammann, President-elect A. L. Miller, Secretary John Young, George Asmus and Wm. F. Gude, who interviewed the treasurer of the national chamber of commerce and also Chairman Hancar of the Belgium delegation. No definite action was taken. Chairman Hancar said he might take up the matter of the embargo with his king, who is at present in Washington, D. C., and that he expected to meet with the various delegations the latter part of the week, when it was hoped something will be done in the way of a direct protest from the Belgian government to those in authority in the United States, to relieve the situation.

LARGE SUPPLY AND ROCK-BOTTOM PRICES.

Business has been good; in fact, unusually so, but the stocks are so large that prices are at rock bottom. American Beauties, roses, chrysanthemums, dahlias and carnations are all in heavy supply and it is impossible to move them all at list figures. Outdoor flowers are still arriving, which helps to keep prices at a low level. The visit of the king and queen of Belgium to this city was the big event of the week, and quantities of flowers were used in their honor. The supply was so large, that those used were never missed. The University of Pittsburgh and Georgia Tech football game, October 25, caused a big demand for yellow chrysanthemums, but there was plenty for every one. The supply of American Beauties has shortened, which is a good thing, as the demand is light. Chrysanthemums are in heavy supply, in any color or size desired. All roses are also in heavy supply, with only a few of the best cleaning up at the list prices, the balance going in job lots at most any figure. Carnations are now a factor, and are improving in quality every day. Orchids are now plentiful, and meet with ready sale. Dahlias are a drug on the market, and it will be a good thing when they are done. Snapdragons, calendulas and sweet peas are now coming in, but the quality is not of the best. Pompons are arriving in large quantity, but are as popular as ever and clean up daily.

NOTES.

Edward Earl Ludwig, son of E. C. Ludwig, and junior member of the firm of E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., and Miss Jane McDanial, of Wilkinsburg, were married October 18, in the First Presbyterian church of Wilkinsburg. Large quantities of chrysanthemums were used in the decorations.

GOOD DEMAND DESPITE HIGHER PRICES.

Business continues excellent, leaning largely at present to festive events, for, notwithstanding the high cost of living, society is beginning to find itself in need of almost daily entertainment. A great many weddings are on the calendar, and these are helping to no little extent in the general demand for good flowers. The growers find sales for all the stock they can cut. On all sides, there is complaint regarding the extremely advanced prices asked for imported bulbs, now two and three times higher than in former years. White narcissi are now bringing $1 per dozen; the yellow varieties, $1.25. Five and 10-cent stores are offering Paper Whites at 30 cents per dozen, and the quality does not seem much below the higher priced stock. They naturally meet with ready sale. Chinese lilies are selling at 25 cents each. The weather has been mild, and the dahlias are gorgeous in their magnificence, being used for all occasions. Chrysanthemums have at last come into good flower, and the best return from $4 to $6 per dozen. Roses are plentiful, especially Russell and Columbia, which are now seen in great perfection. They range from $3 to $6 per dozen. Everywhere one hears remarks regarding the greatly expanded payroll—three times greater than before the war.

NOTE.

The Joy Floral Co. has some fine cypripediums, as well as quantities of excellent roses. Thomas H. Joy, of this firm, has returned from a two weeks' trip to New York, Philadelphia and other cities.

M. C. D.

MADISON, N. J.—Wm. W. Vert, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, is now well established here in a commercial way, with roses and chrysanthemums as specialties.

WEST MENTOR, O.—The Carl Hagenburger Co. has purchased the New York Central greenhouses here and will use them for cold storage purposes during the winter, removing the range to the firm's well established business on Hart street in the spring. At present, the houses are filled with French hydrangeas and other Christmas and Easter stock.

USUAL FALL BRISKNESS LACKING.

While business has shown considerable improvement, the buying has not as yet assumed usual fall proportions. There has been considerable funeral work and flowers for the social season which has started are in good demand. Chrysanthemums are arriving in larger numbers and pompons of many colors and varieties are seen but prices are high. There is an oversupply of carnations and the quality is good. Roses show excellent form and violets are good.

NOTES.

Fred B. Wallace will specialize in hybrid tea roses next spring, distributing the stock to rose fanciers in this city and vicinity. He read an interesting paper on "Rose Culture" at the meeting of the local rose society last week.

George Kramer has begun work on birch-bark baskets and other novelties. In addition to the local demand, he has orders from Buffalo, Detroit and Cleveland firms.

Horace J. Head of Hart & Vick's staff assisted in arranging the decorations for the Prince of Wales during his visit in Canada.

George T. Boucher will stage a chrysanthemum show at his establishment, November 3-8. CHESTER.

STOCK IS MORE PLENTIFUL.

Stock is more plentiful this week than it has been for some time and the buyer has been able to pick up some bargains in quantity lots the past several days in some items. Carnations appear to be holding their own and there is hardly ever any surplus to be seen at the wholesale houses. Chrysanthemums are in large supply and have dropped considerably in price the past week in the cheaper grades and some in the fancier ones. Pompons are in great demand and are cleaning up nicely each day at prices ranging from 50 to 75 cents per bunch. Roses are more plentiful in all varieties and are to be had in large lots at greatly reduced prices. Some particularly fine American Beauty, Premier, Russell and Columbia are obtainable this week, not to mention Ophelia, Sunburst, Maryland, Milady, Richmond, Hoosier Beauty, Ward, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Montrose and Shawyer. Cecil Brunner, Elgar and Baby Doll are included in the offerings. Sweet peas are arriving in larger quantities and move fast at $2 to $3 per 100. Lily of the valley is bringing $20 per 100 and cattleyas $12 to $15 per dozen. Gardenias are selling at $6 per dozen with the supply limited. Some fancy calendulas have brought as high as $6 per 100, but the general run of stock is being disposed of at prices considerably lower. Pansies are being sold at 12 bunches for $1.50. The first Paper White narcissus arrived this week and sold well at $12 per 100, owing to the great scarcity and high price of lily of the valley. Snapdragons are seen in larger quantities and good stock in this line is obtainable at 75 cents per bunch. Some indoor grown asters are to be had and there is a limited supply of dahlias available. are in short supply. A few callas and daisies are seen. Red berries made their appearance this week. Greens are plentiful. Taken as a whole, business has been rather quiet the past week, but it would not be at all surprising if the market took a decided change for the better before the week is over.

NOTES.

Miss Marguerite Kane McNulty, formerly with Peter Reinberg, and Clarence Ellsworth, with the J. F. Kidwell Co., were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. McNulty, 1807 Lunt avenue, Rogers Park, Wednesday, October 29. The happy young couple have the best wishes of their many friends in the trade for a pleasant voyage on the sea of matrimony.

Army field clerk, R. D. Gottry, who left THE AMERICAN FLORIST office April 30, 1917, to join the United States forces, was honorably discharged at Camp Grant, October 24, having served one year in this country and 18 months in France. He will seek fortune now in the rich oil lands of Oklahoma, leaving for Tulsa, October 28, with the heartiest good wishes from all who knew him here.

Ove Gnatt and Fred Henoch, of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., were visitors this week. This firm has been rapidly forging ahead, and has a large family of customers throughout this country and Canada. Victor "King" Emanuel, of New York, happened to be here about the same time, and it is needless to add that the meeting was a most enjoyable one.

The local order of Elks is making a drive to secure 1,000 new members. T. E. Waters, manager of Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department, filed the first application of that number to be turned in. Dan Simons, Allie Zech, R. E. Jones, Paul Klingsporn, M. B. Hirsch, E. C. Pruner and Bob Newcomb, all belong to the happy circle.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, is again attracting the crowds with his magnificent window displays. A number of live ducks, playing in the running stream of water, furnish entertainment for those who like to get a glimpse of nature.

Bassett & Washburn's greenhouses have been the center of attraction for the residents of Hinsdale the past week, some 30,000 chrysanthemums being in bloom. The roses were never better than right now, and are also in heavy crop.

Wieter Bros. are having a heavy call for fancy chrysanthemums and pompons, which are in heavy crop with them this week. The supply of roses has been increasing steadily here and includes the new variety, Premier.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association was the first to offer Paper White narcissus in this market this season. The stock is reported to be in brisk demand, owing to the great scarcity of lily of the valley.

J. E. Pollworth, secretary and manager of Kennicott Bros. Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother, whose death occurred at Milwaukee, Wis., the past week.

W. L. Rock, of Kansas City, Mo., passed through here last week on his way home from the F. T. D. meeting at Buffalo, N. Y.

The J. A. Budlong Co. is featuring some unusually well-grown McNeice chrysanthemums, which are unsurpassed for quality in this market.

All the local wholesalers have rereived notice, that beginning November 1, the price of ferns will advance 50 cents per 1,000.

John Poehlmann, who was operated upon for appendicitis, October 17, recovered sufficiently to visit the store this week.

F. J. Benthey is now with A. T. Pyfer & Co., who are handling the output of the Bentley range at New Castle, Ind.

Justice of the Peace, John F. Boyer, of Evanston, reports a pear tree in bloom in his garden, October 28.

The Florists' Club will meet at the Randolph hotel, next Thursday evening, November 6, at 8 o'clock.

Thos. D. Long, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, is back from an extended business trip.

Mrs. Joseph Kohout underwent an operation at the Garfield Park hospital, October 29.

Bob Newcomb was last heard from in Seattle, Wash., bound east.

Peter Reinberg and wife have returned from West Baden.

O. J. Fredman is back from a business trip to New York.

Peter Pearson is serving on the jury.

AMPLE SUPPLY BUT PRICES LOW.

The market has been somewhat overcrowded the past week. Early chrysanthemums are coming in, and with all other stock plentiful, they move slowly except at sacrifice prices. Business, as a whole, has not been up to expectations. Quite a few weddings are taking place, but they do not seem to be heavy flower consumers. Other business is correspondingly slow. Few pompons are arriving, but it is a little early for the bulk of them. Roses are plentiful, and the quality is exceptionally good. The only shortage is in white. This has been felt where there were calls for weddings. Lily of the valley is scarce and of very poor quality. Orchids are plentiful, with little demand. Carnations are improving, and command a fair price. Dahlias are still coming in freely, and this has some effect on both business and the low prices on other stock. What really is needed, is a good frost to kill off all outdoor stock, and no doubt it will have a stimulating effect on business. Snapdragons, calendulas, etc., are ample for requirements. Greens of all kinds are in good supply, but string smilax is still a bit thin, but will improve in a few weeks.

NOTES.

The results at the florists' bowling contests the past week were: Sweet Peas beat the Carnations three games, and the Roses beat the Daisies three games. This puts the Sweet Peas quite a little in the lead. Our "old war hoss" in bowling, Carl Beyer, made his initial appearance on the Roses last week, and he has lost none of his cunning. He certainly showed J. J. B. how to "knock 'em dead."

The next meeting of the florists' club should be a big success," because it is going to be "new member meeting." We know of about 50 new members who are going to be proposed. More power, St. Louie! The meeting will be held at Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney's tea rooms. The host is Julius Schaefer. He is going to have something special in the way of entertainment. Are we going to miss this meeting? I'll say we won't.

Johnny Bentzen claims he was lucky to get down to the bowling contests last week, because they were so busy, but then he and his dad, A. J. Bentzen, got there all O. K. on time. He tells us he made a blanket in 20 minutes that evening. Of course, he did not say how large, and we suppose it was made of smilax and flowers—but—oh, you tell it, Johnny, you are so good at telling 'em.

The growers of pot chrysanthemums claim their stock is later this year than usual. Some nice plants are to be seen, and there should be no trouble in disposing of them at good prices.

J. J. W.

Baltimore.

MARKET GENEROUSLY SUPPLIED.

Market conditions remain unchanged, with dahlias the only stock approaching a glut stage. Roses are being received in supply ample to meet all requirements, except red varieties, which are none too plentiful. An order for chrysanthemums, in either yellow or white sorts, of almost any quantity could have been filled, proving that they are in abundance. Business might have been a little more brisk the earlier part of the week, but the florists' banquet held the attention of growers, wholesalers and retailers, and there was some diversion from business on that account.

NOTES.

Wallace Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., who arranged some of his new roses at the florists' banquet, said that Washington, D. C., and this city were not markets for his products since express conditions have become so unsatisfactory. Two varieties, were much admired during the evening, Crusader, red, and Pilgrim, pink.

John J. Perry, of the S. S. Pennock Co., has been confined to his home for several days the result of a severe cold.

G., JR.

BOYNE, MICH.—O. D. Willson has added one house 28x50 feet to his range on Boyne avenue.

OKMULGEE, OKLA.—H. D. Ellis has added one house to his range, increasing his capacity to 8,000 square feet of glass.

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—The Arizona Seed & Floral Co. held its annual opening October 18. There was excellent music and flowers were presented to all visitors as souvenirs.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Florists and nurserymen of this city, in co-operation with the chamber of commerce, are planning to make this the rose producing center of the world. An organization to be known as the Oregon Rose Society is part of the programme.

TRADE SHOWS GENERAL IMPROVEMENT.

With better weather conditions prevailing during the past week, trade in this city and central Ohio has been more active in every line. The fall social season is at hand, and this is reflected in the florist business. Quite a few weddings were held recently, and several musicales were given as society events. There is a better demand for funerals, which is helping to steady the market. Prospects for the remainder of the fall and early winter are exceptionally good according to the downtown florists. Stocks are generally good, and the quality is improving as the season progresses. Violets have appeared on the market and are selling at 75 cents per bunch, or about $1.50 per 100. Roses and chrysanthemums are probably the leading features. Sweet peas are sell-

AMPLE HOME-GROWN SUPPLY.

Barring heavy shipments of chrysanthemums from California, and the usual arrivals of maidenhair fern and violets, the past week has found local florists able to meet their trade from home-grown stock. The greenhouse crops are all coming along in fine form, and there has been a good volume of business to report for the whole northwest. There has been no oversupply in any line, and the total sales for September are reported by most firms as exceeding anything for that month in recent years. Chrysanthemums have been probably the largest single sellers, except roses, as the shortage of carnations has limited business in this offering. The growers report some difficulty in getting carnations of top quality at this time, and nearly every day finds the local stores cleared fairly early in the day. The pot offerings are still good property, with primrose and cyclamens the best sellers. Western Washington growers have received many compliments on the quality of cyclamens being raised this year, and the bids received from outside retailers furnish practical proof of the truth of this. Shipments, as far as Denver, are reported by one grower, and there have been many other inquiries. The orchid shades of dahlias have been big favorites, and the stores have proved the best customers for the autumn leaves and yellow chrysanthemums for their window displays. Proof of the sound condition of the trade here is found in the fact that two new shops have been opened this week, without seriously cutting into the business of those already established. Higher prices and better sales have been the result of the dealers' association here, and President Desmond promises really active construction work this year. There are more Ophelia roses than anything else offered, with one or two stores getting enough American Beauties to make a feature. Double White Killarney and Sunburst have also been successful, and the heavy cut of orchids in local houses has led the trade to push the small baskets, using this flower as the central motif. There is more and more of a demand seen for the novelty lines, either in the form of permanent containers or seasonal oddities, and this is being fostered by the window displays of the retailers. Lily of the valley has been scarce, but heather is being used to replace this in combination. Fuchias were featured in one window this week and made a more than favorable impression, while celosias are also used frequently. Asters are holding up well, and of late the Portland trade has been drawing on this city instead of California, where the late crop is reported as below normal. The sale of pompons has been very good, as well, and every establishment reports collections that leave nothing to be desired.

NOTES.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop during this past week had a window display that attracted crowds. A gilded picture frame, backed by a black drape, was set high in the window to show off a small vase of delicate orchids, while in the foreground, was arranged a work chair, an artist's pallette, heavily daubed with oil colors, and color pots holding the brighter shades. A card called attention to the fact that the firm employs a force of "flower artists who will handle subjects to your taste."

George P. Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros., and several of his foremen, left the middle of last week for a three days' trip to Portland to visit the greenhouses of John Carlic. The trip was one of combined business and pleasure. This firm reports big sales of California chrysanthemums, cyclamens and Ophelia roses, and they say that this season's business will show a very great increase over the 1918 total.

C. W. Clark, for more than 12 years in the florist trade at San Francisco, and F. Hagerman, for the same period, a local nurseryman, have opened a new retail shop at 403 Pine street, in the heart of the new uptown shopping district. They expect to make a feature of floral designs and decorating, as Mr. Clark has specialized in this for some time.

Mrs. Anna J. Burns, of the Burns Floral Company, reports splendid business of late. Despite the h. c. l., there has been a very notable increase in the number of marriage licenses issued in this city this year, and her location, just across from the city-county building has led to considerable transient business in corsage bouquets.

The Hollywood Gardens report very good business of late, with dahlias, chrysanthemums and huckleberry the featured lines. This company is handling nothing but its own roses at this time, and reports decorations for a number of banquets at the Hotel New Washington within the past fortnight.

Paul Hurldeman, of Rosaia Bros., spent last week in Spokane. He found trade conditions there very good, but hardly up to the measure of prosperity seen in this city.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR FLOWERS AND PLANTS.

Business is very good in this city. All the stores report a healthy call for flowers and plants of every description. Despite the fact that all stock is rather high in price, the demand is so firm that everything cleans up nicely. The rose situation is in much better shape now than it has been for a long time. Stock is improving, especially in quality. Russell is becoming more prominent. Columbia, Ophelia, Shawyer, Hoosier Beauty and Hadley are the principal offerings. Good prices are being received by local growers and retailers. Quite a nice lot of Irish Elegance is also to be had. Cecile Brunner is scarce, and Ulrich Brunner is about over for the season. The chrysanthemum market has taken on a decidedly strong tone. Owing to the heavy shipping demand, good stock is wholesaling at $2.50 per dozen. It is very poor stock indeed that does not bring $1.00 per dozen. Crocus and Chrysolora are almost over. White and yellow William Turner are the best in their respective colors. In pink, Chieftain is best, closely followed by May Hunter, the last named variety being extremely popular in this market. Clara Wells is the best in the light bronze section. Quite a lot of Lord Kitchener is coming in, and is a ready seller. This is an amaranth with a silver reverse. Queen, which is a fine mid-season sort, is over. It was not so much in evidence this season as previously, it being gradually superseded by other whites. There are quite a few good singles to be had. These, and pompons, are selling well. There is practically no improvement in the carnation supply. Most of the stock arriving is very poor, and the crop from the new plantings is very small. They are bringing from $2 to $3 per 100. Gladioli and sweet peas, too, are out of the market. Asters are still hanging on. White pompons are most in demand for funeral work. There are quite a few zinnias, scabiosa and delphiniums still obtainable. Mignonette is coming in freely. The warm weather during the past week has played havoc with violets. Stock bought one day, and placed in the refrigerator, is useless the next day. These conditions will be eliminated with the return of cool weather. They bring 75 cents to $1.00 a dozen bunches. Giant is to be had in limited quantities. Quite an assortment of orchids are now available. Cattleyas are coming in freely and selling out almost as soon as received. Some fine Oncidium varicosum Rogersii are to be noted in the windows. Phalaenopsis amabilis has also made its appearance and cleans up on sight. There is a fine supply of gardenias. The stock is good and commands fine prices. In pot plants, cyclamens are the most widely distributed. They are meeting with much favor. Quite a few Begonia Lorraine are beginning to arrive also. Exacum affine is another flowering plant that has jumped into popular favor at its first appearance. Pot grown chrysanthemums are not so plentiful as they were last week. Ficus elastica and pandurata are in brisk demand, as are all Bostons. Asparagus is getting rather scarce. Ferns too are on the short side. All other greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

P. Vincent Matraia, manager of the Art Floral Co., at 255 Powell street, has installed the most pretentious electric signs that are to be noticed in any store in the country. One large sign runs across the entire front of the second story, with the words, "Art Floral Co." This sign is 20 feet by three feet. Directly underneath is another sign, the same size, with the celebrated slogan, "Say It With Flowers." The great novelty is a swinging sign from the second floor to the edge of the sidewalk, 14 feet long and six feet wide, to represent a stem of a red rose. The light begins at the end of the stem forming the green leaves, and develops at the flower into a huge, red rose. This is, without question, a beautiful idea. There are 250 red lamps in the rose alone. The cost was over $1,400. The intermittent flashes of the red rose on Powell street at night will no doubt prove to be one of the most prominent features of this busy thoroughfare. Owing to the heavy increase in business, two new men have been added to the floor force.

Those who thought that the acreage of chrysanthemums being grown for this market, would be more than enough for requirements, have found out their error. They never brought better prices than they are doing at the present time. Two dollars and fifty cents a dozen is very remunerative to the grower, notwithstanding the increase in the cost of production over former years. Even the Chinese growers are being paid $1 a dozen for stock that they sold last year for 25 cents. The heavy local demand, and the growth of the shipping trade has forced prices to where they are at present. If the weather continues favorable for a month or so longer, the growers will have had their most successful season.

Henry Maier, manager of the Hillsborough Nurseries at Burlingame, has created a sensation in this market with his Exacum affine. This plant has never before been offered in this market. His stock in eight-inch pans, is about a foot high, and the same in diameter, and is literally covered with a mass of blue flowers of a very pleasing shade. This little gem of a flowering plant is attracting large crowds to the windows of the retailers who are fortunate enough to have a supply. Mr. Maier has all his houses in good shape for the coming season. He thinks this will be a fine year for both the growers and retailers.

John Carbone's orchid range at Berkeley is now producing a heavy cut of Cattleya labiata and Phalaenopsis amabilis. His stock is in fine growing condition, and he will have a large supply throughout the season. Mr. Carbone, who is an enthusiastic hybridizer, has many fine seedlings which promise to bloom for the first time this season. They are principally brasso-cattleyas. He has already flowered many beautiful hybrids of great value and expects great things of the plants which will shortly be in flower.

The past week has been a trying one for the violet growers. The great heat is proving very injurious to the growing plants. Evidently the violet growers are not going to experience the prosperity that growers of other stock are having, owing to the high cost of labor. While labor has been constantly going higher, the violet growers are not getting any more for their stock than they did several years ago.

Domoto Bros. report that they are now receiving a good cut of roses from their greenhouses in Oakland. They are not growing carnations to any extent now, devoting their range to roses almost exclusively. They have lately received large shipments of plants for lining out in their nursery. Trade is said to be very good at their store on Bush street.

C. Kruse is one of the few growers who has a good cut of Cecile Brunner roses. His range at Piedmont is now producing a heavy crop of this popular rose. This variety succeeds particularly well with him. His fern houses are in nice condition for the fall trade, and he will cut heavily throughout the season.

The Lincoln Park Nursery, 467 Thirty-first avenue, says that the plant trade is opening up early with them this season. They claim that, from the advance orders already booked, it will be much in excess of former years. They handle a general line of florists' plants and requisites.

J. A. Axell, at 461 Bush street, is now in the height of the shipping trade. He has added five more employes to keep pace with his orders. L. Fegone is now with Mr. Axell in the shipping department. He is greatly elated over the manner in which his trade has grown in such a short time.

J. Kilroy, manager of the Castro Floral Shop at 489 Castro street, is greatly pleased over the amount of business his store is turning out. A large volume of funeral work is arranged daily. Violets are one of their leaders, and they handle large quantities every day.

Schwerin Bros. are sending in a fine lot of cyclamens in eight and ten-inch pans. They are eagerly sought for and bring good prices. George Draycott, the grower, is deserving of great credit for his work in producing such good stock so early in the season.

Kenneth Murray has begun cutting from his young rose plants. From present indications, he will have an excellent cut for the holidays, as the plants are making a splendid growth. His freesia houses are also coming along very fast.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. are receiving some excellent stock of Turner chrysanthemums. They are finely finished and of immense size. Angelo Rossi says this kind of stock always appeals to the discriminating buyer and sells out quickly.

Darbee's Nursery, at Colma, is sending in large quantities of violets every day to their store at 1036 Hyde street. They are nearly all used in Mrs. Darbee's shipping trade, which she reports as being excellent this season.

Lemio Castiglie, for many years with the Ferry Floral Co., was married last week to Miss Julia C. Baldocchi, of Mount Olivet. He is the son of A. Castiglie of South San Francisco, who is one of our oldest violet growers.

Manager Henry Avensino, of the E. W. McLellan Co., is now receiving a heavy cut of roses from their greenhouses at Burlingame and across the bay. He says shipping trade is excellent with his firm.

GARDEN FLOWERS IN HEAVY OVERSUPPLY.

The closing week of the outdoor flower supply finds the market overloaded with dahlias, asters, tritomas, hydrangeas, garden chrysanthemums, cosmos, etc., for none of which, except chrysanthemums and cosmos, there is scarcely any demand. Dahlias continue fine, and growers report that the fields are gorgeous with their wealth of flowers, but the dealers, the storekeepers, and the public, are tired of them, and as the supply of greenhouse stock is rapidly increasing, a frost is urgently needed to kill off the outside competition and tone up the market. L. K. Peacock, the well-known dahlia specialist, states that records of an average of 40 years, shows October 27 as the most frequent date of the first killing frost, so that it is now due. While during the summer there was doubt about the chrysanthemum supply, there is none now, as an overstocked market, with prices considerably below expectations, is handicapping the wholesalers. It is the old story of inferior stock, most of it from outdoors, which the warm weather of the past two weeks has brought in, all kinds together, and flooded the market. This is very hard to move, and much of it will hardly pay the express, as even the street men refuse it. The first selections of the greenhouse chrysanthemums meet with a ready demand at fair prices, as they are good enough for all high class work, and so beautiful as to attract the attention of all buyers. Well grown pompons are also seen in quantity, and are good sellers. Roses are now arriving in quantity in all grades. There is a race for supremacy between Russell and Premier, growers, wholesalers and retailers all taking different views, pro and con, all of which are likely to be changed in the next two months. Russell, Premier, Columbia, Hadley, Ophelia, and White Killarney are leaders, with other favorites in smaller supply. Prices are considered very fair for the season. Carnations are improving in quantity and quality, and should soon be an important factor. Calendulas will be as popular as ever, the first flowers looking very well. Sweet peas are scarce as yet, but the main crop will be earlier this year than ever before. Good snapdragon is in demand. Cattleyas were a bit scarcer the past week, and a few dozen lily of the valley, only fair in quality, brought $2.40 per dozen.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW.

The annual fall exhibition or chrysanthemum show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society is to be held in Ardmore, Pa., November 4-5. The premium list covers all the popular exhibition plants and flowers, particularly chrysanthemums, of which Secretary Rust expects to have numerous entries especially in cut blooms. Retailers are earnestly invited to make displays, for which space is given gratis. At recent shows, these individual store offerings have been very attractive, and it is hoped, have been found such good advertising that store men will again desire to meet the flower loving public in this way. There will be a "Say it With Flowers" booth, showing all the advertising matter of the national publicity campaign, calling attention to the various uses of flowers, displaying also the advantages of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association through its signs and literature.

tion, which through the co-operation of the local craft, was such a success, will become, in the near future, an annual fixture in this city. Nothing in an educational way to create a love for plants and flowers can compare with these large flower shows, where the best and newest of all that is grown in plants and flowers, and their artistic arrangement, is presented in such a way as to make a garden of delight. Speed the day. New York has blazed the way. The coalition of the florists' club and horticultural society, working together harmoniously, has made the annual exhibition one of the society events of the year. Not only is it successful from an educational standpoint, but has been the means of materially repleting the treasuries of both organizations.

A NEW FLOWER DAY.

A. A. Niessen believes that "All Souls day," which follows "All Saints' day," November 1, could be made a day of reverence for the dead in the United States, as it is in all European countries, where it is the universal custom to visit the cemeteries, and place flowers upon the graves. The trade could help bring this about by newspaper notices, by advertising, window displays and other publicity methods. It would fit in just at a time when flowers are very plentiful, be a great relief to the market, and profitable to all branches of the trade.

NOTES.

Vincent Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., spent October 25 in this city, visiting the trade. He spoke very enthusiastically of the "flower shop" scene in a production called "Happy Days," now playing at the New York Hippodrome. He declared it to be inspiring, and something that every retail florist, who was in, or visiting New York, should not fail to see. Mr. Gorly is very enthusiastic over his language of flowers, or list to portray a birth flower for each month. He feels, that if this can be officially adopted by the S. A. F. and F.

T. D., it will be a good talking point in selling and advertising flowers.

Charles H. Grakelow's use of Jersey cedars in his decoration of the parkway for the Philadelphia pageant, was protested by a reader in a letter to an afternoon paper. A temporary woods was made of these trees, cut off and stuck in the ground, and this the party thought was an outrage against nature. If they could see the hundreds of thousands of cedars born to grow unseen in the wilds and swamps of New Jersey, they might change their opinion.

The November meeting of the florists' club will be taken up with publicity and the local advertising campaign, which promises so much in creating a larger demand for plants and flowers. There will also be exhibitions of new chrysanthemums, the roses, Premier and Madame Butterfly, and others.

The Robert Craig Co. has 20,000 Dracæna terminalis, recently potted off, much the largest block of this variety in the country. Orders for all kinds of Christmas plants are rapidly closing out their stock.

The house of the new rose, Cornelia, of Robert Scott & Son, at Sharon Hill, Pa., is again in full crop. It is most prolific, has good length of straight stems, a fresh pleasing color and is very fragrant.

Wonderfully finished cibotiums are a feature of the Jos. Heacock Co.'s plant stock. They give a refining touch to the decoration of the store or show window that no other plant can supply.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is displaying superb chrysanthemums. George Aeugele is proud of the stock, and adds, "lookout for us with the late ones." K.

New York.

HEAVY OVERSUPPLY IN MOST OFFERINGS.

Business is slowly improving, but the great mass of stock that is being dumped in the wholesale district makes unsatisfactory conditions in that particular locality. Recalling supply and prices of a year ago, conditions are now reversed. At this time last year, everything that could be used in funeral work was bought up at high prices. In the single case of carnations, they wholesaled up to $8 and $10 per 100. At present, excepting orchids, lilies and lily of the valley, there is a surplus of all stocks. The autumn is wearing away, but quantities of dahlias and cosmos are yet arriving. But even if there is no frost, such stock will soon stop coming, as it does not sell for enough to pay the expense of cutting, packing and shipping. The market is full of chrysanthemums, large, medium and small, including the pompons, and as chrysanthemums have sold in some former years, they are now selling very cheap. Servicable stock for funeral work is wholesaling for 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Good flowers go for $3 and $4 per dozen, and anything that brings above $6, must be very fancy. There is also a large and well grown pot stock to be handled. Orchids are said to be off crop; at any rate, prices have taken a jump, and as high as $2 per flower, wholesale rates, has been paid for some of the best cattleyas. There is a limited supply of good gardenias on the market, wholesaling at $9 per dozen. There seems to be enough lily of the valley to supply all demands at from about $8 to $15 per hundred, according to quality. American Beauty roses kept around $45 and $50 per 100 during the past week, for specials. The specials of the newer varieties of tea roses bring good prices, if they can be sold when they come in, but everything that is left over, is particularly hard to move at even fair figures, the buyers knowing that there will be a large and fresh stock the next day. Fairly good carnations, for the season, are wholesaling for $2 per 100. A few of special quality bring $3, but the day of the carnation is not yet. A few small lots of Paper White narcissus have come in, but as a factor, it is, as yet, of no consequence. Plantsmen report that the trade in ferns and other foliage plants is improving. It is an undoubted fact that high rents and extortionate charges for food and clothing, are making inroads on the florist business.

October 27.—There is about the usual Monday demand. A heavy supply of stock is arriving and some of it shows the effect of warm and sultry weather.

NOTES.

A historian has told us that: "Ancient Gaul was divided into three parts." In another sense, this city—this whole country for that matter—is divided into three parts. First, the capitalists; second, the labor unions; third, the great majority of the people, who are suffering loss, and being indirectly robbed through the quarrels and unreasonable methods of the minority. In this connection, the strike of dock workers in this city seems to have degenerated into a feud between two rival "gangs." In the meantime, many cases of bulbs are yet in the holds of steamships. There is no end of "statements." Washington issues a statement—usually contradicting it on the following day. Mayor Hylan issues a statement; the steamship owners issue a statement, and the rival labor leaders are profuse with "statements," and that is about as far as progress has been made at this writing.

THERE'S a growing tendency toward a closer contact—toward a better understanding of man with man in every line of endeavor today, two essentials which make for a sound and lasting prosperity. I want to be on such terms with every florist; I solicit new business on such a basis

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held on the evening of November 10. It is likely to be the last meeting that will be held in the Grand Opera House building, as arrangements are being made to remove to the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street. The November meeting will be "nomination night." Nominations for officers for 1920 will be announced, to be voted for at the December session. Other interesting features will be on the programme.

Fred W. Golsner, son of George Golsner, the grower of College Point, was married, October 22, to Miss C. Faith, of this city. Fred is a returned soldier, having served over a year in France. He is salesman for his father's stock in the Cut Flower Exchange. We wish the young couple happiness. In any enterprise, "faith" is a great asset.

The autumn number of the Garden Bulletin, published quarterly by the Park Garden Club, of Flushing, has been issued. Mrs. Gertrude Vivian is editor. J. Horace McFarland writes interestingly under the title, "Give a Thought to a Rose." Vice-President Popp, of the New York Florists' Club, and other writers also contribute.

Frank Golsner, son of George Golsner, who previous to entering the United States army, and since his discharge, has been with Hunt & Nash, Inc., has gone into the wholesale business for himself on the third floor of the Coogan building, Sixth avenue and 25th street.

Improvements on the store of James Weir, Inc., Fulton and Pierrepont streets, Brooklyn, are almost completed, and it is an ornament to that section. Large plate glass windows, a tiled floor and other modern features are noteworthy.

Louis Schmutz, the well known plant grower of Flatbush, who was seriously ill during the summer, has recovered, and regardless of his seventy years and more, seems as lively as a young fellow.

The Claremont Florists, 3185 Broadway, have added two new houses to their range at Palisade Park, N. J., and in addition to ferns and chrysanthemums, are now growing carnations.

Before this reaches our readers, the season of chrysanthemum shows will be opened. The New York and Morristown, N. J., shows have already been announced in THE AMERICAN FLORIST.

Alfred Demeusy, Flatbush, is cutting fine stock of his pink sport of the Enchantress carnation; also exceptionally fine blooms of the white chrysanthemum, Liberty Bond.

Joseph Trepel has opened another store at the corner of Nostrand avenue and Sterling place, Brooklyn. This is his eighth retail store in Brooklyn.

A fine stock of pot chrysanthemums is being handled by J. K. Allen; also a good supply of Russell and Prima Donna roses.

The United Cut Flower Co. is now receiving regular shipments of Easter lilies, and seems to be the only firm that has them.

Miss Fanny F. Mackay, of Baddeck, Nova Scotia, has joined the bookkeeping staff of John Young & Co.

A better quality of violets was noted among the arrivals, October 27.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, October 29, was $60.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, returned from New York October 27.

A BELATED car lot of Chinese narcissus has arrived at San Francisco.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—A. J. Brown and wife are in New York this week.

ROGERS BROS., Alpena, Mich., now have offices in the Hearst building, Chicago.

RAFFIA to the amount of 4,729 metric tons was exported from Madagascar in 1916, and in 1917, 4,142 tons.

ERFURT, GERMANY. — Karl Heinemann, of the firm of F. C. Heinemann, died September 20, of heart failure, age 69 years.

THE annual meeting of the Wholesale Seedmen's League will be held at the Detroit Athletic Club, Detroit, Mich., November 19.

LISSE, HOLLAND.—The death is announced of J. M. Veldhuyzen van Zanten, of M. Veldhuyzen van Zanten & Sons, age 52 years.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—C. C. Morse & Co. have received large shipments of Dutch bulbs and report heavy business in these and other lines.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade October 29, were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 to $11.00 per 100 pounds. October $12.15 bid; $12.70 bid for March.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened unchanged and October and December steady, October 28, with cash offered at $30.60. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.35, October, $5.55, December, $5.60, March $5.75 and April $5.75.

THE Kokusai Kisen Keisha, or International Shipping Co., representing a merger of several Japanese shipping companies, has been established with a capital of $52,000,000 and will operate about 500,000 tons of vessels. Headquarters are at Kobe, Japan.

THE United States department of agriculture urges producers to provide against a shortage of sugar-beet seed in 1921. European supplies are deficient, and beet-sugar companies and seed growers are told to arrange immediately for the production of a large part of their requirements for that year.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district remain about the same, $2.75 for reds and yellows, and $3.25 for whites, prompt shipment. A well informed dealer, who recently covered the ground, says there is a shortage on the south side of some 150,000 to 175,000 bushels as compared with last year's crop. On the other hand, it should be remembered, that the sets are much smaller than last year's and of better quality generally. The quantity of independent sets on the south side is small, possibly 20,000 bushels, not over 25,000 bushels at the most.

Lily Bulbs.

About 80 per cent of the Lilium giganteum bulbs required, had been bought from the opening of the selling season in Japan to October 20, the price on the 7-9 grade being advanced about 50 per cent September 15. The competition which existed most of the season, and a crop below the average, kept prices above normal. There are still bulbs to be had, November 1, so the crop is by no means a small one. Evidently both Japanese growers and jobbers have been taking all the traffic will bear. Whether such rates will move the whole stock or reduce requirements is yet to be known. If the forcing grower can realize 25 cents per bloom, he can pay a fair price for the bulbs.

Dickinson Wants To Know.

Ten thousand dollars reward is the price offered by Chas. Dickinson, vice president of the Albert Dickinson Company, the largest seed house in the world, with offices at Thirty-fifth street and California avenue, Chicago. Mr. Dickinson is very much stirred up over the reported resignation of seven of his best men within the last week. He offers the reward "for proof and conviction of those concerned in an alleged conspiracy against the Albert Dickinson Company." This proof must be furnished by Monday noon, October 27, 1919.

A page advertisement in a local financial journal told yesterday of the reward. The ad says: "Certain employes of the Albert Dickinson Company, who have been misled are still on the pay roll of the Albert Dickinson Company."

Mr. Dickinson's employes have formed the United States Seed Company, which was incorporated at Sprinfield, Ill., October 24, with $500,000 capital. There has been a small amount paid in, according to reports. The men interested are credited with having a large amount of money.

Those who have resigned from the Dickinson company include Charles A. Heath, who has been with the company for 37 years. Seven years ago he was paid $180,000 for his stock he held in the concern, but remained with the company until last Saturday. A. C. Johnson and H. A. Abbott are other old employes of the Dickinson company who have quit.

Outsiders who are concerned in the new seed company include C. U. Snyder, one of the largest operators in feeds and molasses, who is credited with making a big fortune in the last few years out of molasses. H. N. Doughten of New York, a Mr. Reynolds of Crabb & Reynolds, who are largely interested in the grain and seed business of Crawfordsville, Ind., and D. W. Hales of Hales & Edwards Company, Chicago, are also interested in the new company.

Mr. Dickinson was on the board of trade yesterday with his advertisement offering the big reward and showed it around generally. To one member he offered $25,000 for certain information. He had little to say other than that the men were still on his pay roll. Efforts to find C. A. Heath have been futile for the last three days.—Chicago Tribune, October 26.

Seattle, president, and the L. C. Barrett, of the Spokane Seed Company, secretary. This organization will endeavor to secure the passage of uniform seed legislation in the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, and the various state commissioners of agriculture are promising their assistance as well. They will also work for a reasonable tariff for the seed growers' protection, and for the betterment of trade conditions. A legislative committee was named, and the first bill considered is aimed to force outside seedmen to live up to the same rigid requirements as are imposed in the four states being considered. There were only a few growers in attendance, but there was nearly 100 per cent representation from the seed dealers themselves, and a large number of state officials. The addresses included one by Dr. A. J. Pieters, of the bureau of plant industry, who has just returned from a trip through Europe. While there, he made a special study of clover seed, and reports there are from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 pounds of red clover in Italy and France. Whether any of this stock reaches the United States depends, he states, on whether Austria or Germany prove buyers. In case these countries are short, there will be only light imports, but otherwise, the Italian stock is going to move in this direction. He found heavy stocks of vegetable seeds all over Europe. Plans are under way for the 1920 convention already.

Efforts to end the harbor tieup were given another setback, October 26, when it was announced that longshoremen, said to be members of 24 locals of the international longshoremen's union, voted in favor of a general strike in the port of New York, to become effective immediately. They declared that 22,000 dock workers employed on the piers in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Hoboken, Jersey City and Staten Island, would obey the new strike order. They said that heretofore they had been on a "vacation." Some ocean steamers carrying bulbs, have returned to the other side, taking the bulbs back with them.

Harry A. Bunyard, recently returned from Young Men's Christian Association work in France, is reported to have joined the forces of Henry F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, Pa.

A. M. Van Der Schoot, who has been representing R. A. Van Der Schoot, of Hillegom, in this country for some time, expects to return to Holland for the Christmas holidays.

creeping bent, is in very limited supply and little will be available for export. The quality, however, is excellent. Aira flexuosa, the yellow oat grass of the trade, shows a fair average yield. The seed is in good demand, and is often used for lawn grass mixtures. Anthoxanthum odoratum, sweet scented vernal, (true), can be supplied in small quantities. Festuca duriuscula, hardy fescue, and Festuca ovina, sheep's fescue, yielded medium crops of excellent quality. All this stock is in firm hands, and is being held for higher prices. The demand is brisk, and will soon take up all offerings. Festuca elatior, true Rhenish tall fescue, produced an average harvest, and will, as usual, be bought by the English trade. Festuca ovina angustifolia fine-leaved fescue, is available in very reliable values, thoroughly recleaned and of the finest quality. The quantity on hand, however, will soon be disposed of. Toa aemoralis, wood meadow grass, yielded only a small crop, although the quality is excellent. This is a valuable grass for shaded locations. Toa trinialis, rough stalked meadow grass, is in heavy demand. The home-grown seed turned out well, both as to quantity and quality."

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $2.75 to $3.50; celery, Michigan, box, 50 cents to $1.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 25 to 27½ cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $2.50; tomatoes, per box, 50 to 75 cents.

New York, Oct. 27.—Celery, per doz. roots, 10 to 50 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $1.50 to $4.50; mushrooms, 50 cents to $2.00 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 20 cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $5.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.50.

Direct Seeding of Lettuce.

We have had remarkably good results from direct seeding of lettuce for the first crop under glass. The reasons for this success are easily to be seen as this method avoids two checks by eliminating both the first picking out and the final shift. As time is not a factor at this season, the method is to be recommended. We simply use an ordinary garden drill, remove the covering device, and sow the rows 10 or 12 inches apart, directly where we want the permanent lettuce beds. Great pains should be taken to prevent covering of the seeds as an uneven stand will surely result otherwise. The roller on the drill will fasten the seeds sufficiently to give them a hold for germination. We turn the water on (mechanical watering) and allow it to run until the water appears at the surface. This often requires two days, of continuous application and is exactly what we want, a soaking clear through down many feet.

Where cucumbers and tomatoes are grown in summer, the moisture is often entirely removed to a great depth and must be replaced. We believe uneven and scanty watering to be the direct cause of many crop failures. We have, at time of germination, applied enough water to finish the active crop—never having applied any more until the crop was cut. This is the ideal way, as it avoids many troubles. As soon as these lettuce seedlings show their second leaf, we thin them by using a hoe and handweeder in order to reduce them to bunches 8 or 10 inches apart. These bunches are trained to one plant. A skillful operator is necessary for thinning, as he should select the plants of as near one size and strength as possible—so they will all mature together.

While this looks very easy, indeed, it is also very exacting, and the different operations must be done on time and thoroughly—otherwise, bad losses easily occur. MARKETMAN.

Vegetable Markets.

Market conditions for the period, October 21-28, from reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, indicated strong prices with decreasing movement, with new gains in potatoes and onions and a rather weak tone for cabbage. No. 1 northern sacked white potato stock advanced 5-10 cents, closing $2.25-$2.40 per 100 pounds, f. o. b. shipping points in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan and ranged firm in leading consuming markets at a general jobbing range of $2.50-$2.75. Sacked Minnesota Red River Ohios held unchanged at $2.55-$2.65 f. o. b., and ranged about steady at $3.10-$3.35 in middlewestern jobbing markets. Nebraska round whites also held steady at $2.10-$2.15 bulk to growers. Colorado and Idaho sacked white stock advanced sharply, closing $2.05-$2.20 f. o. b. cash at Idaho shipping points and $2.25-$2.50 cash to growers in the Greeley section, showing gains of 25-40 cents. New York round whites closed 10-25 cents higher at $2.32-$2.35 f. o. b., sacked, and ranged correspondingly higher in consuming markets at $2.35-$2.60. Maine sacked Green Mountains advanced about 25 cents, closing at $2.22-$2.29 per 100 pounds f. o. b. shipping points and averaging about 20 cents advance in consuming markets, selling at $2.40-$2.60 in Boston and New York. New York Danish seed cabbage stock followed a slightly weaker range, closing at $26-$30 per ton bulk, f. o. b. shipping points, and ranging $20-$25 cash to growers. New York domestic stock showed a $1-$2 decline, selling mostly $16-$28, but sold as low as $13-$15 in New York, and reached $35-$40 in Cincinnati. Minnesota and Wisconsin Holland seed gained about $5, reaching $32 per ton bulk, f. o. b. shipping points, but jobbing range weakened slightly to $32-$35 in Cincinnati, $25-$30 in Chicago and $25-$37 in St. Louis. Shipments increased to 1400 cars compared with 1,139 last week and 1,015 a year ago. Estimated northern commercial cabbage crop of nine leading states is about 10,000 cars below last year, with a shortage chiefly in eastern and central states. The crop is about 10,000 cars below that of 1917, but still fully 10,000 cars above the very short crop of 1916. Middlewestern yellow onion stock again advanced about 50 cents in Chicago, closing at $4.50 per 100 pounds. Middlewestern red globes closed strong at $3.75-$4 per 100 pounds, sacked, f. o. b. shipping points. Eastern sacked yellow stock improved to a range of $3.25-$3.75 f. o. b. shipping points, fancy stock reaching $4, and ranged in eastern consuming markets fairly steady at $3.25-$4.

Storing Vegetables in Hotbeds and Frames

The empty hotbed and cold-frame may be used to good advantage during the fall and winter for storing vegetables, says J. T. Rosa, Jr., of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture. The empty pit is then available for storing in bulk, potatoes and root crops of all kinds. Celery and cabbage, also, can be stored here by pulling the plants with the roots on, and setting them closely together in the upright position, with the roots embedded in a few inches of loose, moist soil in the bottom of the pit. The cold-frame is used in the same way as the hotbed; but since it has no pit, its capacity is limited. The regular glass sash can be used to cover these structures when used for vegetable storage, but they must be supplemented with board shutters, straw mats, or loose straw to protect the contents from sunlight, and from freezing and thawing. The walls on the outside should be well banked with soil or manure.

Mid-West Horticultural Exposition.

The premium list of the Mid-West Horticultural Exposition, to be held in the Coliseum, Des Moines, Ia., November 11-14, advance mention of which appeared in our issue of August 23, page 270, has been issued. The exposition, which is under the auspices of the Iowa State Horticultural Society, is not for pecuniary gain, but purely for educational purposes and will be replete with lectures, demonstrations and displays showing the result of 50 years' horticultural effort in the state. An important feature will be the section devoted to flowers, designated as Department D, in which there are first, second and third prizes in cash offered for chrysanthemum cut blooms in 18 classes and seven classes for the same flower in pots. Cut roses are given eight classes, carnations, four and decorative plants in collection, three, the awards ranging from $4 to $25. Arthur H. Smith, Boone, Ia., is superintendent of the floricultural section.

Twenty-six thousand square feet of floor space in the Coliseum will be devoted to the exposition. There are 140 classes for apples of almost every variety grown in the west, with divisions for barrels, boxes, baskets, trays and plates. As a further stimulus to apple production, a sweepstakes prize is offered in eight classes, doubling the premium and giving as well a ribbon for the distinction. A special feature will be one section devoted to edible nuts on plates with prizes for black and white walnuts, pecans, hickory nuts, American chestnuts and chestnut hybrids, hazelnuts, and a collection of each of the above. The vegetable display will be most extensive, the classes announced being as follows: Potatoes, open classes, including Early Ohio, Irish Cobbler, Rural New Yorker, Bliss Triumph, Green Mountain, Burbank, and best display, seven classes; potatoes, open to Iowa growers only, Early Ohio, Irish Cobbler, Rural New Yorker, Bliss Triumph, Green Mountain and Burbank, six classes; sweet potatoes, red, yellow and white, five classes; onions, red, white and yellow, six classes; root crops, eight classes: greenhouse vegetables, six specimens in not less than six-inch pots, one plant to a pot; parsley, head lettuce, loose leaf lettuce, peppers, tomatoes, endive and spinach, one class; bunch vegetables, eight classes: green vegetables, ten classes; mushrooms, one class; dried garden herbs, one class, and three substantial prizes for the best displays of vegetables.

Copies of the premium list and other information may be had upon application to Wesley Greene, secretary, State House, Des Moines, Ia.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, WIS.—James G. Ward has added one house, 25x100 feet, which will be devoted principally to roses.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—L. W. Frankenberg, who had been engaged with his brother, William, in the florist business in this city for a number of years, died October 9, age 67 years, after a short illness.

Perkins was elected to succeed him as president, and also continues to hold the office of treasurer. Charles H. Perkins, 2nd, was re-elected vice-president. P. V. Stark Trade-Mark Infringement Suit.

The United States Supreme Court has decided to review the case of Stark Brothers Nurseries & Orchards Company, Louisiana, Mo., against William P. Stark, et al. The nursery company filed suit in 1916 against the respondents for infringement of the registered trade-mark, "Stark Trees," and for unfair competition in the use of the name Stark. Both parties are growers and sellers of fruit trees and other nursery stock in Missouri.

The Missouri courts found in favor of the plaintiffs, and ordered the award of damages, but the court of appeals reversed the decisions, owing to the fact that the company had failed to note on its labels bearing its registered trade mark, the statutory notice, "Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.," as directed by the statutes.

The consideration of this case by the supreme court will settle the question of whether it is necessary that the statutory notice appear in connection with registered trade marks.

American Association of Nurserymen.

MARKET DEVELOPMENT.

The following communication has been sent to members of the American Association of Nurserymen who are not already subscribers to the market development fund by the committee on market development of the association:

"Publicity work, as you doubtless know, was taken up last year by about 150 firms; at the Chicago convention, in June, the work was taken over by the association, which will now direct, control and finance the publicity work in the interest of the larger and better use of nursery stock, and in ways that will enable the members of the association to realize the financial benefits following the increased use of our products.

"But provision for financing the work by the association leaves us without funds from the association, until next June, when dues are again payable. Until that time, we have to depend upon voluntary subscriptions. May we not confidently expect that the members of the association, who took the publicity work over and agreed to finance it out of the general revenue after next June, will be the ones most willing and prompt to help finance the work until next June? We think so, and that is why this letter is being sent, to every member of the association, not already on the list of subscribers.

"The programme was fully explained at the convention, and plans for this year were approved and a committee appointed by President Moon to proceed under the instructions of your executive committee. So it is not necessary to enumerate here the various forms of publicity under way and planned. They have been fully explained also in the trade papers.

"While other things have brought about a revival of business, we think that the publicity work done by the nurserymen has helped our line, particularly the special articles on trees and plants which appear at intervals in the papers and magazines, reaching several millions of readers. We all sold more stock last spring than in several years. We all find a good demand for next season, and at good prices. We want to keep people reading and talking about trees and plants, and to get the idea of planting things so firmly fixed in their minds, as to have it become a habit, so that later on, when our surplus comes on the market,—as it will,—we shall have a demand that will consume it.

"Do not you want to help in work of that sort? Are not the members of our American Association of Nurserymen the ones to look to for big, broad, thought and action? And we purpose working to the end that profit will accrue to those who pay the bills. A check to Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Missouri, will help the work along. We ask your cooperation in this movement."

Pruning Period for Transplanted Trees.

In answering the question as to the proper time to prune transplanted trees, and young trees not to be transplanted, the Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia, where general observations have been made on young trees pruned at different seasons, the experimnts extending over a period of 20 years, says that results uniformly indicate that better growth follows if the branches are cut back in the fall. This holds true for young trees generally. The same observations are true of grapes. It has been found that one-year-old grapes, designed to stand a second year in the nursery make much better growth if pruned back in the fall; also that bearing grape vines make stronger growth if pruned in autumn as soon as their leaves are shed. This is particularly true of varieties that tend to make poor renewal growth from the lower spurs.

That the water content of young apple trees is not greatly affected by fall pruning was established by experiments in 1900 and 1901. Little difference was found between apple trees transplanted in late fall and those which were not transplanted. Also, the trees whose branches were pruned back in late autumn contained, on the average, slightly more water than those which retained their branches. While this difference is not great, it at least indicates that the pruned branches did not suffer from drying out through the wounds, but on the contrary, the pruned trees dried out slightly less than those which were not pruned.

Orchard Campaign in New York.

In order to stimulate the growing of fruit in city gardens, a number of trained trees have been planted in the Bryant park demonstration garden, Forty-second street and Sixth avenue. This location was selected, as this demonstration garden has proved so successful serving as a stimulus to over 2,200 city gardens. Manhattan vacant lots produced over $76,000 worth of green vegetables this season, not to speak of the thousands of gardens throughout Queens and Richmond. The National Forestry Associaton has endorsed the plan.

San Francisco Notes.

Dr. P. J. S. Crawer, of Java, director of plant introduction for the East Indies, is visiting the trade here. He has been to Chico, conferring with R. L. Beagles, superintendent of the United States plant introduction bureau there. After the completion of his inspection in this country, Dr. Crawer will leave for Holland, where similar investigations will be made before he returns to his station in Java.

C. C. Morse & Co. have received a large shipment of Dutch bulbs from Holland. Their fall bulb catalogue has been mailed and they are doing a heavy business. Owing to the federal quarantine their lists of Spanish iris and some other items is smaller than other years. They are hoping to develop a sufficient supply here to take care of their needs another season.

Luther Burbank was honored by King Albert of Belgium during his visit here. He was warmly greeted by the king upon his arrival, they having been friends for many years. Burbank first met the king 15 years ago, when he made his first visit to this city. Mrs. Burbank was among the ladies who lunched with the queen at the St. Francis hotel.

The Thomas Floral Company, at Jones and O'Farrell streets, have been featuring Yellow William Turner chrysanthemums this week. The stock was excellent and attracted much favorable comment. This firm has added art pottery to its stock. They say trade is fine, and that they are busy nearly all the time.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have had a busy week on decorations incidental to the visit of the King of Belgium. A large amount of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums were used in their color schemes. They are always busy at their store, and are handling only the finest grade of stock.

Business continues to exceed all expectations at the new wholesale house of J. A. Axell at 461 Bush street. The chrysanthemum shipping season is now at its height with him. He is also shipping heavily of roses and violets. His brother is now in charge of the office at this place.

Milton Tonini, manager of the Bay Counties Seed Company, has added bird cages and bird requisites to his already large line. Wicker weave baskets and stands for plants are also being featured on a large scale. He reports business to be excellent in the plant and seed line.

J. W. Bagge, a gardener well known in this city, shot and killed his wife, and then committed suicide, while temporarily insane, during the week. He was a native of Denmark, 62 years of age. His wife was a native of Massachusetts.

SUPPLY NONE TOO PLENTIFUL.

Stock is none too generous in supply, and in some items, there is a scarcity of good material. Roses in all grades show improvement and prices are well maintained, varying from eight to 25 cents, with few below the first named figure. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful and are wholesaling at $3 to $4 per dozen. Carnations are short of the demand every day. Violets are beginning to arrive on this market. Chrysanthemum plants are becoming more numerous, and the quality is good for early offerings. Business in general is very satisfactory, especially wedding orders, which are setting a record for this time of the year.

NOTES.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting fine crops of roses and chrysanthemums. Roses and carnations are getting better each day. Much improvement is also noted in the chrysanthemum plants grown by this firm. A strong demand keeps the supply in all lines well cleaned up.

H. Kusik & Co. suffer at times from a shortage of stock, although they are carrying a heavy supply of good roses. Chrysanthemum receipts are more generous, and they are looking forward to a fine supply from the range of John Stevens.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. says stock is coming from its range more freely, and chrysanthemums will be more plentiful within a week. Manager Wade reports volume of sales better than anticipated.

Miss J. E. Murray reports very satisfactory business, and feels certain that the good volume will be maintained. She is working up some excellent arrangements of baskets, etc., with strawflowers.

T. J. Noll & Co. handled a fine cut of roses during the week, all of which moved freely. Carnations continue scarce here. Chrysanthemums are coming better.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports good trade in all branches of its business. Out-of-town shipments show daily gains with calls for stock of the higher grades.

A. F. Barbe showed good Ophelia roses and chrysanthemums during the past week. The demand for funeral work is good at his establishment.

Manager Neff, of the Muehlebach Flower Shop, is more than pleased with business. Orders for decorations have been especially good.

W. J. Barnes is now cutting a fine lot of chrysanthemums. He has had an unusually busy week with wedding and funeral orders.

Ed. Humfeld has his new store nearly completed and it will present, when finished, a handsome appearance.

A. Newell is enjoying an excellent trade in all lines and sees a splendid season ahead.

RUGOWSKI'S NEW ASTERS

Read the Following Strong Endorsement of Men Well Qualified to Judge:

MR. J. K. RUGOWSKI, Manitowoc, Wis.: September 15th, 1919.

"Dear Sir—In the name of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association, I wish to thank you for your exhibit of both Pink and White Asters at our annual meeting held at Milwaukee September 12.

"I am transmitting herewith the resolution passed at that meeting, endorsing these Asters as being very meritorious flowers. It was the sense of the resolution that these Asters be endorsed by the Association as having the largest flower and longest stems and in every way being superior to any Aster thus far seen in the market. It is with pleasure, indeed, that I am permitted to send this message.

"With best wishes for the future success of this flower, I am, Yours very truly,
"WISCONSIN STATE FLORISTS' ASS'N, H. J. Seal, Secretary."

Here's Another Proof of Merit:

"The sample flowers of Asters shown were the finest type of Ostrich Plume of Crego that I have seen in 32 years' experience." C. LITTLEFIELD, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

This Seed Will Be on the Market the Coming Season in Original Packages Only. Price, $1.50 Per Package.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

My Love Works in a Greenhouse.

In a quaint New England village,
On a drear October night,
A livery stable keeper met
A maid whose troth he'd plight.

Now he was tall and handsome
In a Denman Thompson way,
And she, oh my! was quite a queen,
She was so tall yet gay!

The livery stable keeper
When he asked her for her hand,
Attempted to embrace her,
But for this she would not stand.

Why, oh why, upon this manly breast
Will you not lay your head?
She looked into his whiskered face,
And this is what she said:
Chorus.
My love works in a greenhouse,
And there always is a smell
Of violets and geraniums
Upon his coat lapel.
Now, mind, I do not blame you
Nor do I make complaint,
But a greenhouse has a fragrance
That a livery stable aint.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Primulas.

As fast as the primroses grow, space them out so that there is a good distance between each plant, and so that the leaves do not touch, allowing room between the plants for a free circulation of air. If the plants are placed on a bench with a front and back board, place boards across and set the plants on these or stand the pots on inverted pots so as to bring them up into the air. Take care in watering not to wet the foliage more than necessary, or the leaves will be spotted. Many good primulas are ruined by being overcrowded and the foliage allowed to remain damp. If the plants are not going to be in flower for the holidays they can be placed in a temperature of 60° at night for a short time, which will rapidly bring them along, but do not attempt a higher temperature than that, nor for any great length of time. These plants are cold-loving subjects and are more satisfactory in a house that never goes above 50° at night. Primula obconica is now blooming freely and can be kept in bloom until spring if grown cool. These plants are particularly useful in filling Christmas baskets. Care must be taken in the handling of these plants by persons, who are at all subject to poisoning, from coming in contact with this, rhus, or other poisonous plants, for they sometimes cause a very troublesome and irritating eruption of the skin.

Ardisias.

The berries of the ardisias should now be turning a bright red and the foliage taking on that beautiful glossy appearance which makes this plant so popular at the holidays. Where these plants are grown in great heat the berries do not color as brightly, and the leaves lack that thick, leathery texture and glossy appearance, and the plants are not so satisfactory in the houses. They also chill very easily, and if this happens the berries drop off. It is much better to finish them from this time on in a bright, sunny house, with good ventilation; this will tend to color up the fruit and give the plants a much healthier appearance, and they will prove more satisfactory. We have seen these plants, where grown cool and not forced, hold their berries until the next year's crop was borne. Keep a sharp lookout for scale on ardisias; they quickly get covered with the brown scale unless carefully watched, and when these insects appear, constant washing is the great remedy. Clean off the first that appear. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Catch Crops.

With the close competition that the greenhouse man is up against at the present day it does not pay to have any of the bench room idle, or if a crop shows that it is not going to succeed and be remunerative it had better be thrown out and the room occupied by something that will pay. The several different plants and flowers have their seasons, and when they are done a succeeding crop should be all ready prepared to take their place. It therefore pays to have some catch crop ready in cases of this kind. There are many annuals that can be grown and carried along in small pots and if not used and eventually discarded the loss is small. These, if planted out in the benches, will bloom in the early spring and give a very welcome variety to the flowers of that season. There are many flowers grown today that were first grown as catch crops, such as the antirrhinum. Among others which might be grown this way are the centaureas, either bachelor's buttons or sweet sultans, nasturtiums, lupines, calendulas, eschscholtzias, salpiglossis, schizanthus, stocks and others. There are also many of the early blooming perennials which can be lifted and heeled in where they can be easily obtained during the winter and transplanted to the greenhouse. Among these are Coreopsis lanceolata, Aquilegia cœrulea, gaillardias, heulceras, sweet william, and others which the grower has in stock. A dealer will always find customers who appreciate these flowers, which are often not seen during the winter months, and by having the stock of a few of these odd things one can often plant out a section of a bench that otherwise would not be returning any revenue, and thereby prevent loss.

Stevia.

The early stevia will now be coming into flower, but if the plants are in pots, and there are a good large number, they should not be brought into flower all at once. By keeping some of the plants in a cool location they can be retarded so that plants may be had in bloom up to February. A house or deep frame where the night temperaure can be kept just above the freezing point will hold them in check and they can be brought in as desired. The dwarf variety is very easily handled in this manner, but the tall plants are not so easily moved around. Keep the plants well tied up, for the joints are very brittle and break down easily, and the long variety should be very carefully handled even after the sprays are cut, for they break down with their own weight when in flower.

Lilies.

The lily bulbs will soon be here and preparations should be made to handle them immediately upon their arrival. There is no time to waste in order to have this crop in the best of shape for Easter, especially with the bulbs that are imported from Japan. Whichever way the bulbs are to grow, whether in 4-inch or 6-inch pots, it is necessary to have pots enough on hand to pot them all up at once, and a pile of good, rich soil all ready, so that there will be no delay. The rapid potting of these bulbs by some growers is done as follows: The 6-inch pots are placed touching each other and then filled about half full of soil, the bulbs are then placed on the soil and the pot filled in nearly to the top and watered. This can be done in this manner very rapidly and there is but very little handling of either the pots or bulbs. After the bulbs are in the pots they should be buried outside until good, strong root growth has taken place; the success or failure of the crop will mainly depend on having the bulbs make good roots early. A frame that can be covered during excessive wet weather is the best place for these plants until they are brought into the houses. If the weather becomes very cold and severe the frames should be covered with sash or the beds have straw or some other protection thrown over them. If kept cool the bulbs will make strong roots before the top starts to grow, yet the ground over them should not be allowed to freeze or damage will be done. The giganteums for Christmas should now be growing nicely and the buds should show about November 10. If they do not appear by that time a little extra heat will be necessary to have them in on time.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The season should now be on with full speed ahead, weddings, debutante teas and other social affairs, keeping the six work days of the week nearly always full, from the opening to the closing hour. Have the store, with its various show features, in order before 9 a. m.; a littered up floor, and things out of place, gives an untidy look, and is anything but the decorative appearance that should be in view when the shopping commences. Always change the water in the jars, and go over the stock in the case before closing. Early morning orders will often interfere with this, if left until the next day. Anything that is a bit passe, should be removed to the storage case in the rear.

Give the fern and palm stock a good dusting every day or so, and syringe at least once a week. They will then look bright, clean and healthy. Rub the flat leaves of the dracænas, aspidistras and ficus with a dry canton flannel cloth. They will polish up beautifully with the oil in the leaves, which gives them a salable finish.

People are now, on account of so many social functions, in a buying humor, and the front of the store should be made as attractive as possible. A display of shapely tub evergreens and well filled window boxes with the same class of stock, in an attractive pavement arrangement, will be found salable, and sure to call attention to the store. The windows should be at their best, and frequently changed. A table decorated for a luncheon, or other affair, can be placed in the window. A half-size, nicely decorated in proportion, is sure to make a pretty feature and attract favorable comment. Lines of chiffon ribbon on the cloth, with tufted bows at intervals, are decorative.

This is the foot ball season, and in all the large cities and college towns, the pennants and colors of the various teams scheduled to play at the week ends, are well worth a place in the window. Corsages, tied with the college ribbons, on display, are almost certain to find customers. For the larger and more important games, there is often a big demand, particularly for chrysanthemums, violets and red roses.

The correct placing of cut flowers in boxes, so as to insure their carrying safely, and make a good, first impression when the box is opened, is an important matter that does not always get the proper attention. Many florists have waxed paper cut into strips or widths that are used to separate each row of flowers, while some use a small square of the paper for each important flower. A sheet torn into narrow shreds, which is quite easy by making several folds of the paper, and tearing it the way of the grain, gives a fluffy filling that is nice to finish off a box. It is best to pack from either end, the long flowers first, then the next longest, keeping the short stems for the center. A tape passed through each side of the bottom at the center, tied over a narrow wax paper belt laid on the stems, in an easily undone bow, will keep the contents in place. A few loose pansies or violets, strewn over the other flowers, makes a nice finish. The flowers should receive a light sprinkle, and before the lid is placed, turned over to run off any surplus water that would otherwise soften the box.

Glass covers are now extensively used for tops of tables and desks, underneath which may be placed fancy papers, cretonnes or self-colored blotting sheets for certain color effects. If kept polished, such furniture always looks fresh any new. Very pretty effects may be worked out with ferns, pansies, daisies, etc., under the glass, where they will retain their form and color, as if pressed in a book.

Get things out on time. It is very annoying to customers, if, when about to arrange flowers for a dinner or luncheon, they find they have not yet arrived. To have to make excuses over the phone, is bad for business. Keep appointments to the minute. Many persons apportion every quarter-hour of the day, and even a ten-minute delay upsets their schedule. Try laying out the work you will do tomorrow, on such a schedule. You will find it a great conserver of time.

Thanksgiving is coming fast. Plan to make the most of this fall holiday. There are many home-comings, and generally, an extra demand for plants to give life or a decorative finish to this or that room. It is generally the wind-up of the chrysanthemum season, when they are used in quantities, particularly for the Thanksgiving dinner table. It is getting to be more or less of a gift day, when boxes of flowers of all kinds are sent in acknowledgment of dinner invitations.

Store Front Decoration.

One of the greatest assets in publicity for the retail florist, is the inviting and decorative appearance of the outside front of the store, yet it is safe to say that not one in 10 are alive to its possibilities, or make use of any of the many points of vantage that are available, to call attention to their shop. A touch of paint makes a wonderful change in the appearance, and costs but a trifle, but because the landord is dilatory, or refuses to go to this expense, the dingy and neglected looking front is allowed to remain, month after month, greatly to the discredit of the business. If on the sunny side of the street, the necessary awning gets to looking shabby, but is carried along for the season, and perhaps, in its faded condition, made to do duty another summer. Nothing adds such a forlorn look to a store as a rusty and perhaps ragged awning. These very important matters should have attention before anything else. It is just as necessary, in fact, as the personal appearance of the proprietor, which, as a rule, is in keeping with the looks of the store.

Many retailers get into a rut, and run their business along the lines of least resistance. They buy cautiously, carrying but little stock, their rule being to get the orders first and then the stock to fill them. There is a class of buyers who patronize the men who go along in the old fashioned way and make no effort to keep their business up-to-date, with the idea that they can get plants and flowers for home consumption cheaper. When, however, they want something artistic, or made of the best flowers to send as a gift or for a funeral, the order is given to the more progressive florist whose name has become a synonym for all that is best in flowers. Many, who thought they had all of Mrs. Blank's work, and would get the approaching wedding of her daughter, were surprised to find it had been given to the competitor, whose enterprize had made his name worth as much as his flowers.

On all the busy city streets, thousands pass along continuously during business hours, each individual being a possible buyer. The florists' store, on account of the decorative nature of its plants and flowers, should be the best dressed shop in the block. It should stand out conspicuously with its wealth of foliage and flowering plants, so arranged as to make striking effects, and so beautiful at all times as to halt, even the man in a hurry, who pauses for just a moment to take a look. Those at all interested, attracted by the outward display, will draw near to get a view of the window, which being in keeping with the exterior, will in its studied arrangement, convince them that this is a safe shop to tie to; where there are men who understand their business.

There are a number of spaces on the street front that are available for producing decorative effects. One of the most prominent is the cornice over the window and doorway. This should be crowned with boxes of plants and vines. If there are several floors above, the window ledges should each have its box of plants and vines. The roof cornice can also contain boxes of showy plants and vines. Another very good space is on the pavement beneath the show window. This can be occupied with a box resting on the sidewalk, or the flagging can be cut, and the box concealed or the stock planted directly in the ground. Vases on pedestals either side of the store, even if they encroach slightly on adjoining properties are not likely to be objected to by the neighbors. The curb front can have its vases on pedestals, or choice evergreens or bay trees in tubs. There can also be hanging baskets, suspended from brackets set into the woodwork or wall on either side, well above the pedestal vases.

With the above described plant features in good order, the effect will be very striking, which aside from its decorative value, is educational, suggesting to many that they might use something similar to beautify their places of business or their homes. This may seem too elaborate, overdone as it were, but is not the case. The intention is to make it as showy as possible, so as to be sure to attract attention. The average person will say, "What a beautiful display," and will speak of it to others, who will come out of their way perhaps to see it.

To be always at its best, there will need to be severel changes and renewals during the seasons. The earliest filling should be with spring bulbs, then pansies, after which the summer-flowering geraniums and other blooming plants and vines. When they fade away in hot July, follow with crotons, pandanus and ferns; then in early October, with pot chrysanthemums. The winter filling in early November should be with boxwood or evergreens. While it will cost not a little to arrange and maintain such decorative effects, every penny should be charged to advertising, as in no other way can greater publicity for one's business be carried out. To all who see it, the impression is at once favorable, and the florist is recognized as an artist in flowers.

At all such periods as Christmas, Easter, Thanksgiving, Valentine's day, Mothers' day, Memorial day and the opening of the fall season with autumn leaves, etc., there are opportunities for extra and timely decorative features, that call favorable attention to the store, and are sure to bring new business. At Christmas, arrange spruce or cedar trees over the cornice, decorate them with toys, red chenille, and miniature electric lights. Place a broad band of green boughs from the pavement to the cornice, on both sides of the store, and dot it with bunches or large stars of red immortelles or chenille. Decorate the whole front artistically with laurel wreathing, using bunches of red immortelles at the tieing of the loops. At Easter, white and purple immortelles or chenille take the place of the red, and Georgia pines instead of the spruce trees and branches. Fill the cornice box with Easter lilies, and spiræa.

For Thanksgiving week, corn stalks, with the ears half husked, and laurel branches can take the place of the green boughs, with some sheaves of wheat over the cornice.

Red hearts in profusion, on a background of southern smilax and pines, will give the front a very attractive appearance for St. Valentine's day. Large gilt bows and arrows can also be used with good effect.

Mothers' day should be green and white with a large script. Mother's day, and date, made of white chenille, placed against a flat background of laurel—this across the whole front of the store would be very conspicuous.

The Memorial day decoration should be of laurel, red, white and blue shields, and separate stars of the same color, together with a plentiful use of bunting and flags. All these feature displays should be up at least seven days before the event, so as to call attention to it, and get the full benefit in returns. All feature decorations should be at once changed back to the normal, immediately the event is past.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, has in its recent rapidly increasing activities been a great tonic to the retail business. The feature of last year's annual meeting was the display of the advertisements used by the various stores in their bid for business. The star exhibit in October will be of far greater benefit. This is to consist of photographs, made of the street front of the shops of the members. Nothing the association has so far done will so greatly enhance its usefulness. In getting this picture, each store will be made to look its best as seen from the street. There will be effects produced that were not thought possible, and a precedent or standard will be set, which in the increased local business, such an inviting exterior is sure to bring, will warrant a continuation along these lines. The vital energy of the F. T. D. is the business created by each member in his own store; keeping this telegraph delivery feature to the front at all times is essential, as comparatively few of the public know of this method of rapid delivery. All hats off to the member who brought out this photographic idea. It means a big boost for the business everywhere.

Chrysanthemums.

One of the most showy and decorative of the florists' cut flowers is the chrysanthemum. As now grown, when in the height of its season, there is nothing to compare with it in size of blooms, length of stem, or the wonderful coloring of its beautifully formed flowers. There are many still in the business, however, who can recall when this fall beauty was considered of little consequence, nothing being seen that was any larger than the ordinary pompon of today; growing to a single stem was not known at that time. Disbudding to get larger flowers for exhibition purposes, by private gardeners, first showed the possibilities, which commercial growers were not slow to realize, and wonderful strides were then made in forcing flowers for the market. Their season comprises the two months of October and November, when the great bulk of the stock is marketed. Extra well grown Golden Glow, the earliest yellow variety, finds a good sale during September, as does Smith's Advance, the earliest white, and some of the very late sorts are carried well along in December, but these latter are said not to be profitable as flower buyers tire of them by that time. During October and November, they are one of the most profitable flowers of the florist's stock. They are popular with the public, and are practical for all kinds of design or decorative work.

During the chrysanthemum period, they should be featured and made a principal part in all the store's decorations. Display them in floor vases and vase baskets, according to their size and length. Arranged with autumn leaves, which blend so beautifully with their shades of orange and red, they are very effective. Crowding them together in jars, to be placed in the case until asked for, loses all their decorative value. They can be sold singly or by the dozen, from the vase or vase basket, just as well as from the fibre jar, and much faster, as their artistic arrangement attracts attention. Certain varieties look best in baskets of a color that will blend or show a good contrast; the pinks in light blue, the reds in brown, the yellows shades in green or dark brown. Nearly all colors show up well in white or gilt. Flowers are much like other merchandise; they have to be well displayed to have attention called to them, so that their beauty will become so impressed on the observer, that they are led to desire and finally purchase them.

The small vase or tumbler baskets, which are so justly popular, can be used to good advantage with all the smaller flowered stock. The outdoor pompons, when the weather is favorable, come in very good colors, which when nicely arranged in suitable baskets, will be found very salable. The artistic arrangement of these small flower holders should be studied; the colors of the flowers, either used singly or coupled with another shade, which should blend or contrast pleasingly with the duotoned basket. A little knot of ribbon gives a nice finish. A larger flower or two worked in is also a good addition.

Each basket in a dozen or more should be prettier than another. When a lot of these are placed together, as a table full in a prominent part of the store, they are sure to attract buyers.

Good-sized, wide mouthed bowls, filled with bunches to be sold at a medium price, for those who want to a take a few home for the dining or library table, will require frequent stocking up.

Chrysanthemums are admirable for all kinds of spray or bouquet work. Their straight, stiff or medium strength stems, well clothed with foliage, lend themselves to graceful grouping, which in combinations of autumn leaved branches, make possible very artistic color effects. Such clusters are especially popular at the debutante teas, where, arranged about the room, they make a wonderful showing. They are also splendidly adapted for the funeral spray, being the principal flower used for this work during their season. The double spray or casket cover is most effective. Two large, loosely-made sprays are placed together and tied at the handles so as to make one spray about six feet in length. The center space is then filled in with shorter flowers, stemmed on sticks, which find a good hold in the handles. A good sized ribbon bow should also help fill this space, and at the same time, give a finish. Palm leaves can be used as a foundation, keeping the spray in shape during transportation or handling.

As a center for the dinner table, they are, in their varied colors, very effective. All yellow, all pink or white, are the shades generally selected for the luncheon. Autumn leaves or cut croton sprays are a great addition.

A beautiful effect, where there is no chandelier in the center, and rather a low ceiling, is to place a center rod that reaches to the wall above, in a base on the table. Flowers are tied to this slender column, spreading out well at the top, this space covered being extended by short-stemmed flowers stuck in a light wire frame work held against the ceiling by the center support. Much of the foliage is removed from the stems tied to the center column, so that it shall not be too thick and clumsy. When nicely done, the impression given is of a growing plant or vine in full flower. It is not, of course, true to nature, but produces a splendid decorative effect.

For the church wedding, they give a strong, bold color, and at the same time, light up and relieve the somberness of the groups and banks of palms. In tall standards, either side, they canopy the center aisle in a most effective manner. Another aisle decoration is to place a bunch at the end of each pew, tied with a good sized bow of ribbon, making a beautifully decked path to the altar.

Plants in flower, are useful for store decoration, selling, and arranging in groups of palms and ferns. As single specimens for sale, they should be featured with a little trimming to hide the pot, and add to the attractiveness by this bit of decoration. The plant looks better, sells better, and the recipient is better pleased for this little touch, which costs little but the time it takes.

VISITORS TO ROSE GROWERS OF PHILADELPHIA, PA.

With Philadelphia Rose Growers.

Through the courtesy of John Burton, and his sons, Alfred and George, a company of 16 members of the craft enjoyed a trip, October 21, to the large rose growing establishments in Montgomery and Bucks counties, Pa. The members of the party were John R. Andre, John Burton, Alfred Burton, George Burton, J. W. Colflesh, W. H. Engler, E. A. Harvey, Evans Harvey, Chas. E. Meehan, Stephen Mortenson, Frank P. Myers, A. A. Niessen, S. S. Pennock, Martin Samtman, John Westcott, and Robert Kift.

Meeting at the Burton homestead, at 7:30 a. m., an inspection was first made of the original John Burton range, now under the management of his son, George. American Beauties are still a favorite here, although the number has been cut down from 50,000 plants to 25,000. These looked very well and were being grown to come in from Thanksgiving day on, with the heaviest crop to hit the holidays. Columbia was a favorite, taking the place of Maryland and Thora, a light sport of the same had been a wonderful producer. Columbia has so far proved a great bread winner. Stems that grade 18 inches appear to be the best sellers in this variety. A house of Premier looked well. The houses of Cypripedium insigne, well set with buds, were a feature. Mr. Burton's Queen street range was in excellent condition, there being houses of splendid Russell and Ophelia. Hadley is another standard, but still difficult to handle. When planting, Mr. Burton believes it is necessary to have strong young stock for best results.

Alfred Burton specializes in Russell and American Beauties. He has been very successful with Russell, being one of the first to find out its good qualities. He also has a large range filled with American Beauties.

The extensive range of Myers & Samtman, adjoining George Burton's Queen street plant, contain 100,000 roses, 60 000 of which are American Beauties which rose has long been a specialty here. The entire lot was in good condition, several blocks being now in. Other varieties were Russell, Ophelia, Hilda and Sunburst, which latter they do well. Hilda, their light sport of Maryland, a range of 8,000 plants of which was replanted this year after 11 years of service, is one of their best in returns. The 100,000 roses on the place had been replanted the past summer. All roses, except American Beauties, are watered all the year round by the overhead system. They find this most effective and a great labor saver. During the winter it is necessary to shake the water from the foliage. A model packing room, with adjoining cold storage facilities, ample for this large place, appears very efficient. Large barrels are used as vases for the American Beauties.

A short run to Roslyn, brought a group of three quite large places in sight. Groshens & Morrison have their entire range planted with Mrs. Russell, which Mr. Groshens finds to do very well. The stock was in splendid condition. Edward Towill's place looked in good shape. This is the home of seedling roses, new varieties coming out each year. A deep shade of pink, almost a red, is the latest arrival that has been tried out. A house of it looks very promising. Several other seedlings have undoubted merit. Houses of Ophelia and Mrs. Stotesbury are in good condition.

Adolph Farenwald's large houses contained Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Shawyer and Sweetheart. Watering is done by the Skinner overhead system, which is found a great time saver, syringing immediately after, which cleared the water from the foliage. The stock here looked well. Mr. Farenwald is thinking seriously of changing from coal to oil for fuel, which, if effective and not more expensive, will be more satisfactory in every other way.

A run was then made to A. M. Campbell's Ellenwood greenhouses, near Hatboro, where every inch of space in his over 50,000 feet of glass appeared to be working overtime. All the rose growers in the party were particularly pleased with the appearance of the stock. A feature is 10,000 Premier, which were making a great showing. Some "bull heads" were seen, which was ascribed to their very rapid growth. The entire place is planted with roses, all young stock this season. Double White Killarney looked particularly fine. A splendid lunch was then enjoyed at the Mineral Springs hotel at Willow Grove. Only for the hour, it would have been called a chicken dinner.

Stephen Mortensen's well ordered place at Southampton was the next stop. It is unnecessary to say that his stock of 39,000 plants were in keeping with his great reputation as a grower. Premier was six feet and over in height. These had been planted the first week in April, and had returned already over 50 cents per plant. Mr. Mortensen thinks it will easily beat Russell in returns. Columbia, Ophelia and Russell were fine. A large house of Killarney was on its last lap and would go out in the spring. Two houses of orchids were a feature. A block of Cypripedium Sanderæ, full of its light green flowers, was a picture.

The Joseph Heacock Co's. establishment, at Roelofs, was the next objective. Here the new house, 72x600 feet, was found fully glazed and one-half was being planted with sweet peas. The remainder will be filled with roses as soon as the ground is leveled off and sufficient steam pipes installed. Columbia looked very well, as did Premier, which was growing very fast. The dairy, with its 140 head of milking cows, was an interesting spot.

After a long run through a delightful country, the spires of the churches in Doylestown have in sight. Opposite the main entrance to the W. Atlee Burpee's Co.'s Fordhook farms is John R. Andre's well appointed establishment. The stock here was exceptionally fine.

Sunburst being especially noteworthy, with other sorts pushing it close for honors. Rose stakes, bent around a small gas pipe, made a sort of key ring, into which the top rose wire was placed and rigidly held. A tin shipping box interested the other growers, the same shape and size of the ordinary corrugated pasteboard, which it is thought will outlast many generations of these fragile carriers.

After being photographed, the party started for North Wales to see the Florex Garden range. It was nip and tuck in the race with the sun, which was rapidly sinking, a great ball of fire. The 20 minutes of daylight left on arrival, were made the most of, in a hurried glance through these great glass structures, the largest in the world. Premier and Columbia, the latter being largely grown, were doing very satisfactorily. Prima Donna and September Morn are still grown, but not in such large quantities. A light pink sport of Double White Killarney looks very promising. A new siding, which carries cars of coal to their bins, had proved a great labor saver.

With lights lit, the three cars made a quick return to Wyndmoor, where under the hospitable roof of John Burton, graced by the presence of Mrs. Burton and their daughter, all enjoyed a bountiful repast. A pleasant hour was then given to recounting the events of the well spent day. George Burton showed his versatility by entertaining the company at the piano on which he is quite an expert. With many thanks to their hosts for the delightful day the visitors finally departed. The registers showed that the cars had covered a distance of 115 miles.

GROWING HINTS OF THE EXPERTS.

Robert Jamison, in speaking of distance between plants, is of the opinion that the more you crowd a plant, the less you will get out of it.

Roses, such as Columbia and Premier, are such rank and fast growers that, as a rule, they are not given water enough, and this, in the opinion of Martin Samtman, is the reason for the deformed buds often seen on these varieties. Stock that is growing fast, needs plenty of water, particularly when setting buds, and without this extra nourishment, will come imperfect.

Too much mulching with manure at one time, is bad for Columbia and Premier, makes the growth too rank, and causes imperfect buds. It is better to give smaller applications and more frequent. This is the plan of Stephen Mortensen.

Wm. Geiger has this to say about filling bench space: "We plant whenever we have the space, roses or anything else. They generally come along and into flower at a time when we can sell them to good advantage. We topped Richmond chrysanthemums late in June, and planted the cuttings out of the sand into the bench in July." Each of these were seen supporting a beautiful large flower on an 18-inch stem. K.

BATAVIA, ILL.—The Kane Floral Co. is the new name of the retail branch of the Batavia Greenhouses business, which has been taken over by Chicago interests, with Thomas Conlon, formerly with Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, as manager. The business, as above named after the county, is to be incorporated.

Morris County, N. J. Flower Show.

The twenty-third fall flower show of the Morris County, N. J., Gardeners' and Florists' Society, was held, October 29-30, in the armory, Morristown, N. J. This society has for years been noted for staging good shows, and this year it amply sustained its reputation. One may believe that in arrangement, rather than in material, this show was an improvement on the average chrysanthemum show. For a number of years, it has been the custom in shows of this kind, to arrange long lines of large blooms, with short stems, in glasses. There was always something wearisome to the beholder in this practice. If he had a fervid imagination, it reminded him of that custom so pleasing to governments in the dim past—, of striking off the head of a rebellious subject, and affixing it to a gate post. In the Morristown show, while there were single specimens, the chrysanthemum stock was largely arranged in groups, with, we believe, better effect.

At one end of the hall, on a raised platform of large space, the Charles H. Totty Company, Madison, N. J., made a fine exhibit of many varieties of chrysanthemums, exhibition, single and pompon varieties, but not in competition. This company, for 10 vases of single chrysanthemums, in 10 varieties, six sprays to a vase, took first prize. Also, for 10 flowers of pink, first, and 10 flowers of "any other color," first. In addition to the above in the chrysanthemum classes, prizes were awarded the New Jersey hospital, Greystone Park, (Otto Koch, Gr.); Dudley Olcott, Morristown, (Chas. Burbanes, Gr.); Mrs. Redmond Cross, Morristown (A. Failer, Gr.); Joseph Bradley, Morristown (Howard Cole, Gr.), and Frank Brease, Morristown.

In the center of the hall there was a group of chrysanthemum plants in flower, arranged with foliage plants for effect covering 75 square feet, by Robert Tyson, gardener on the estate of Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Madison, N. J., which took first prize; Major L. F. Dunham, Madison (Ernest Wild, Gr.), second. A group of chrysanthemum plants in flower occupying 50 square feet, arranged for effect, Major L. L. Dunham, first; David Francis, commercial grower, Morristown, second. For 24 flowers, in four varieties, six of each, Mrs. Twombly was first. For 15 flowers, in five varieties, three of each. Maj. L. L. Dunham was first. Other prizes were taken by the last named exhibitors, their complete exhibits being conspicuous features of the show.

ROSES.

At this time of the year chrysanthemums usually predominate in shows, but in this one, the roses, if not taking such large space, were noteworthy attractions. A silver cup, offered by Miss Ruth Twombly, for a table of roses, the table 5½ feet in diameter, was won by the Charles H. Totty Company. The varieties were: Frank W. Dunlop, Hadley, Madame Butterfly, Ophelia, Double White Killarney, Premier, and Columbia. This company also made a fine display of the variety, Frank W. Dunlop, on long stems, arranged for effect, in a tall handle basket.

In the rose classes the Duckham-Pierson company, Madison, N. J., came near making a clean sweep of first prizes. They took first for Premier, Columbia, Mrs. Charles Russell, Hadley, Ophelia, and Double White Killarney. L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J., took first for Mrs. Aaron Ward, and second for Ophelia, Hadley and Premier. For a vase of 25 blooms, one or more varieties, arranged for effect, Mrs. Twombly was first and Noe & Ruzicka, Madison, N. J., second. There was no competition in American Beauty roses.

CARNATIONS.

Although it is yet early for carnations, there were good exhibits. In the various classes the Rose Shop, Summit, N. J., took five first prizes. Other first prize winners were Otto H. Kahn, Woodbury, L. I., N. Y. (Jas. Fraser, Gr.); Forest F. Dryden, Bernardsville, N. J. (J. D. Davidson, Gr.), and Dudley Olcott.

ORCHIDS.

For table of orchid plants, in flower, arranged with ferns for effect, Mrs. Twombly was first; F. F. Kerr Est., Summit, N. J., second. Joseph A. Manda, West Orange, N. J., made an interesting exhibit of a table of Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ, not in competition. Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., exhibited rare varieties of cypripedium, not in competition.

Table decorations by commercial florists were staged, October 29, as follows: John M. Barker, Morristown, first; The Rose Shop, second; David Francis, third.

The judges were: Frank H. Traendley, New York; Eugene Dailledouze, Brooklyn, N. Y.; W. H. Waite, Rumson, N. J.; Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; William Turner, Rumson, N. J. Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J., superintended the show.

On the evening of October 29, the society gave a sumptuous dinner to the judges and a number of their friends, Frank Traendly being the guest of honor.

H. C. Holmes, a commercial florist of Morristown, occupied 75 square feet of space with a well arranged exhibit of palms and other foliage plants, not in competition. A. F. F.

Horticultural Society of New York.

The exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York, held in the American Museum of Natural History, October 30-November 2, was not up to expectations or to the excellence of former years. In several past seasons the great attractions of the society's fall shows have been the large specimen bush, standard and odd-shaped chrysanthemum plants grown on the Lewisohn and Delamar estates. Neither of these estates exhibited this year. There was also a heavy falling off in the entries of cut stock from other private exhibitors. It may be that the unseasonably warm weather had a bad effect on much stock intended for the exhibition, and again, it is possible that much stock is being held for the exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America show which will open November 5. But, notwithstanding disappointments, there were a number of creditable exhibits. The commercial growers, including the Chas. H. Totty Co., A. N. Pierson, Inc., Lager & Hurrell, Joseph A. Manda and Robt. G. Wilson, as our military friend would say, "saved the day."

Near the entrance to the hall, Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., staged a novel and attractive exhibit of orchids. The centerpiece was a large plant of Ardmanthe Foroii (Vanda). It was a remarkable production, having flowering tendrils six to eight feet in length. This took the sweepstakes prize, a silver medal. In the collection were a number of rare types of cypripediums and other varieties, the collection winning another silver medal. Joseph A. Manda, West Orange, N. J., won a gold medal for a table of Cypripedium insigne Sanderae.

The rose section was interesting, showing what we believe are the latest and best productions. The Chas. H. Totty Co. received a silver medal for the varieties Frank W. Dunlop and Madame Butterfly, and A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., were awarded silver medals for Crusader and Pilgrim. Other awards in the rose classes were made to Mrs. J. Hood Wright, New York, (Chas. Thomas, Gr.); Mrs. L. V. Skidmore, Great Neck, N. Y., (Louis Peante, Gr.); Miss S. D. Bliss, New Canaan, Conn., (John T. Burns, Gr.).

In chrysanthemums, the Chas. H. Totty Co. took first prizes for a vase of 20 bloms, one variety; collection of pompons, 25 varieties, and collection of singles, 25 varieties. Other awards in this section were:

Vase of one or more varieties, arranged for effect with foliage—Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., (James Stewart, Gr.) first; Mrs. Payne Whitney, Manhasset, N. Y., (Geo. Ferguson, Gr.) second. Mrs. Whitney also took four first prizes for specimen bush plants.

Twelve vases, 12 varieties, three blooms of each.—Mrs. E. S. Bayer, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., (Alex. Thornson, Gr.) first.

Twenty-four varieties, one of each,—Mrs. Bayer, first; Mrs. Whitney, second.

Collection of singles, 12 varieties.—Miss Bliss, first.

Collection of anemones, six varieties, disbudded, six of each.—Mrs. Whitney, first.

Collection of pompons in any varieties.—A. N. Pierson, Inc., special prize.

Vase of large blooms.—Mrs. Howard Phipps, Westburry, N. Y., special prize.

In carnations, Mrs. Whitney took six first prizes and Mrs. Wright, two second prizes.

Robert G. Wilson, Brooklyn, N. Y., was awarded a silver medal for collection of ferns, a different type of Pteris tremula. These were of large size and attractive, of graceful habit and said to be very rubust in growth.

DES MOINES MEETING, NOVEMBER 11-13.

The Iowa Horticultural Society, working with the Society of Iowa Florists, will hold its annual autumn show, November 11-13, at the Coliseum, Des Moines. We are looking forward to a splendid meeting, full of interest and enthusiasm.

At the banquet, Wednesday evening, November 12, we are to have with us J. F. Ammann, president of the Society of American Florists, who will address us on the subject, "Co-operative Publicity." Mr. Ammann recently returned from the annual meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at Buffalo, N. Y., and will, therefore, be eager and enthusiastic to pass on to us some of the many good things resulting from that meeting.

Let us have a goodly number of representative Iowa florists present, and show our national president that the florists of this section are alive.

J. T. D. FULMER,
S. A. F. State Vice-President.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Following a recent meeting of local florists it is reported that the trade here went on record as favoring Sunday closing.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The following is taken from the October number of the Journal of the S. A. F., delayed in its appearance through the vexatious strike in the printing trade in New York, which has tied up in the neighborhood of a thousand publications:

"THE INFLUENCE OF OUR SLOGAN."

"Of late, we have, in the columns of the trade press, presented evidence of the growing popularity of our slogan, 'Say it With Flowers,' and its use in the direction of publicity other than that which our campaign fund provides. George E. M. Stumpp, one of New York's prominent florists, and a generous supporter of our campaign, is a member of the Kiwanis Club, a national organization of business men, with branches in all of the principal cities of the United States. The club has an official organ known as the "Kiwanis Torch," and Mr. Stumpp sends us a clipping from the August number, which is further evidence that our slogan is carrying us beyond the sphere wherein we hoped to spread our doctrine. We intended in our limited space to reproduce only a portion of the article, but the sentiment in it is so beautiful that we ungrudgingly present the greater part of it. It is written by the editor, who evidently wrote it while convalescing from a sickness. Here it is:

"Then of course I had to lie around in bed for 10 days and Sim., the secretary of the Kiwanis Club, sent me some flowers, and he must have passed the word to some other secretaries for, bless me, if the wagons didn't begin to back up in front of the place with flowers until the neighbors thought I had died.

"Were you ever lying in bed, so sick you wanted to get up and bite your father, and then have your wife come to the bedside and lay a great armful of roses beside you? It makes a great big lump come up in your throat, and makes you sniff like you had a cold, and more than that, it makes you realize that behind all the badinage, all the kidding, all the college fraternity nonsense that permeates these organizations to which we belong, there is a real depth of love, a real sympathetic interest and a real feeling of regret that you are down on your back and suffering.

"To know that around your town are fellows who love you, who with an armful of daisies or a great sheaf of gladioli are saying: 'Old man, mere words are but empty and meaningless things, but let this bunch of flowers show you that I have stopped in the midst of a busy day to send you these, that you may know I have thought of you, and want their fragrance to represent to you the fine feeling of love and friendship I have for you.' Darn it all, fellows, as one after another came, I found that a big tear was creeping down my face, and I turned over so my wife would think it was the light shining in my eyes that did it.

"Our Kiwanis florist says: 'Say it With Flowers,' and I am in most hearty accord with the thought, for there is no way you can say it so beautifully, so sentimentally, and so well. Lots of times, I have sent them, but this is my first experience on the receiving end, and I want to tell you that I shall send more in the future.

"I never expect to need any charity from any of the organizations to which I belong. The prospects are that I shall never be in want. But if my years of activity, all my time invested, all the dues I have paid, and everything I have done in all of them, paid me no other dividend than those flowers when I was sick, I should feel amply repaid, and that I have made a most wonderful investment.

"We weary of eating and drinking, of going up and down the world, of looking at its mountains, the rivers that water it, and the cities which make its prosperity. We tire of chasing the laurel wreath of Fame and the bauble of Prominence. But we never tire of our friends and those who smile as they look into our eyes.

"After all, the friends we accumulate are the greatest asset we have as we grow on toward the twilight zone of life. Friendship is love with his wings clipped so he can not fly away, and as they represented these friends, those flowers were the sweetest things I have ever known."

And yet our committees are finding it a hard task to collect a fund big enough to carry our slogan—admittedly the best and most suggestive of all the slogans used in the business world—to the people whose minds are open to its reception, and whose pockets are to furnish the material benefit which is the object of our campaign. When our large army of non-subscribers can, even in a small way, realize the vast amount of good being created for our industry, and in which they are sharing, there will, perhaps, be forthcoming a better response to our appeals for subscriptions. It is hard for anyone who has intelligently followed the course of our campaign, to understand why so many florists continue to hold aloof with their support. E. J. Steele, manager of Steele's Pansy Gardens, Portland, Ore., writes, under date of October 23: "Friend Young:—Am pleased to see the good work going on, and often wonder if the multitude of 'Let George do it' tightwads in America does not make you feel somewhat weary." Did our committees not have the greatest confidence in the ultimate attainment of their aims, they might get weary. But the very excellence of their success so far is sustaining them in their work, and their "feet" are still "warm."

The campaign must be kept going. We have entered "the land of promise," and our reward is already at hand. Help us, Friend Non-subscriber, to our goal of $100,000, so that we may all share in the bounty which our craft so much desires.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

HEAVY SUPPLY BUT FREE MOVEMENT.

Trade has been very brisk during the past week, with the surplus kept well cleaned up with a number of debutante parties and teas. Cut stock is plentiful, and the market is overcrowded with chrysanthemums, which are now selling at from $1 to $4 per dozen. Carnations arrive in great quantities, the best being offered at $4 per 100. Roses were never better and clean up easily at fair prices. Single and button chrysanthemums are very popular and lead the larger types in sales. Easter lilies are entirely out of the market. Callas now return $3 per dozen.

NOTES

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the flower exchange October 25, the entire board of officers was reelected and the by-laws amended that the annual meeting might be held anywhere in the city. Following the business session, the annual banquet was held at the Parker House, among the speakers being W. C. Stickel, Henry Penn, Wm. N. Craig, Wm. Elliott and G. Thommen.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is showing a fine lot of orange trees in fruit. Good cuts are being made of cyclamens and begonias, as well as Oconto and Halliday chrysanthemums.

Wm. Elliot is now cutting fine rose stock at his Madbury range. At his Brighton houses, he has a fine stock of chrysanthemum plants. S. K. G.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" week at Washington, D. C., is reported an unqualified success.

THE New York Sun Paris special says it is understood that the United States and Great Britain have consented and passed what is described as a "move unique in the history of the empire" in the permission just granted to British commercial travelers and representatives of business houses to travel on any British warship leaving the country for abroad.

THE Central Trust Company, Chicago, in its November digest of trade conditions says: "Business totals for September were large, and so far for October, they have continued large, but it would be unreasonable to assume that we shall not soon feel the effects of decreased production. It is probable that the business totals for the month of October will show a decline."

Personal.

Adam Graham and two daughters, of Cleveland, Ohio, are planning a trip around the world, leaving home the latter part of December. They propose to tour California, sailing from San Francisco early in February for the Orient.

More Cars for Coal.

The federal railroad administration has taken steps to increase the number of cars available for moving coal by issuing orders, effective immediately, that where cars are not unloaded by the consignee within 24 hours after delivery, coal will be dumped on the ground and the cars put in service again.

Chrysanthemum Society Exhibition.

All indications point to a splendid showing of fine stock, both from commercial and private growers, at the annual meeting and exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, in connection with the American Institute of the City of New York, in the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street, that city, which opens as we go to press, continuing three days. A number of very large blooms have already been staged and others are on the way. Noteworthy among the flowers already in place are the fine specimens of the variety, Mrs. C. W. Johnson, entered by Charles W. Johnson, Chicago, secretary of the society. The exhibit of the Chas. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., also presents some promising new offerings. All classes will be well represented when all of the displays are in place, including much excellent stock from private estates.

REPORTS OF EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

Cincinnati, O., October 25.—No. 11,017, pink Japanese reflex, scored 84 points commercial; exhibited by Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.

Chicago, October 27.—Clarice, light pink pompon, scored 86 points; exhibited by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.

CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Sec'y.

The Coal Strike Menace.

Aside from the general distress and discomfort that a general strike of coal miners would bring about, it would be a calamity to the florists of this country. The Society of American Florists and kindred organizations, while powerless to prevent a strike, should be swift to pledge their support to the administration and congress in whatever steps may be taken to avert this impending disaster. Ex-President Taft, is not a man that is easily excited, but here are extracts from a speech he delivered at New Haven, Conn., October 26:

"The radical element in labor organizations is seeking to compel a change in the government of the United States, and the conservatives, who deny that this is the purpose of the steel and the proposed coal strikes, will lapse into the common cause with the radicals. We must resist this attempt to take the country by the throat, and by highwaymen's methods to force political and unreasonable economic concessions. We face, during the coming winter, the possibility of widespread distress and lawlessness which will require our whole strength to relieve and suppress by the authority of government.

"It is proposed to put the whole country under a duress of threatened starvation, freezing and complete paralysis of business industry to secure a complete readjustment of social conditions, a redivision or annihilation of property, a taking over by the state of all industries, and a subjection of the large majority of the people to the labor soviet."

The ex-president states the situation with clearness and courage, and his words should be heeded.

HEAVY CHRYSANTHEMUM SUPPLY.

It seems that every one who grows chrysanthemums was, and is, right on crop at this time, especially with the white sorts. These, with yellow following a close second, came in very heavy, while in the pink shade, more could have been used. The heavy cut at this time no doubt is the result of the continued mild weather thus far. Growers of roses wisely timed their crops so that shipments at this time are only normal. First class carnations are not yet in oversupply, but due to the popularity of the chrysanthemums, do not command the high prices obtained some time ago. Work for social activities is noticeably greater than it was a year ago, while there is also a good deal of funeral work at irregular times. On October 29-30, we had our first killing frost, so that from now on, indoor crops will have no more competition.

NOTES.

Herman V. Hunkel, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., has returned from St. Paul and vicinity. Market conditions there, he says, are much the same as locally.

C. C. Pollworth thinks that eventually Premier and Columbia will replace the Russell rose. Without doubt they are the favorites in this market up to now.

Gust Rusch & Co. report business, especially the shipping trade, very good the past week. Their growers are all cutting chrysanthemums at this time.

Anderton & Seaman is the name of the new firm who opened a very neat store in the Wells building last week. Here's wishing them unlimited success.

The writer has been nursing a broken rib since October 20, caused by slipping from a bench at the Heitman-Oestreicher Co's. greenhouses.

Nic Zweifel and wife and daughter, Edna, left November 6 for Los Angeles, Calif., where they intend to spend the winter months.

DEMAND QUIET IN ALL LINES.

Business generally the past week has been slow. The weather has been exceptionally disagreeable, and transient trade nil. Social work has been quiet with the exception of a little spurt for Halloween. The supply of stock has been heavy. Chrysanthemums of all kinds, including pompons, are in heavy supply, and only move at bargain prices. The stock is exceptionally good. The local frosts have not as yet been heavy enough to dispose of the dahlias, and this is one of the reasons the market is flooded. When this supply is cut off, it will take a heavy load off and give other stock a better chance to be disposed of. Roses also have been in heavy supply, with exceptionally good flowers offered at very reasonable figures. Cleanup lots are offered as low as $10 per thousand, which is anything but encouraging to the grower. Carnations are not coming in very heavily as yet, and as a consequence, the price has not suffered so much. The quality is steadily improving. Violets and sweet peas have made their appearance, but not in sufficient quantity to be figured in the daily supply. Other miscellaneous stock is of good quality, but has little call. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

The downtown florists the past week have been holding sales on chrysanthemums. However, the weather was against them most of the time. We have had rain continuously for eight days past, and the only relief seems to be that long looked for cold weather.

The results of the bowling contests the past week were: Sweet Peas took two games from the Daisies, and the Carnations took two games from the Roses. Chas. Kuehn lined up with the Daisies the first time this season.

Fred Foster has opened up a fruit department in connection with his flower store on Olive street. When the writer was in his store a few days ago he had an elegant display and stated it was going like a house afire.

The Sunday closing idea is gathering momentum, and it is hoped that by the first of the year, a majority of the florists will fall in line.

AMPLE STOCK TO MEET GOOD DEMAND.

Business during the past week has been good, with a profusion of indoor stock trying to compete with outdoor flowers, dahlias, calendulas and cosmos being in rivalry with pompons, carnations and sweet peas. Chrysanthemums in fine variety are plentiful and command good prices. Roses are also numerous but the demand is light and the same may be said of carnations. Orchids are of excellent quality and have a good sale.

NOTES.

The florists' club had the pleasure of listening to an interesting talk on "Publicity" by President J. F. Ammann of the Society of American Florists, which was very much appreciated. The speaker handled the subject in a way that leaves no doubt as to the benefits that will be gained for the trade in general, and individuals in particular who support this worthy movement. There should be no hesitancy on the part of any floristt to do his share.

Leon Neubeck, son of L. J. Neubeck, one of the leading florists of this city, died October 27, death resulting from heart failure. The deceased was an active young man and conducted an establishment on Connecticut street, with prospects for a bright future. Mrs. Neubeck died last spring, being survived by her husband and one son. The sympathy of the trade is extended to a sorrowing father and mother, and the young man.

BUY DIRECT FROM THE GROWER

Roses, Carnations, Beauties, Chrysanthemums and Pompons

The superior value of home grown flowers is that they are perfectly fresh. We bring them direct from our greenhouses to our store three and four times per day, a few hours after being cut. On perishable stock like flowers, this is a big item, Quality. We pay our growers ten to fifteen per cent higher wages than is paid in the Chicago district. We have better men and they grow better flowers. We Are Rose Specialists and are now cutting from 245,000 Rose plants all in one range of glass besides quantities of Chrysanthemums, Carnations and Beauties.

With all these advantages for our stock our prices are never higher than other houses ask, and in a number of instances lower.

TRADE IS IMPROVING.

Business has been rather quiet the past week but is improving at this writing with stock in much shorter supply, although there is plenty to go around. Carnations have dropped some in price and considerable pushing is needed to move them at the reduced figure but the buyer need not be surprised if they advanced again in price before the week is over. Chrysanthemums are seen in quantity in practically all the wholesale stores and are obtainable at times in large lots at bargain prices. Fancy chrysanthemums are none too plentiful and command high market prices but the general average the past week was low. Pompons are seen in large numbers and have dropped from 50 cents to 75 cents per bunch to 35 cents to 50 cents per bunch with one or two exceptions. American Beauty roses are good property and clean up nicely each day at satisfactory figures considering the general market conditions. Roses in general are in heavy supply and of splendid quality. Mrs. Chas. Russell are moving fast but Columbia and Premier need pushing at times. Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Shawyer, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Champ Weiland, Richmond, Ophelia, Montrose, Sunburst and Ward are the principal other offerings in their line not to mention the miniature varieties, Cecile Brunner, Elgar and Baby Doll. Sweet peas are a factor in the market and the receipts of Paper White narcissus are heavier. Snapdragon, daisies and calendulas are on the list of offerings. Orchids are on the short side and so are lily of the valley and gardenias. Violets, lilies, callas, bouvardia and indoor asters are among the offerings not already mentioned. Greens are plentiful. Ferns in most cases have advanced to $3 per 1000. Wild smilax is bringing $6 per case. Some fine boxwood is seen and is moving nicely. Trade is gradually taking on a brighter outlook and the market conditions have taken a decided change for the better this week.

About 2,300 members of the railway express drivers, chauffeurs and conductors' union, went on strike, November 5, at the Sebor street barn of the American Railway Express Co. The walkout will seriously affect both transfer freight and all city deliveries, union officials declared.

NOTES.

Over 2,000 clubwomen sold flowers on the streets and in public places October 29. The Illinois Colony Club, whose aim is the care of aged women, put on the sale, and nearly all of the 1,200 members of the club, assisted by several hundred of the clubwomen, obtained a large amount of cash through their efforts. The receipts will go to endow a section of the Oak Haven Home for old people to be built at Western avenue and 113th place.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association reports a 20 per cent increase in their sales for October compared with the same period of last year, which is accounted for by the increased supply of stock and not to high prices, which were low, taking the whole month into consideration.

The Retail Florists' Association will meet at the Hotel Morrison, next Tuesday, November 11, at 4 p. m. when the election of officers will be held. Every retail florist is cordially invited to be present whether members or not, so a large attendance is expected.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a heavy supply of chrysanthemums, which include quite a number of Bonnaffon of splendid quality. Some fine pompons of recent introduction are attracting the attention of the city buyers at this house.

William F. Schofield, the North State street florist, had a very attractive Halloween window that made the passerby sit up and take notice. Black cats, pumpkins and oak sprays were used extensively in the decoration.

F. J. Simon, formerly employed in the local wholesale market, is now with the Fulton Truck Co. He has had several offers from the wholesalers, and it may be possible that he will again be employed in the market.

George Rozakles, proprietor of the store known as the Chicago Florist, 17 West Monroe street, is doing a nice business in selling hot chestnuts as a side line. He has quite a number of florists as customers.

E. B. Washburn and family have returned from a pleasant visit in the east, and are the guests of C. L. Washburn and wife. They will leave the latter part of the week for their home in California.

Zech & Mann report a great improvement in trade, with a heavy demand from out-of-town points. The city call for stock is considerably heavier, and the November sales, so far, have been large.

C. W. Johnson left November 3 to attend the New York show of the Chrysanthemum Society of America this week, taking with him a number of blooms that looked like prize-winners.

V. J. Ludwig, Jr., Columbus, O., was a visitor at E. C. Amling Co.'s store this week. He reports business as brisk, and is looking forward toward a big holiday trade.

W. R. Albright is the latest addition to the office force of Peter Reinberg's store, which will make things easier for Herbert Hansen, who is now acting as manager.

A. L. Vaughan, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., has sold his home at Oak Park, and has purchased a bungalow at Oak and Forest avenues, River Forest.

James J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., is due here November 8.

Guy French, Arthur Weber, Kenneth Budlong, Herbert Budlong and Peter Showsboe, foreman at the Peter Reinberg greenhouses, visited the establishments of Emil Buettner, Weiss-Spandikan and the A. F. Amling Co., recently. The new red rose Crusader and the new pink rose Pilgrim, grown at some of the places, impressed the visitors most favorably and appear to be very promising varieties. They are the first new roses sent to this section for trial a year before being ready for distribution.

Miller & Musser have had a big week and filled several large orders, one of which called for a large emblem 8 feet high, which was suspended from the dome of Temple hall in the Masonic Temple. The design contained 400 white and lavender chrysanthemums, together with the necessary accessories. In addition to this piece, the order called for 15 large baskets of roses and chrysanthemums. The occasion was the constitution of Temple lodge, A. F. & A. M. by the grand master of the state.

STRIKES CAUSE DIMINISHED DEMAND.

A combination of bad weather, steel strike, and last, but not least, the coal strike, has a tendency to put a damper on business in this district. October was the wettest month since the weather bureau was established here, with but two exceptions. It was also the warmest since 1890, which does not help put any energy into business. Outdoor stock is still coming in heavy, which does not give the greenhouse stock a fair chance, and prices are not what they should be for this season of the year, and as this city is the center of the steel and soft coal industries, it is the first to feel any depression when there is any trouble or lay off of either. All we can do is to make the best of it, and hope for a speedy settlement of the trouble. The small towns in this vicinity seem to be hit harder than this city, as the shipping business has dwindled to almost nothing. The supply of American Beauties and roses has slowed up, which is a good thing, as everything seems to run to chrysanthemums at present. They are arriving in large quantities, and can be had in any color or size desired at very reasonable prices. The supply of pompons is also heavy, and they are not bringing what they should. Carnations are improving in quality, and are the one flower that there is no trouble to move. The shipments of eastern dahlias have been discontinued, as they were hardly bringing enough to pay for shipping them in. Sweet peas, daisies and calendulas are coming in larger quantities and improving in quality daily. Greens are plentiful, and move readily. This market is receiving more stock than ever before at this season, and at times, it is hard to move it at any price.

AMPLE SUPPLY HARD TO OBTAIN.

There has been some trouble of late in getting a large enough variety of stock to meet all the demands of the buyers, which is about the best answer that can be made as to the state of business. The receipts are all being cleaned up in fine style, and the public is meeting the prices without any complaint. Chrysanthemums are, of course, the favorite and will be for the coming month, while roses are forced to drop back into second place. The late offerings have been all that could be asked as to quality, and some especially fine Chadwicks are seen. Pompons are also going strong and violets are meeting their usual big early season sale. The cut of orchids is falling off and California is supplying the difference, and the same is true of lily of the valley. Baby roses are being shown freely, and with single chrysanthemums and violets, are corsage leaders. Primulas, cyclamens, all kinds of the smaller ferns and the big sword fern, calendulas and zinnias are selling heavily. The local growers report a quick sale for all of their greenhouse stock, and some of the smaller shops state that they cannot get certain lines at home. The water transportation problem with California is about settled now, and the lines which can be handled in this way are again plentiful. Three local growers are offering in a small way now, and say they believe it will be possible to make the growing for this season of the year pay them. Labor is easier to secure now than before, but there is no sign of any reduction in costs. However, all of the trade are agreed that general prosperity is the rule.

NOTES.

A window of note, and one of the most carefully planned sets ever seen in this city, was arranged by the Hollywood Gardens. Black and gold were used throughout. The floor was covered with black velvet, and in the center, a large mirror with a black frame, was laid. A large black basket, containing yellow Chadwick chrysanthemums went on this, and at the back, a mahogany stand with a black light was set. At one end, was another mahogany hall stand, with two ornate gold candlesticks, finished in polychrome, flanking a low, black basket of bronze and yellow pompons. In the foreground two splendid pot examples of Cypripedum insigne were placed. The small number of objects used, made these all the more noticeable.

Cattleyas, baby roses and violets, in various sized baskets, formed the big window display for Rosaia Bros. this week, and helped to interest the customers in this novelty. This house cooperated with Carman's, a women's specialty shop, in the latter's annual sale. Violets and chrysanthemums, mostly bronze, were used all through the shop, and for the first day, small corsages of violets, advertising both concerns, were given to visitors.

The Holly Flower Shop, although having but small window space, made a timely showing of tiny pumpkins of the usual Halloween carving, interspersed with yellow pompons, maple and bronze chrysanthemums and small pot ferns. The placing of a large yellow chrysanthemum on the pumpkin instead of a top, with the water container concealed, drew attention.

With all of her former employes returned from service, Anna J. Burns, proprietress of the Burns Floral Company, reports all signs are indicating a prosperous winter season. Late features have been several big pieces of decoration at the launching of ships from local yards, one of these being especially elaborate.

McCoy's shop struck popular fancy last week with a sidewalk display of holly trees, ready for transplanting into the purchaser's own yard. These were about six feet in height, and were selling, at retail, at about $50 per dozen. A large number of trees were sold.

"Bob" Newcomb, representing the Burlington Willowware Company, called on the local trade this week. He agrees with the dealers here that business must be good, if the orders booked can be taken as any criterion.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS TAKE THE LEAD.

The chrysanthemum now predominates in this market there being yellow, pink and white, ranging in size from the outdoor bunch offerings to large blooms that sell at $4 per dozen. There has been no frost up to this writing, which is rare for this section, but the dahlias have grown tired of blooming and will die a natural death for lack of use, if they are not frozen out very shortly. Roses are not plentiful, but carnations are to be had in fair numbers, but there are more Enchantress and white sorts than darker shades. Violets are beginning to arrive and a few sweet peas proved a novelty during the past week.

NOTES.

Thirteen members of the florists' club returned the visit of the Washington, D. C. club to our ladies night and attended their banquet at the capital. Charles Grakelow, of Philadelphia was also present and expressed his desire to visit our club early in January. The next meeting of the club will be held November 10. Attend and encourage our newly elected young officers.

The meeting of the Maryland Horticultural Society, in conjunction with the farmers' congress at Hagerstown was attended by several local florists. Bester, the Florist, Hagerstown, had the largest floral exhibit at the show. The meeting followed the Hagerstown fair and interest waned the first day until the "apple banquet," October 28.

Philip Welsh, of Glen Morris and Chas. Siegwart, of Catons, vie with each other in growing yellow and white Turner chrysanthemums. It is a hard matter to say which stock is the best. The flower buyers of this city always await the arrival of these fine blooms, and they are easily disposed of by the retailers.

Wolfe, the Florist, of Greenmount avenue, has returned from a business trip to Philadelphia. This year, he will use but half of his usual stock of immortelles for Christmas, owing to the high price.

Fred Bauer, of Govans, staged some fine carnations at the Hagerstown show.

CHRYSANTHEMUM PRICES DROP.

Business is keeping up in a most satisfactory manner. The big surprise of the week was the drop in price of chrysanthemums. There is some splendid stock being offered; in fact, much of it is as good as is usually seen on the exhibition table. The fall in price was occasioned by an oversupply, due to the decline in long distance shipping. All the standard varieties, such as the two Turners, white and yellow. Chieftain, Miss May Hunter, Mrs. O. H. Kahn and Nagirroc are to be had in large quantities. They are unexcelled in quality. That sterling old white, Madam R. O. Bertheur, is now in, and has resumed its old position as a very popular variety. Major Bonnaffon is not over plentiful as yet, a large part of it going out with the shipping trade. The Tuxedo anemones are being noted everywhere, and are decidedly popular. There is a sufficient supply of pompons, in all colors, to meet requirements. The rose market is about the same as last week. We have been receiving some extra good Russell; in fact, the best of the season, which are bringing $2.50 per dozen at the market. Columbia is not in oversupply, but we have plenty of Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Shawyer, Ward. Hadley and Radiance. Cecile Brunner is becoming more plentiful, but is bringing high prices, due to the demand from the shippers. The carnation supply has shown a decided improvement, and a much better grade of stock is now at the disposal of the retailers than for many months past. Prices are about the same as last quoted, with fancy stock bringing from $3 to $4 per 100. The violet market is showing much improvement as regards quality. Prices, however, have advanced 25 per cent, and will probably remain so throughout the season, due to the high wages being paid the pickers by the growers this year. Giant is now in, and in heavy demand for shipping purposes. Princess of Wales is the most popular variety with the local buyers. The rains have put an end to the dahlia supply, and light frosts in the country have cut down the arrivals of outdoor stock. The orchid supply is very good. We have plenty of cattelyas, all of fine quality, which are wholesaling at $60 per 100. There is a very nice supply of Oncidium varicosum and O. varicosum Rodgersii. These are very popular and are being largely handled by the stores. The cut of phalaenopsis is somewhat limited, as is the dendrobium supply. Erica mediterranean is coming in freely, and will be much in evidence from this time forward. Plenty of cut cyclamens are coming in. In pot plants, a few chrysanthemums are noted. Cyclamens also are arriving. Boston ferns are in most demand, followed by cibotiums and aspidistras.

NOTES.

The most important transaction occurring in this city in some time, was the arrangements perfected by J. A. Axell, wholesale florist, whereby in future he will handle the entire supply of roses and orchids from the immense range of Ferrari Bros. of this city, who have an enviable record in the production of high grade roses, and are among the largest growers on the Pacific coast.

Their orchid range is considered to be one of the finest in the country. By the acquisition of the entire cut from this range, Mr. Axell becomes one of the largest wholesalers in the west. He has also arranged to handle the entire output of the range of Kenneth Murray, of Redwood City. His place is devoted to roses and freesias exclusively, and produces large quantities of both. Mr. Murray has long been a specialist in colored freesias, of which he has an immense stock. Mr. Axell is greatly pleased over trade conditions, and is doing a large volume of business.

George C. Roeding, of the California

Manager Henry Avensino is receiving a heavy cut of roses from the Burlingame range of the E. W. McLellan Company. They will be cutting American Beauties next month from their other range across the bay. Shipping business is reported fine at this place.

C. J. McLaughlin, at 3091 Sixteenth street, has had a busy week on funeral work. Trade is always steady at this pretty store. He has built up a remunerative business on this street, owing to the high class of stock carried at all times.

Nursery Company, has been appointed to serve on the Roosevelt memorial committee. He has entered his duties with the characteristic energy he displays in any endeavor he undertakes. He says his nursery companies will undoubtedly experience their best year this coming season. Much to the delight of his countless friends, his health is now fully restored. He spends a large part of his time at Niles, since acquiring the California Nursery Company.

Luke J. Uzick, late with the J. B. Boland Co., is now in charge of the pretty store of the Nelligan Sisters, on Sutter street. This firm has purchased several magnificent specimens of Kentia Belmoreana from the Siegfried greenhouses at Berkeley. They are about 12 feet high and perfectly furnished. The Siegfried range disposed of them to make room for their orchid plants.

The finest Mrs. Chas. Russell roses coming to this market are being sent in by Henry Maier, proprietor of the Hillsborough Nursery, at Burlingame. The stock is splendid, and is bringing the highest price in the market. Mr. Maier's greenhouses promise to be quite a factor in the local supply this year, as they are in great shape and assure a generous supply during the entire season.

Levin's Floral Shop, on Fillmore street, is very pretty these days with its splendid displays of fall flowers, principally chrysanthemums. Mr. Levin says funeral business is always steady with him, as he ships quite a lot of it to the northern portion of the state. He has agents there, who send in their orders to him, and in this way has worked up an extensiye trade.

Podesta & Baldocchi are making their usual elaborate display of orchids this week. They are showing some elegant stock, which always seems to hold great crowds in front of their windows. They report business steady, with a brisk demand for fancy stock, especially roses. They are receiving some show chrysanthemums, which are nearly perfection as regards size and finish.

The new electric signs of the Art Floral Company, on Powell street, give a beautiful effect to the store at night. The blooming rose is especially unique and attracts all passersby by its novelty. Manager P. Vincent Matraia has received many compliments for his enterprise and his willingness to go down in his pocket to boost the slogan, "Say it With Flowers."

Henry Avensino, manager of the E. W. McLellan Co., of Bush street, is handling large quantities of Giant violets for eastern shipments. He says they have improved a great deal in quality of late, and can now be safely shipped to a long distance. His firm's greenhouses are sending in a heavy cut of the leading roses every morning and afternoon.

The Francis Floral & Decorating Company, at 465 Powell street, has been busy all week on decorative work. They are handling large lots of the new bronze chrysanthemum, Nagirroc, which they claim is very popular with their customers. Manager F. T. Schlotzhauer is well satisfied with the condition of trade.

Mrs. E. Lymberry, proprietor of the Bessie Boston Dahlia Farms, is proudly displaying a large order for her new dahlia roots, given her by Queen Elizabeth of Belgium during her recent visit here. These will be shipped to Belgium when they are cured, and will contain all of her famous novelties.

The Tennyson Greenhouses are showing some finely grown chrysanthemum novelties. Manager Bates is an expert in this flower and grows all the new varieties to the best advantage every season. He says plant business looks promising, with a possible shortage of good rose stock.

Frank R. Mills, at Palo Alto, is in with a fine cut of chrysanthemums, which he is shipping to the Sacramento market. His orchids are coming along nicely, and he is cutting a fine lot of labiata. The carnation houses are in fine shape and a good cut is being made daily.

Louis Copuro, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., says his firm has had a busy week on decorations. They are receiving a fine lot of cyclamens from the firm's greenhouses at San Mateo. They are receiving a large cut of ericas, which they find invaluable for basket work and decorations.

Julius Eppstein, at the St. Francis hotel flower store, is handling large quantities of cattleyas and gardenias. He says the demand for this stock has never been better with him. He is also receiving some splendid Maud Jeffries chrysanthemums, which meet with ready sale.

F. C. Jaeger & Son, on Powell street, have been doing a large amount of funeral work of late. They are having a steady demand for first-class chrysanthemums, of which they are large buyers at the market daily. They say White and Yellow Turners are the best sellers.

Domoto Bros., of Oakland, have a large cut of Ophelia and Columbia roses, for which they report a strong demand. They say shipping trade is good, and that stock cleans up nicely every day. Their houses look promising and should produce heavily this season.

Sam Matraia, of the Art Floral Co., who is in charge of the branch store at Cypress Lawn, says trade has been excellent since opening here. A large quantity of funeral designs are made up here daily for the various cemeteries in the neighborhood.

H. Corlis, at 704 Sutter street, has a very attractive store here, and is doing a splendid business. Special attention is given to artistic basket work. He is also going in for gardenias and orchids, and intends to feature these as leaders.

POMPONS—Indoor grown Pompons in all colors and a large selection of varieties.

THE LEO NIESSEN CO., 1201 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.

OUTDOOR STOCK STILL STRONG FACTOR.

Another frostless week has passed, so the "king of autumn" is still with us, and welcome or not, is quite a factor. One dealer found a ready market for 5,000, November 1, at quite good prices. All other outside flowers are also seen in quantity, particularly cosmos and chrysanthemums, which flood the market. Some of the outdoor chrysanthemums look very good, but there are so many of the inside pompons so much better, than the hardy stock has very hard sledding indeed. There is a great abundance of the choicer single flower, inside stock, which, considering the quality, finds a good demand at fair prices. Bonnaffon and Chieftain are two of the leaders. There are roses in all grades. Columbia, Russell, Premier and Ophelia are the favorites. American Beauties are to be had for all needs; as they come from only a few growers, the price is well maintained. There are plenty of carnations, but they are a bit slow in moving. One night, however, with the glass below 32°, will send them forward with a rush, and a 50 per cent increase in price. Indications point to a much larger stock of sweet peas the coming season, as when any crop for some reason fails, growers turn at once to sweet peas for a quick return, to fill in the space. The continued period of warm weather brought along the cattleyas very fast, and for a couple of weeks they were too plentiful. They are now on the short side, with a dollar value. The first Paper White narcissus are in. They will find a better market later. All kinds of greens are in good demand. Some florists regard this necessary filling as an expense, while other say they get paid for every spray, either directly, or like the traveling salesman's overcoat, it somehow gets in the bill.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

The features of the November meeting of the florists' club were the splendid and inspiring talks on advertising by W. F. Therkildson and Charles H. Grakelow. A definite plan was outlined for collecting money for a local publicity campaign which will be put in operation at once. On the exhibition tables were large vases of wonderful roses, among them Frank H. Dunlop staged by John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; Madame Butterfly, from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., and Pilgrim and Crusader from A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., all making a fine showing for the season. Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., sent a fine display of new pompon chrysanthemums.

NOTES.

Arthur A. Niessen and D. T. Connor were in Kennett Square October 30, on the occasion of the visit of the Lancaster Florists' Club to the Chester county carnation belt. There were 48 in the Lancaster party, and over 75 sat down to dinner in Kennett Square. Such inspection parties have a wonderful uplifting for the betterment of the business, as everybody uses their best endeavors, both to give and receive, so that all are mutually benefited.

It was great disappointment for the fall exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, that a suitable hall could not be found in this city, it becoming necessary at the last minute, to transfer it to Ardmore, 10 miles out in the suburbs. The hall was not nearly large enough to even approach the former glories of the many successes of years ago. It was, however, the best that could be done under the circumstances.

Charles Theiss, who has been for several years with T. Nelson Geiger, has severed his connection here, and taken charge of Frank M. Ross' 60th street store. In addition to this, he will also take up some of the buying, so as to assist Mr. Ross in this important department.

Mark Mills, in speaking of the Christmas business, warns the retailers that if they do not get on the job pretty soon nothing will be left for them. All standard stocks are scarcer than ever before, while the demand is greater.

Clarence J. Watson, who has been laid up for several weeks, is back on the job again. He is hard at work superintending the out-of-town service of the Leo Niessen Co., the volume of which is constantly increasing.

Edward Reid had a string of "cotton tails" in his ice box, November 3. Edward is a sure shot, the same today as when he ranked well up in the "blue rock competition" of the florists' gun club.

The H. H. Battle's stores have been extremely busy this fall. A handsome casket cover, made of 250 cattleyas and 1,000 liy of the valley, was part of a recent, large funeral order.

An office is under construction on the second floor of the Jos. Heacock Co's. store on Mole street. That last big house calls for the dignity of a city bookkeeping department.

S. S. Pennock, commenting on the supply of chrysanthemums, stated that he had never seen the pompons in such quantity or quality as this season.

Jack Duetscher is under the weather, a bad cold keeping him at home. A splendid stock of roses are here, however.

John Berger is proud of his firm's chrysanthemums, and says he has no trouble to handle the choice stock.

WARM WEATHER CURTAILS DEMAND.

There has been no improvement in business since our last notes were written, and at the week end, November 1, there was less activity in the wholesale district than on October 25. Warm weather in part accounts for this, and the temperature has been unseasonable and sultry. On October 28, the mercury climbed to 81, the highest October temperature since the weather bureau started in business 48 years ago. This not only has a bad effect on stock, but also brings it in too fast. Chrysanthemums cannot be held back, and many roses fly open in a short time. Carnations, as a commercial factor, are in a sorry plight. When they come in fresh, they are hard to move at $1 to $2 per 100, and they do not keep in the ice boxes. It is hoped that when better weather sets in, they will improve. The pompon chrysanthemums are another drug on the market, and the dahlias that arrive seem to meet with as much favor as the pompons. Throughout the past week, prices on special American Beauty roses fluctuated between $25 and $45 per 100, which is a fair indication of the unsettled condition of the market. Orchids took a fall, and good stock can now be bought for $1 per flower, wholesale. While tea roses are moving, and good, fresh stock brings fair prices, left overs go cheap. Good serviceable yellow chrysanthemums move fairly well at $3 to $5 per dozen; small and inferior stock at 50 cents to $2 per dozen. As showing how fast chrysanthemum stock is coming on, yellow Bonnaffons have been on the market since the last days of October. Chrysalora, McNiece and other early varieties are about cut out. While some of the wholesalers have ordered their growers to stop shipping dahlias, they are finding their way to the department stores, one of which, November 1, was advertising "50,000 dahlias at three cents each" and "50,000 at five cents each." Cosmos, zinnias and other outdoor stock is yet hanging on. Lily of the valley is not active, but if fairly good, brings $10 to $15 per 100. Quite an important branch of the business at present, is the trade in oak foliage, it being almost exclusively used with chrysanthemums. The supply of Paper White narcissus is not greatly on the increase, and the best brings 75 cents per dozen.

November 3.—Business continues dull, but as the weather is much cooler, and the elections are expected to bring many people back to the city, there are hopes for an early improvement.

Add Hort Society of N. Y. Show.....

Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., were awarded a special prize for an exhibit of dahlias.

NOTES.

David Clarke's Sons arranged a handsome wedding decoration in the Central Presbyterian church, November 1. In flowering stock, white chrysanthemums were exclusively used. The chancel was banked with tall palms and large cibotium ferns, with a tasteful arrangement of chrysanthemums on oak foliage in front and on the pews. The balconies were covered with southern smilax and oak foliage.

A delegation of florist club members attended the Morristown, N. J., flower show October 29, including Frank H. Traendly and Eugene Dailledouze, who acted as judges. The others were: W. C. Rickards, Jr., W. A. Sperling, A. F. Faulkner, J. S. Fenrich, J. H. Pepper, John Miessem, Elmhurst, L. I., John Donaldson, Patchogue, L. I., and the Reimels, brothers, Woodhaven, L. I.

Peter Theopine, the moving spirit of the Boulevard Floral Company, has returned from a stay of four months in Greece and other European countries, and is looking well. He says that in Greece, business is in good condition. He thinks that it will take France a long time to recover from the effects of the war.

Painesville, O.

The weather here has been exceptionally fine this fall, giving the florists and nurserymen an opportunity of getting their orders out on time. Never before was there such a great demand for trees, shrubs, perennials and greenhouse stock, and the man of the hour, is the one who used foresight and put on more steam during the business depression, and now has the stock to offer on the market.

The Storrs & Harrison Co. are shipping several cars of nursery stock daily. This does not include express orders which is also a large amount. This firm has installed some new up-to-date tractors, which can be used for many purposes besides tilling the ground.

Wilson, the Florist, is cutting some very fine chrysanthemums, and has a very attractive window display at his St. Clair street store.

Martin Kohankie, leading perennial grower in this section, says the demand surpasses that of all previous years.

Fred Endress & Son are shipping a carload of roses east this week.

BUSINESS LIVELY FOR ALL SOULS' DAY.

The first flower day of the fall season, All Souls' day, found the florists of this city splendidly prepared, both as regards quantity and variety of stock. The weather, however, up to Saturday afternoon, was very discouraging, being very warm and very wet; but it grew much colder by that time, and cleared up in fine shape, with the result that florists experienced the biggest demand of the season. There were plenty of fine chrysanthemums and pompons on the local market, and the call for these flowers was heavy. Chrysanthemums sold for from $2.40 to $8 per dozen in the shops. Pompons brought $1 and $1.50 a bunch. Roses were plentiful, and in excellent color and quality. Russell retailed for from $3 to $6 per dozen, with Milady priced the same. Violets brought 75 cents a bunch. They were not very plentiful. Carnations are not yet of high grade quality but sold well. Many chrysanthemum plants were seen in the flower shops, retailing anywhere from $1.50 to $4, and these enjoyed a brisk sale. Primroses, pepper plants, begonias and cherry plants were on display in fair quantities. Wreaths of various kinds always are in demand on this day for cemetery use, and they moved nicely. By special agreement, the flower shops were open on Sunday to take care of the big demand on this Catholic memorial day. They will be closed again next Sunday.

NOTES.

Schramm Brothers had a splendid stock of chrysanthemum plants, grown in their own houses by Albert Lehmann; also, a fine lot of begonias, primroses and pepper plants. They took advantage of All Souls' day by advertising liberally, in both daily papers, and enjoyed a substantial increase over last year's sales for this day.

Max Spanner had a fine display of chrysanthemums for All Souls' day, including some of the first Bonnaffon seen here this season, and states that business was very encouraging. His excellent window display created much interest and many sales for him.

Otto Krueger is distributor in northwestern Ohio for a fine line and good variety of all florists' supplies, and is working up a good business in these necessities. His business in East Toledo, organized but a few months, is making rapid progress.

There will be a big celebration here on Armistice day, November 11, as well as a memorial tribute to those who gave their lives for America in the war, but florists do not know as yet whether this day will develop into another big flower day.

The decorator at Freeman's Flower Shop is certainly to be congratulated on the clever and unusual baskets of chrysanthemums that he is arranging for that florist's display window. They are excellent drawing cards.

S. N. Peck is using a miniature aeroplane made of flowers as an added feature in his display windows to attract attention, which it does admirably. He reports a heavy demand for funeral work during the past week.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, December 3, was $60.

MRS. J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, left for Miami, Fla., November 4.

THE first report of bulbs frozen in transit comes from Dakota.

C. F. WOOD, Chicago, seed broker, has returned from Europe and is now making an extended tour of the home trade.

LILY importers and jobbers in New York are having their own troubles in reaching a uniform scale on giganteum prices.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. E. McKenzie, of E. E. McKenzie Co., Ltd., Brandon, Man.; C. O. Wilcox, representing Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.

BOUQUET GREEN picking in Wisconsin has been checked by two recent snow falls. First hand prices are about nine cents per pound, where available at all.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district remain about the same as last week, $2.75 for reds and yellows, and $3.25 for whites, for spot shipment. Talk of the short supply continues.

VILMORIN-ANDRIEUX & Co. Paris, France, have been awarded the White medal of honor for distinguished services to horticulture, by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade November 5, were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 $11.25 per 100 pounds; $12.70 bid for March; $12.85 sellers; $12.15 for year; $12.50 sellers.

EUGENE SCHAETTEL, of Vilmorin Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, sailed for the United States, October 25, on the S. S. France. His address while in this country will be care of John Munroe & Co., 30 Pine street, New York.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened 25 to 30 cents higher and December and January steady, December 3, with cash offered at $30.50. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.35, December, $5.65, March, $5.77½, and April, $5.75.

THE price of German lily of the valley pips made by one Hamburg concern is $25 per thousand f. o. b. German ports, cash in advance. The Dutch growers say their product is being denied inspection certificates by their home authorities.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—At the centennial exposition last month, one of the biggest events in the history of this city, W. H. Small & Co., the Ohio Valley Seed Co., and the Ben Peck Seed Co., had extensive exhibits in the agricultural building. The seed trade generally has been good, both wholesale and retail. Sol Boyer, well known representative of the Ohio Valley Seed Co., who has been under the weather, is again on the road.—W. B. C.

Telegraph Liability.

The Illinois supreme court handed down a decision October 31, holding as void provisions in Postal and Western Union blanks, which exempted telegraph companies from liabilities for their errors, unless the message is repeated or insured. The sender can therefore recover damage he sustains by errors made by telegraph companies.

Dutch Bulbs in N. Y. Strike.

Nothing on press day (Nov. 5) to indicate release of the Dutch bulbs delayed by strikes for a month on unloaded steamers at New York. Of two Holland importers, one admits having 800 cases, the other 300 cases, held on one boat with plenty of cancellations from customers, which they decline to accept. The average value of these cases is said to be about $100 each, all of which means increasing demand for footwarmers!

The steamers Anglo Chilean (Cunarder), and the Andre Luckenback (Luckenback Line), have been diverted to Philadelphia for unloading. Both have some bulbs, which they brought from Rotterdam.

The strike, so far as it affected the Cunard S. S. Glensanda, carrying a considerable quantity of bulbs, was broken November 5, much of the stock being moved on the 5th and 6th.

Washington Rulings and Regulations.

SHIPPING RATES TO EUROPE REVISED.

New rates on seeds, bark and roots, from North Atlantic ports to ports in northern Europe, have just been published by the United States shipping board. A rate of $2.25 per 100 pounds has been made on seeds of all kinds to Trondhjem, Bergen and Malmo; $2 to Helsinfors, Christiania, Gothenberg and Copenhagen, and $1.65 to Stockholm. On roots and bark, in bags and bales, the rates are $3 per 100 pounds to Helsingfors; $2.50 to Stockholm, Trondhjem, Bergen and Malmo, and $2.35 to Christiania, Copenhagen and Gothenburg. A minimum charge of $7.50 has been set by the board.

Rates have also been announced on cargo to Hamburg, Bremen and Danzig, Germany. The freight on seeds of all kinds is $1.50 per 100 pounds to the first two ports, and $2 per hundred to the last named. Bark and roots, in bales and bags, carries a rate of $2.25 and $2.70.

SEED AND BULB IMPORT REGULATIONS.

American importers of bulbs, seeds, etc., will be greatly benefited by new regulations soon to be approved by the secretary of the treasury. Existing customs regulations are to be modified so as to permit the statement of actual values of shipments, and so simplify invoices covering goods shipped from countries where the currency is held to be depreciated. Existing regulations do not meet the present emergency conditions brought about by the war, and have been the subject of much protest by importers and others.

It is proposed to permit consular officers in the country of exportation, to show on the invoice a comparison of the unit of currency of the country with our own money, and so take account of any depreciation that may exist with respect to the former, and afford a basis for computing actual values. As it is now, the consul must certify to the value of shipments in the depreciated currency, the importer later being forced to pay duties based on the inflated amount so stated, and then waiting a long time for a refund to be made to him. Present methods of computing foreign currency values are uncertain and varying. Importers have often faced conditions resulting from the operation of the French and German laws, requiring that no account be taken of a depreciated state of the currency, and that all invoices give the value in actual depreciated currency, while in Italy, it has been the practice to show any depreciation that may exist. In French and German invoices, the difference often runs into large figures, and importers must pay duty based thereon when the merchandise is entered in this country.

Importers and custom house brokers have been urging treasury department officials to announce that the currency of the various countries is depreciated; that the German mark is worth only five cents as compared to 23.8 before the war, and that there is a considerable variance between present and past values of the currency of other European countries. This will probably be done under the new regulations, or action taken that will bring about similar results.

Cucumber Seed Verdict.

F. P. Fleming, a truck farmer of Charlestown, S. C., has been awarded a verdict of $8,704.75 against the Landreth Seed Co. in the court of common pleas in that city. The plaintiff alleged that in December, 1918, he bought 50 bushels of seed from the Landreth company which were represented to him as White Spine cucumber seed. Mr. Fleming claimed that these seed were planted on a ten-acre tract and produced 4,000 baskets of cucumbers which he sold for the sum of $1,295.25. He alleged that the seed sold him were not of the White Spine variety but of an inferior quality of cucumber, and that as a result he was forced to sell at a lower price, losing $8,704.75.

Madson Seed Co's New Store.

The Madson Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis., opened its fine new retail seed and flower store November 1, celebrating the occasion by distributing several thousand carnations to visitors. The store is up-to-date and complete with every modern detail, the flower store being equipped with Lipman refrigerator and the seed store fitted with Heller fixtures. As a feeder for the store, three greenhouses, each 25x100 feet, are being completed by the John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago, on the outskirts of the town. Also a considerable acreage is devoted to nursery stock, including perennials. Morris S. Smith is in charge of the new store.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Loui ville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $3.00 to $4.00; celery, Michigan, box, $1.00 to $1.25; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 25 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.50; tomatoes, per box, 50 to 75 cents.

New York, Nov. 3.—Celery, per doz. roots, 10 to 50 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $5.00 to $6.50; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.75 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 27½ cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $5.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.50.

Celery Storage.

October proved one of the wettest months on record in our vicinity, (Ohio), it having actually rained 16 days out of 31, and in that length of time some six inches of water fell. This was accompanied by high temperature, and slow air movements; making conditions for plant-growth very unfavorable. Most celery fields suffered from blight to a great extent; and the growth to date is very unsatisfactory—tall, thin and lacking substance. Hilling machinery could not be used, owing to the excessive moisture, and hand labor was unavailable. All these circumstances have put the celery crop in bad shape; the early crop unfinished and unsold, the late crop too soft and unsound for long storage. To save any part of the crop now, there is nothing left but trenching, provided we get weather favorable for that operation. We have had no frost to date—not even as much as to touch a bean or tomato vine. If severe weather does not freeze this unprotected celery, storage can be attempted any time now. We aim to have all celery packed away by Thanksgiving. Some frost does not hurt green celery much; we have always made it a rule to figure that any celery that resumes erect positions after a severe frost is all right, but when the leaves drop and do not come back after a thaw, we consider it worthless for storage. We have for many years practiced storage in trenches, digging those two spades wide, and deep enough to take the entire celery plant; pack close and erect, and use no earth around roots. Strip the plants in the field of all surplus leaves to relieve crowding in the trenches. We roof as fast as the work progresses by using boards on "A" shaped frames. Generally we use bleaching boards, and nail them lightly, leaving one upper board loose for airing. These roofs are at once banked to keep air currents and frost out, and we are careful also to keep rain out. Ventilate as much as possible. While this entails a great deal of work, the extra price received later on is a consideration. Besides this method has often saved part of our crop, even if grass green, as it will bleach in the trenches.

MARKETMAN.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

Thursday, October 30, opened up threatening rain, and little prospect of that lost art "seeing the sun," but in spite of this, we gathered at the home of President Elmer Weaver, via trolley and automobile, and after seeing that all were provided with accommodations, the start was made to West Grove, Chester county, picking up members and machines along the route, until we numbered 48 at our last stop, Christiana. This is the home of M. J. Brinton, our Lancaster county "lily king," and we spent a short time looking over his place, but found many of the lily houses empty, as bulbs were not to be had to fill them. They will be planted as fast as possible with narcissi, freesias and other bulbs, as well as lilies, as the the latter are beginning to arrive. The carnation range is filled in good shape, and part of the space is up with stevia, snapdragons and chrysanthemums.

Reaching West Grove at 10:30 a. m., the Conard & Jones Co's. establishment was our destination, and a full hour was spent here inspecting what was new to many of our party, house after house being filled with mail order stock, that will pay dividends to the buyer, and sent out under a system that makes errors a rare occurence, all of which accounts for the large trade they have built up in this line. With Antoine Wintzer connected with the firm, one, of course, expects to see cannas, and we were not disappointed. The large number in the fields were, of course, about over their beauty, although they were still presentable, but a number of his seedlings were in boxes inside, and they plainly show his untiring effort and great skill in hybridizing. There were some 20 or more, all good, but among them are several that will make the name of Wintzer revered for some generations to come.

Robert Pyle is, of course, the foundation head of this business, and as an organization, he can be almost as proud of it as Mr. Wintzer is of his cannas. It was through Mr. Pyle that we were invited to make this trip as a delegation, and for the remainder of the day, he was our host with the assistance of Mr. Yeatman and Mr. Carey.

They piloted us to the immense new house built, by Richards Bros. This is in its second year, and is filled with the best carnation plants we have seen this season, and proves that a new house, and new soil, will produce results that the man with an older house, and soil that has been growing carnations for a number of years, cannot obtain, unless his place is big enough that he can get soil that is practically virgin for each season.

Howard Thompson's establishment was next in line, and here carnations were just a trifle behind the Richards Bros.; in fact, if it were not for the unfair comparison, all of the stock we saw was in what one would call fine shape. Vieing with the greenhouses as an attraction to our party, was the fine old Chester county homestead here, making a perfect picture on the side of the hill.

Lawrence Thompson had the usual number of carnation houses, a few houses of sweet peas, and mushroom houses galore, all of which promise a revenue for the coming winter, with the mushrooms abut 30 laps ahead of the greenhouses at the present time.

One of the lasting impressions of this trip, will be the few varieties of carnations that are grown in Chester county of the places we visited. Matchless, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Benora, Aviator and a few Sagamore were on the list. In my boyhood days, I remember a trip through this section, when from 12 to 20 varieties of carnation were to be found growing on a moderate sized place. Now, one sees whole houses of one or two of the above varieties, showing the commercial trend of this business.

It was now getting close to one o'clock, and appetites were keen, so a quick run was made to Kennett Square, and 72 of us partook of dinner at the hotel, our 48 as guests of the Chester County Florists' Club. We also had with us S. S. Pennock and wife, Arthur Niessen, and Messrs. Connor and Bates of the Lord & Burnham Co., of Philadelphia. Grouped at round tables, with a Chester county host or two to each visitor, the dinner became a social event. After the coffee, Robert Pyle acted as toastmaster, proving himself no novice in this position. After welcoming us as guests, in a manner that left no doubt as to its sincerity, he called on Mrs. Albert M. Herr for a few remarks as a representative of the ladies auxilliary. She in a few trite words, expressed our appreciation of the hospitality shown, and asked every one present to boost the S. A. F. convention for Baltimore in 1921. M. J. Brinton, in his usual eloquent style, voiced the sentiments of the men of our association, and short addresses were given by Arthur Niessen, Elmer Weaver and S. S. Pennock, followed by Mr. Wilkinson, who bade us God Speed for the Chester County Club.

Before leaving Kennett Square, we visited the establishment of Wm. Swayne, who has the largest assortment of chrysanthemums in the state and whose houses are always a treat to lovers of this flower at this particular season of the year. A house of radishes, planted between his snapdragons, as a catch crop, shows that greenhouse room has some value in his estimation. Yeatman & Way had a wonderful house of tomatoes, heavily set with fruit, and the foliage good and healthy top to bottom. They also grow sweet peas and mushrooms in quantity, a number of new hollow tile houses being added to their already large space given to mushrooms. T. K. Larkins is in the same line of business, and as he is a member of the state senate, and has to spend considerable time in Harrisburg, he has adopted a unique way of handling his establishment by giving 50 per cent of the net returns to his employes, instead of the usual weekly wage, and retains the other 50 per cent for running expenses and his own end of the business. This worked out very well last season.

Turning in our tracks, we went back to Brandywine Summit and visited the establishment of A. Harvey & Sons. Here we found the old houses torn down, and replaced by modern structures along the lines of their large house built several years ago for sweet pea growing. Everything now is planted to roses, and they will have 46,000 bloming plants this winter. Not having seen any other rose establishments for comparison, we can not say that they are the best in the country, but there certainly could not be any much better. They are timed for a heavy holiday crop, and unless I miss my guess, their cut this season, will run beyond the 800,000 they disposed of last winter.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

THE Peterson Nursery, 30 North La Salle street, Chicago, issues the following guarantee: "We will replace with three, every peony or iris plant blooming untrue to description."

CHILLIWACK, B. C.—Manager Trotter, of the British Columbia Nurseries Company, has announced the removal of the company's headquarters from Vancouver to Sardis, where the largest holdings are. He will move there shortly himself, and take charge. Forty acres are in use already, and 60 more have been leased.—H. M.

Peony Bulletin.

We are in receipt of the American Peony Society's Bulletin No. 9, which contains the proceedings at the annual meeting, held at Detroit, Mich., June 17, 1919, also an exhaustive account of the exhibition. To most of our readers, however, the most interesting features will be found in J. C. Wister's account of visits to the establishments of Auguste Dessert, at Chenonceaux, and Emile Lemoine, at Nancy, France, last May and June respectively.

Sassafras in Autumn.

In good years and bad years, the sassafras never fails to become a conspicuous object of beauty in October when its dark green leaves turn yellow and orange color, more or less tinged with red. This statement gives little idea of the warmth of color which the sassafras produces when it grows, as it often does, on the border of a forest of oak trees on which the leaves are still green. The sassafras is a handsome tree at other seasons of the year. In winter, it is conspicuous by its deeply furrowed, dark cinnamon-gray bark and bright green branchlets, which in early spring are covered before the leaves appear with innumerable clusters of small bright yellow flowers. The leaves, which are sometimes deeply three-lobed and sometimes entire on the same branch, are not attacked by insects. The fruit is a bright blue berry, surrounded at the base by the much enlarged and thickened calyx of the flower raised on a long bright red stalk. Among northern trees, only magnolias produce such bright-colored fruits. There is little time, however, to enjoy the fruit of the sassafras for birds eagerly seek it as it ripens.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Vick's Prophecy and Gould Bill.

Referring to the communication of Secretary John Watson of the American Association of Nurserymen calling attention to the Gould bill, sent to all members of the organization, October 15, and which was published in our issue of October 25, page 736, E. C. Vick, manager of the farm and garden department of the New York Sun, in a letter to Mr. Watson, dated October 28, 1919, says in part:

"In June, 1918, I made a prophecy at the conventions of the nurserymen and seedmen at Chicago. It was right along the line of the bill to which your letter refers.

"I cannot see why the nursery trade, as a trade, cannot take care of itself, without being fostered by the government. Regarding the department of agriculture establishing a nursery to help the nurserymen, if the government must run the nursery business, the shortest cut to that position is desirable. Why not have the department of agriculture establish a nursery in each state of the Union? This would save unnecessary shipping, placing all stock within a short radius of where it is grown."

INCLEMENT WEATHER BUT TRADE FAIR.

Although it has rained the greater part of the week, trade has been quite brisk. It is believed that the inclement weather of the latter part of the period cut into the volume, however, as conditions are good for a still further increase in demand. One of the best features is the call for party and reception work. Weddings, also, have been quite numerous. With the opening of the social season, still better sales for all kinds of flowers are anticipated, and retailers have made preparations to take care of this. A good supply is coming into the local market, with roses and chrysanthemums the leaders. Sweet peas are also plentiful, and the quality is improving as the season advances. Carnations are also selling well at former prices. Rose offerings are principally Premier, Ward, Russell, Sunburst and Ophelia. Pompons are now coming in, and find ready sale. Stocks of all kinds continue to clear up each day, and there is little carried over. This makes the market most satisfactory, and gives the largest margin of profit to the dealers.

NOTE.

Stephens, the Florist, near Green Lawn cemetery, is advertising tulip, hyacinth and narcissus bulbs and urging planting now on home grounds.

J. W. L.

Morristown, N. J.

This city is one of the oldest and most attractive towns of the eastern states. A house containing numerous relics, in which General Washington for a time made his headquarters, is to the citizens and visitors an object of much interest. The town has a large public square, which contains many fine old trees. Numerous fine churches and private residences are other marks of progressive civilization. It has a number of commercial florists, and all seem prosperous.

David Francis, formerly a private gardener, combines the business of landscape gardening with that of florist. At his place, we met an old friend in the person of Harold B. Vyse, formerly a well known private gardener and prize winner at the shows. He is greatly afflicted with rheumatism, but keeps bravely at work.

John M. Barker is a noted grower of sweet peas. This is not the season for prize sweet peas, but in the recent show, he had an attractive display of various features, including a trophy awarded him several years ago for an exhibit of these flowers.

R. A. Elliott has a considerable area of glass, and an attractive store. In chrysanthemums, he has a house of the variety Golden Chadwick just coming in.

E. C. Holmes has a neat range and store near the railroad station.

E. A. Holton has a considerable glass area and an attractive store.

RUGOWSKI'S NEW ASTERS

Read the Following Strong Endorsement of Men Well Qualified to Judge:

MR. J. K. RUGOWSKI, Manitowoc, Wis.: September 15th, 1919.

"Dear Sir—In the name of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association, I wish to thank you for your exhibit of both Pink and White Asters at our annual meeting held at Milwaukee September 12.

"I am transmitting herewith the resolution passed at that meeting, endorsing these Asters as being very meritorious flowers. It was the sense of the resolution that these Asters be endorsed by the Association as having the largest flower and longest stems and in every way being superior to any Aster thus far seen in the market. It is with pleasure, indeed, that I am permitted to send this message.

"With best wishes for the future success of this flower, I am, Yours very truly,
"WISCONSIN STATE FLORISTS' ASS'N, H. J. Seal, Secretary."

Here's Another Proof of Merit:

"The sample flowers of Asters shown were the finest type of Ostrich Plume of Crego that I have seen in 32 years' experience." C. LITTLEFIELD, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

This Seed Will Be on the Market the Coming Season in Original Packages Only. Price, $1.50 Per Package.

WIZARD
TRADE BRAND MARK
PULVERIZED SHEEP—PULVERIZED CATTLE
SHREDDED CATTLE
MANURE
PROTECTS YOUR CROP

It is direct heat dried and sterilized, weed seeds, grass seeds, fungus and disease germs destroyed in a direct heat rotary drying process that does not change or destroy any of the valuable elements in crude manure.

Air dried manures cannot be sterilized and usually carry excess moisture that actually makes them cost more per ton than WIZARD BRAND even at the same or a lower price.

Look for the WIZARD BRAND Trade Mark tagged or printed on every bag. If it is not there you are not getting WIZARD BRAND protection for your crop and pocket book.

Your dealer can get WIZARD BRAND for you if you insist or we will quote with freight rate on any quantity from a bag to a carload promptly.

THE PULVERIZED MANURE CO., No. 32 Union Stock Yards. Chicago, Ill.

Evansville, Ind.

Florists report that business the past few weeks has not been brisk, due to the warm weather, there being too many outdoor flowers on the market. October showed a big falling off in trade over the corresponding month of last year, when the influenza was epidemic here. With the coming of colder weather, it is believed that business in this territory will show considerable improvement. Prices are reported satisfactory, and out-of-town trade is considered excellent, in view of the backward weather conditions. About 60 per cent of the business of some of the local florists is from out of town sources, the trade extending to towns in southern Indiana, southern Illinois and western and northern Kentucky for a radius of about 100 miles.

A flower show will be held at the East Side Library next May, which it is hoped, will be the first of a series of annual shows. The show will be patterned after the annual Louisville event, which has been given by the libraries there for the past five or six years. Ribbon prizes will be offered for bouquets and table decorations, and only amateur gardeners will compete. Florists are to be judges.

Thomas C. Rusten, for many years engaged in the floral business in this city and Chicago, who now is in charge of the public land department in the state auditor's office at Indianapolis, was here a few days ago, attending the centennial exposition and visiting relatives and friends. He was accompanied by his wife.

George Blackman, of the William Blackman Floral Co., attended the state meeting of the florists at Richmond, Ind., recently. Mr. Blackman and wife, also Theodore Kuebler, will attend the Indianapolis show, November 13-14.

W. B. C.

ELGIN, ILL.—Souster's annual flower show will open at the greenhouses, November 9, continuing a week. Manager George Mattison says this is one of the best forms of advertising for florists in small towns. He has a fine display of chrysanthemum plants in 42 varieties, for the occasion.

"X" Liquid May Save You Thousands of Dollars in an Emergency

SUPPOSE you suddenly discover that an unusual cold spell has cracked the heating boiler and it leaks badly!

Do you think it necessary to shut off the heat and risk enormous damage to the contents of the greenhouse?

Not at all!

"X" Liquid will repair any leaky or cracked boiler in half an hour. It will do a job that would take two workmen a week.

"X" Liquid Will Do a $200 Repair Job for $10.

It is not necessary to locate the leaks or cracks or know how many there are.

The action of "X" is entirely automatic. When poured into the boiler it mixes with the water and soon gets to every break in the metal. It flows through—strikes the air—and then hardens right in the hole. This stops the leak or crack. The heat in the water then sets this repair, making it as PERMANENT and as SURE as any welding job. In fact, where welding won't hold—as on cast-iron sections—"X" Liquid makes a perfect repair.

Makes Boilers Rust-proof and Scale-proof. Saves Coal.

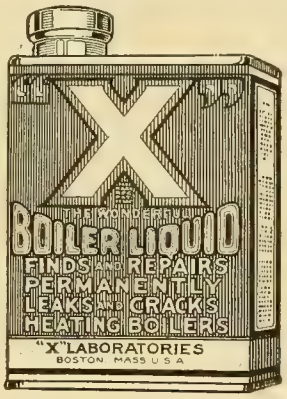
It is a remarkable fact that the same "X" Liquid used for repairing leaks or cracks will also eliminate rust and prevent scale from forming on the walls. This means greater heating efficiency with less coal.

"X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious ingredients. It is an absolute liquid, a scientific process for making boilers LEAK PROOF, RUST-PROOF and SCALE PROOF. Beware of inferior imitations which are trading on the reputation of the genuine "X" Liquid.

A Strong Guarantee!

You take no chances in using "X" Liquid. It is unconditionally guaranteed to make good. If it fails, you get a new can—or your money back.

But your greatest guarantee of the value of "X" is the fact that it is used, sold and recommended by 99 per cent of the manufacturers of boilers and radiators. It is used by the United States Government.



If your boiler cracks or leaks this winter, you don't have to worry about your greenery—if you keep "X" Liquid handy. You can do the repair job yourself easily.

Get "X" Liquid from your steam-fitter, or we will ship, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

BUSINESS UNUSUALLY GOOD.

An unusually satisfactory demand has been reported during the past week, with the supply plentiful. Chrysanthemums are of excellent quality and pompons are also showing improvement. Carnations are of good form and meet with ready sale. Violets also have a good call. Roses are excellent and some of the growers are making extra heavy cuts at this time, but have no difficulty in disposing of their supply locally. Pot plants are making their appearance and the demand for them is unusually good.

NOTES.

All indications point to a good meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society in the Hotel Narragansett. There will be a good exhibition of chrysanthemums in connection.

A. Davis, of the Riverside Greenhouses, is showing fine cyclamens in 8-inch pots, stock well grown. He also has some excellent Boston ferns.

Wm. Hoffman, of Pawtucket, is cutting excellent chrysanthemums. The demand far exceeds the supply.

Splendid Exhibition of Fine Stock.

The cooperation of the Chrysanthemum Society of America with the American Institute of the City of New York in connection with the eighty-eighth annual fair of the latter organization, held in the Engineering building, November 5-7, resulted in a successful exhibition. The stock was good and well arranged and the promoters, managers, exhibitors and visitors were all apparently well pleased. In some former years, commercial exhibitors have been more prominent, but those that did exhibit on this occasion, deserve much credit for greatly adding to the attractiveness of the show. Noteworthy were the Chas. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and Charles W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Chicago. In addition to its prize-winning chrysanthemums and carnations, the Chas. H. Totty Co., covered over 100 square feet of space with a collection of many varieties of pompons and singles and fine displays of the roses Frank W. Dunlop, Madame Butterfly, Columbia and Premier. A. N. Pierson, Inc., staged a fine exhibit of pompons and singles, and also their roses, Pilgrim and Crusader. Charles W. Johnson's new seedling chrysanthemum, Mrs. C. W. Johnson, may yet displace William Turner as the premier white.

A number of private gardeners that for years have been faithful supporters of the fall exhibitions, were again prominent this year. Among them were James Fraser, many years with Otto H. Kahn; Thomas Proctor, now with W. R. Coe; George Ferguson, with Mrs. Payne Whitney; J. T. Bevans, with Miss S. D. Bliss; Adam Paterson, with Miss Cockcroft; J. W. Everitt, with J. T. Pratt, and a number of others whose names appear in the awards.

Relating to the prize winning varieties of chrysanthemums among the "big fellows," some of the old ones, William Turner, for instance, continue to come up smiling. Other good varieties that have been seen in former years, were Louisa Pockett, one of which, exhibited by James Fraser, took the prize as the largest bloom in the show; Mrs. G. Drabble, Mrs. Firestone, Lady Hopetown, W. H. Waite, Gertrude Peers, William Rigby, Elberon, H. E. Converse, and Glenview. In the C. H. Totty Company's collection, in addition to a number named above, Vermont, a pink, and Corporal Piper, a yellow, were fine productions. The Japanese anemones were attractive features of the exhibition, noteworthy being the varieties Surprise, light pink; Titian Beauty, bronze; Mrs. Geo. Hawkins, yellow; Clemenceau, pink, and Queen Elizabeth, white.

Again referring to the large and well known varieties, the following were noticed in good form: William Duckham, Pockett's Crimson, David Synse, Beatrice May, A. F. Baldwin, Yellow Turner, R. C. Pulling, Nagirroc and Nerissa. Both the commercial and private growers exhibited pompons and singles in such great variety that it would take a large catalogue to enumerate them. Enough to say that there were many good varieties. Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., exhibited several of their latest productions in disbudded pompons. Noteworthy were Miami, Juliana and Baby Doll, 1918 productions.

Special prizes were awarded Robert Cluett, (Edgar Osborne, Gr.) Williamstown, Mass., for vases of carnations and single chrysanthemums. W. A. Eagleson, secretary to the board of managers of the American Institute, efficiently cared for the clerical work of the exhibition. W. C. Rickards, Jr., who wears the smile that won't come off, was superintendent. The judges were: Wm. Duckham, Madison, N. J.; Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; John MacNicoll, Cedarhurst, N. Y.; Wm. Turner, Rumson, N. J.; Geo. Middleton, Tarrytown, N. Y., and Eugene Dailledouze, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the society was held in the Engineering building on the afternoon of November 5. The session was harmonious, and the members were well pleased with the condition of the society and the success of the exhibition. President Vert made his annual address and the report of the treasurer was presented. A letter from Treasurer John N. May was read asking that for good and sufficient reasons of a personal nature, he be relieved of the duties of that office. There followed a general discussion of matters pertaining to the welfare of the society in which President Vert, Secretary Johnson, Vice-President Turner, Arthur Herrington, Charles H. Totty and Eugene Dailledouze took part.

Election of Officers.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Thomas W. Head, Lake Forest, Ill., president; Z. D. Blackistone, Washington, D. C., vice-president; Charles W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Chicago, secretary; Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., treasurer. It was decided to hold the 1920 annual meeting and exhibition at Washington, D. C., the date to be hereafter announced, of which ample notice will be published and sent to members.

President Vert's Address.

Another year has rolled around, and we find ourselves once again attending the annual meeting of this society. It will be recalled at the last session that no invitation was extended to hold the exhibition in any other city, so the management of the American Institute, very kindly volunteered to give us this building again. It was very gratefully accepted.

We have experienced a most peculiar fall season, such as we have never had before, to the best of my recollection. The warm, muggy weather, seems to have injured blooms in many sections, and some of our finest flowers will, I am afraid, be missing from the exhibitions this year. The exceedingly warm fall has also operated to the disadvantage of the commercial growers, because we still have in excellent condition, dahlias, gladioli, and other fall-blooming plants, which come in competition with the chrysanthemums in the demand and which have made a very poor market for the earliest flowers, this year. The influenza epidemic, which created considerable demand for chrysanthemums last season, is also missing this year; but for this we are thankful.

It is a matter of regret that a larger interest cannot be created in this society to make our annual meeting better attended. If any member has suggestions to offer along this line, we will be happy to receive them. I should like at this time to say a good word for the secretary, who has been so instrumental in keeping the society together. I feel some recognition should be given him, since the salary he receives at the present time can only be considered more as a "joke" than anything else. I hope this suggestion will prevail, and he will be compensated in some reasonable degree for his valuable services.

The action of the federal horticultural board, in shutting off all imports from foreign countries, will possibly limit, to some extent, the number of new varieties distributed in America. I hope this will be the means of getting more members interested in hybridizing for new varieties. I do not feel that enough work is being done along these lines.

In closing, I want to particularly thank the members of the committee who have done, and are doing, their work, without any recompense, in the different large cities, in judging the new varieties.

I am also greatly obliged to the members for their support in the past, and will say at this time, that I am no longer a candidate for re-election, on account of the nature of my business, as I do not now grow chrysanthemums to any extent. I trust you will find a worthy successor for my place, and one able to carry the work of the society along better than I have done in the past. Thank you.

Secretary Johnson's Report.

The society, having decided at its last annual session to hold the eighteenth annual meeting and exhibition in conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York, the first work of the secretary for the year was the solicitation of the special premiums, and the arrangement of the special premium schedule, which, through the courtesy of Wm. A. Eagleson, secretary of the board of managers of the American Institute, was mailed to all members of the society.

During the season of 1918, there were submitted to the examining committees, 40 varieties, of which 34 were seedlings, and six were sports of existing varieties. Four varieties were offered for registration as follows:

November 11, 1918—Victory, seedling, white Japanese incurved, by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.

November 22, 1918—Marie Louise, Bronze sport of variety Patty, by the Davis Floral Co., Davenport, Ia.

February 7, 1919—January Gold, golden yellow sport of variety Mistletoe, by the L. M. Smith Quality Flower Company, Laurel, Del.

February 7, 1919—Dr. Hitch, white and lavender pink, shading to yellow, sport of variety January Gold, by the L. M. Smith Quality Flower Company, Laurel, Del.

The season of 1919 has been a good growing season for chrysanthemums planted for commercial and exhibition purposes, and many more have been planted than heretofore. The ravishes of the insect pests is a difficult problem for the growers to overcome, and is a subject that should receive consideration by the members, and the society should have the support of all growers of chrysanthemums to help find out the best methods of combating the many insects that now attack the plants. If the numerous chrysanthemum growers of the country, who have these difficulties to overcome, will only co-operate with the society, their assistance will be of mutual benefit to themselves, as well as to the members of the society.

The routine work of the secretary's office, consisting of sending out statements to the members, recording the varieties disseminated, getting out the report of the seventeenth annual meeting, and the solicitation of special premiums, was attended to in due season.

Your secretary wishes to acknowledge the kindness of Elmer D. Smith in furnishing him with a complete list of varieties disseminated in 1918, which was a great help in getting up the annual report.

To the examining committees is due the appreciation of the society for their very efficient work in the judging of the new varieties submitted to them.

The trade papers, as heretofore, very generously published all notices sent to them from time to time during the year, for which we owe to them a vote of thanks.

Since our last meeting, we have suffered a great loss through the death of Frank A. Friedley, of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Friedley was a leader in all the trade activities of Cleveland, and was in charge of much important work at the shows held at the time of our meetings there. He was also formerly vice president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

A detailed report of all money received, and paid over to the treasurer, accompanies this.

Treasurer May's Report.

The report of Treasurer John N. May, Summit, N. J., showed the society's finances to be in excellent condition, the expenditures during the year being $272.52, and balance on hand, November 1, $500.01, of which $200 is represented by special savings account, and the difference in open accounts.

Tarrytown Horticultural Society Show.

The twenty-first annual floral display of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in Music hall, Tarrytown, N. Y., November 5-7. Notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions, owing to the coal situation of the past year or more, the hall was well filled with choice plants and flowers, equal in quality to any previous exhibition held by this society. The chrysanthemum blooms were gorgeous and equal to those staged at any exhibition in the vicinity of New York.

Practically all of the exhibits were from private estates. Among the exhibitors were John D. Rockefeller, Finley J. Shepard, Dr. C. C. Brace, Emil Berolzheimer, David L. Luke, Thomas Luke, William B. Thompson, H. L. Tilford, Mrs. E. S. Bayer, Mrs. E. C. Converse, H. M. Sidenberg, Mrs. F. E. Lewis, S. M. Lehman, Mrs. F. H. Allen, and others.

The largest chrysanthemum bloom in the exhibition was Louisa Pockett, exhibited by Mrs. E. S. Bayer.

Certificate of merit was awarded to vase of Premier roses in F. R. Pierson's exhibit. He was also awarded cultural certificate for his entire display, which consisted of Columbia and Francis Scott Key roses, ferns, etc.

Cultural certificate was awarded Mrs. E. C. Converse for specimen ferns, also for vase of single chrysanthemums and vase of seedling chrysanthemums. Mrs. Converse also received honorable mention for vase of bouvardia. A. L. Gifford received honorable mention for exhibit of chrysanthemums in tubs, and vase of cut blooms; Mrs. H. Ollesheimer for exhibit of double flowering cosmos; and Mrs. Stanley McCormick for exhibit of vegetable marrow and for exhibit of Squash Cocozelle de Napoli. Finley J. Shepard exhibited a very beautiful specimen of Dracena Victoria and was awarded a special prize on the plant.

The judges the first day were Alexander MacKenzie and Thomas Proctor, of Oyster Bay, and Robert Angus, of Rye; the second day, P. W. Popp, of Mamaroneck, Arthur Griffin, of Yonkers, and Thomas Wilson, of Tarrytown.

An Open Flower, Three-Fourths Natural Size.

Pennsylvania Hort. Society Show.

The chrysanthemum show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held November 4-5 in Masonic hall, Ardmore, Pa., there being no available building to be had in Philadelphia. It was a beautiful little show, small as compared with those held in the city, but lacking nothing in quality, some of the plants and cut blooms being exceptionally fine. A week later would have been better, as some plants were only half open.

The large specimen plants were staged in the center of the hall, with the cut flowers on low tables next the walls. Several groups of choice foliage plants, exhibited by Geo. H. McFadden, (D. Aitken, Gr.), across one end of the hall, made a good background, while either side of the entrance, the W. Atlee Burpee Co. staged a fine display of choice single and cactus dahlias. These were arranged in G. W. Kerr's best style. Considering the late date, they were very fine.

The large specimen chrysanthemum plants were nearly all tied down, making half-globes. They were the best specimens ever shown before the society, and with the fine cut blooms, were a credit to Gardeners M. J. Flynn, David Aitken, Alex. Lindroth, O. A. Muller, Wm. Fowler, Wm. Comfort, George Annand, Henry Fowler, John Macindoc and the Movilla Gardens.

Wm. Klienheinz carried off first in every class in which he entered, but one, that of the hardy varieties. His entries of nearly 100 choice blooms were enormous in size and finish; some were 10 inches in diameter. His specimen, single stem plants, in six-inch pots, were fine, as were most of the other entries in this class. He also won out with several entries of cut carnations, a vase of 150 blooms being beautifully arranged.

The collection of cut pompons and anemone flowered varieties was quite equal to any previous showing in these classes. A specimen plant of a double yellow tuberous rooted begonia, of the Sheeper's hanging basket strain, called Golden Shower, was wonderful in its wealth of flowers. This was exhibited by A. B. Johnson, (Wm. Comfort, Gr.).

A pink sport of Turner, a huge, but finished flower, blush pink in color, was exhibited by and named in honor of Mrs. J. L. Davis. The stock has been secured by Charles H. Totty.

A good showing of vegetables was displayed in a tent adjoining the hall. There were a number of entries of splendid stock. A well arranged exhibit was staged by Alex. MacLeod, gardener to S. T. Bodine.

There was a display of cut roses on Wednesday, including vases of fine Columbia, from J. H. Bartram, Lansdowne, and the new rose, Cornelia, from Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, as well as the new varieties, Crusader, Pilgrim, Madame Butterfly and Frank W. Dunlop, from the exhibition of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia the night before. The outside front of the hall was beautifully decorated with a display of tubbed evergreens in variety, from the DeKalb Nurseries of Adolph Muller, Morristown, Pa.

There was a very good attendance, and much favorable comment was heard on the excellence of the exhibits. K.

New York Botanical Garden Show.

The New York botanical garden, in cooperation with the Horticultural Society of New York, gave a flower show, November 8-10, in the new conservatories given to the botanical garden by Daniel and Murray Guggenheim. On November 8, the conservatories were formally opened to the public, a number of invited guests being present. The conservatories are of substantial construction, have a considerable area, and will greatly add to the housing facilities of the garden. They now contain large palms and ferns and a great variety of other stock.

THE EXHIBITS.

Mid-West Horticultural Exposition.

The second annual Mid-West Horticultural Exposition opened in the Coliseum, Des Moines, Ia., November 11, 20 states being well represented with excellent exhibits of apples, potatoes and other horticultural products. With fine weather prevailing, the attendance was large and the large hall, well filled with flowers, fruits and vegetables in excellent arrangement, was a center of interest. One of the best displays was that of Iowa State College, at Ames, and boys' and girls' clubs were well represented. The show, which will continue until November 15, is pronounced by all, the largest exhibition of its kind ever staged in the middle-west. President S. A. Beach and other officials of the state horticultural society are enthusiastic over the growth of the exposition and the possibilities offered for the development of the horticultural interests in general. Chicago Retail Florists' Association.

The Chicago Retail Florists' Association held a meeting at the Morrison Hotel, Tuesday, November 11, at 4 p. m., when the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: George Asmus, president; A. Lange, vice-president; John Wittbold, secretary, and W. J. Smyth, treasurer. George Wienhoeber, George Walther, J. L. Raske, Peter Duris, Andrew Chronis, L. R. Bohannon and John Canger were elected to the board of governors. The meeting was very enthusiastic and largely attended, with publicity the principal subject discussed. George Asmus gave a very interesting talk on this subject.

F. T. D. Clearing House Warning.

At the recent business meeting held in Buffalo, N. Y., it was unanimously decided at the annual meeting of the board of directors, which immediately follows the final adjournment of the regular session, that it was the sense of the meeting that more drastic action was necessary to bring habitual, slow-paying members to the realization that payment must be made according to our constitution and by-laws, Article 11, Sections 6-10, inclusive, which fully explains the duty of the secretary relative to past due bills. Disputed bills, of which many are received at the clearing house, shall be disposed of either by the secretary or through the regular arbitration committee.

The association has grown too large, and its responsibilities too great, to allow some members to have their names perpetually on the clearing house records. It is bad business, and should be overcome. Always keep this slogan in mind: "Say it With Flowers," and at the end of 30 days—"Say it with a Check."

The secretary does not care to use his official prerogative unless it is absolutely necessary. Leniency has always been practiced to those who have shown any tendency toward bettering or improving their business standing. The truly unfortunate one will always receive courteous treatment, providing they can and will prove to this office that their case is one of misfortune. We have been bitterly criticised many times for not exercising and fulfilling the exact meaning of the by-laws. The time has come when the provisions of the by-laws relating to the clearing house will be executed.

All members who have been officially warned to settle all delinquent bills, and have failed to do so, will find that their names will not appear on the Christmas membership list, which will be issued on or about December 10.

ALBERT POCHELON, Sec'y.

"Say it With Flowers" Week in Wash'n

"Say it With Flowers" week in Washington, D. C., surpassed all expectations as far as benefit from an advertising standpoint is considered. In addition to the many features embodied in the preliminary programme, which included sending flowers to the churches, having flower week proclaimed by the ministers, and similar gifts to hospitals and other benevolent institutions, the climax was reached on the evening of November 2, when in the presence of 5,000 Red Cross workers, with General Pershing, Mrs. Baker and other prominent persons seated on the stage, the florists of the capital presented to the executive committee of the Red Cross a six-foot basket, tied with a red, white and blue ribbon, upon which, "Say it With Flowers," was inscribed, amid tumultuous applause. The basket was afterward sent to the Walter Reed general hospital. William F. Gude made the presentation speech, and Z. D. Blackistone and George C. Shaffer carried the basket to the stage. During the evening, General Pershing stooped and kissed little Wilhelmine Gude, when she shook hands with him.

On Tuesday, through invitation, the large Curtiss "Eagle" three-motor biplane, carrying the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," was used in scattering tens of thousands of blooms, with a suitable card attached to each, over the nation's capital and vicinity. In the plane were William F. Gude, Miss Amelia Gude, Miss Virginia Blackistone, Miss Florence Kramer, Kirk Miller, publicity agent, and two Curtiss managers. In commenting on the uniqueness of this feature of the programme, the following is quoted from one of the Washington papers: "You may have seen it rain cats and dogs, but never before, Nature's smiles and God's gifts—lovely flowers." Two planes followed with cameras, photographing the flowers as they fell, the white cards to which they were attached, shimmering in the sunlight, and making them easily seen from far and near. The airplane in which Z. D. Blackistone was a passenger, after circling the city, developed engine trouble on its return to Bollingfield, necessitating a descent to the ground in the monument lot, the machine being wrecked by coming in contact with trees. Fortunately the occupants were not hurt.

From every point of view Washington's "Say it With Flowers" week was exceptionally successful, stimulated to no small extent by much favorable newspaper comment.

Thursday was Red Cross day, and a flower was furnished to every one who enrolled as a member. Some thirty thousand flowers were used for this.

On Friday, a handsome basket was sent to Mrs. Wilson from the florists of Washington with a suitable note.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS' SLOGAN BILLBOARD.

National Publicity for Flowers.

"THE SLOGAN BILLBOARD."

At last, the arrangements for the issuance of the proposed billboard, carrying the slogan "Say it With Flowers," have been completed, and our promotion bureau is ready to take orders. A sample billboard was set up at the recent meeting in Buffalo of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, and it appeared to meet the approval of all present, so much so that, altogether, orders are in for 87 of these beautiful signs.

The contract, which the publicity committee has been able to place, makes it possible to deliver a billboard at any railroad station in the United States for $50, freight paid to destination. A similar billboard ordinarily would cost at factory $90, so the great saving effected through our contract is obvious. Any florist, who has, or can control, a site suitable for the display of one of these boards, is urged to place an order for one at once. Besides helping the campaign, he will be helping himself, for he will be permitted, should he so desire, to hang a supplementary sign beneath the regulation billboard calling attention to his own establishment.

The sign is 20 feet long, and 7½ feet wide, and is in appearance similar to the sign shown in our illustration. The construction is of 26 gauge galvanized iron, on wood frame, and shipped in four 5 feet sections, with face bands. The board weighs, approximately, 250 to 300 pounds. The slogan will be painted to conform in design and color to the regular glass and transfer signs supplied by our promotion bureau. Three coats of paint are used, with one coat of heavy outside wearing varnish applied after the last coat of paint is dry. The back of the board is painted with one coat of pure oil black. The wooden supports, as shown in our picture, are not supplied, but they are of a nature to be easily procured locally. A blue print, or drawing, detailing the construction and method of setting up is to be furnished with each billboard. As sent out, a sign should remain in good condition for many years.

Without doubt, a large number of florists will wish to take advantage of this opportunity to bring our industry prominently before the public. As has been pointed out frequently, the florists are fortunate in that so many of them are provided with sites that cost them practically nothing for a display of this kind—along much traveled highways, railroad tracks, against potting sheds and outbuildings which are in public view, and often in cities on tops of buildings, in connection with their store structures, or on adjacent vacant lots. If a small body of men could, extemporaneously, as at the meeting in Buffalo, offer to take 87 billboards, to cover so many sites, what numbers of locations must be generally available? The publicity committee is confident that orders will quickly be forthcoming which will insure the erection and display of a thousand billboards. The price is a mere bagatelle when the value of the material and service is considered. There is much to be said in favor of outdoor publicity, especially when applicable to the subject of our campaign. One thing is certain—never was an opportunity for helpful and direct publicity ever presented at such little expense as that now presented to the florists. The secretary would be pleased to hear from all those who can take advantage of the offer here made. Simply send in the order for a sign, accompanied by a cheque for $50, and the sign will be promptly delivered at any designated railroad station.

NEW KIND OF PUBLICITY.

The value of our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," has been recognized in a direction quite apart from the course of our campaign. Just as the writers of fiction and sentimental prose are frequently using it in their work, when they wish to convey a thought as to an easy method of expressing feeling, the song writers have seized upon the line as a title for a song. All who were at the Detroit convention had the pleasure of hearing one such song, but it does not seem to have got into the realm of publicity. Now a prominent song publisher of New York is introducing to the public a similar song, of great merit, in fox trot measure, and is employing singers of high order to introduce it. The first exploitation was in Detroit during the past week. Harry Breitmeyer, of John Breitmeyer's Sons, writes the secretary as follows, in regard to it: "This week, Miss Grace LaRue is featuring the song at our Temple theatre. The Detroit florists have each taken one day to send Miss LaRue flowers, as well as to place vases of flowers in the theatre lobbies. I assure you it has made a hit with the theatre goers, and 'Say It with Flowers' is the talk of the public. The song is a wonder. If New York and other cities have the opportunity to receive these benefits, I would recommend your hearty co-operation." It is understood that the song is to be a feature in the prominent theatres of Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati and other large cities upon the circuits of the singers, with suitable stage settings, and it is expected that phonograph records of it, carrying the voice of a leading concert artist, will shortly be available. Wherever the song is to be featured, the florists situated locally, are urged to co-operate with the theatre management in the making of an appropriate floral setting. It is also suggested that special window trims in the florists' stores be made during the continuance of the feature.

SUPPORT THE CAMPAIGN NOW.

Subscriptions to the campaign fund are now most urgently needed. Our publicity committee has accomplished much, but it can do more, if supported as it ought to be. Our slogan is an out-and-out success already, and it is absolutely necessary that we build upon this success if we are to make "Say it With Flowers" a household phrase. This attainment is within reach, easily—if the big army of non-subscribers will "come across." It is such a little support we are asking individually that there need be no hardship entailed. A small cheque from the many will make up a goodly aggregate, something we can work with. Many florists every week expend more on unproductive matters than they need contribute to the campaign. Surely, it is not a question of stinginess that stands between the success of our movement and the support which we have a moral right to expect in an industry whose members have always been noted for their generosity and liberal mindedness in all things. Rally, now, chip in and help.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Sentimental or Commercial Florists.

We hear a great deal of the sentimental florists who have done and are doing worth while things, developing flowers, etc. We also hear about the commercial florists who are doing their part successfully marketing and selling flowers. Each have their part to do. We also have the type of florist who is wholly independent of any feeling, except his own progress.

To be a successful florist, one must have a combination of all three, sentiment, commercial and progressive. The first two points must be self-developed, but the third can be helped by joining the "Say it With Flowers" campaign and helping to further one of the best publicity movements that has ever been launched, and which should receive the support of every man connected with flowers.

With your support we can continue our campaign, which is proving its worth, by the manner in which florists throughout this country and Canada are taking up our slogan, "Say it With Flowers," and using it as a force in their local advertising, continually reminding the people of the many uses which flowers may serve.

Those who are using the slogan, know its worth already. To the others who have overlooked its importance, the quicker its adoption, the more general its results. Its benefits are many, and its usefulness is the way you treat it. Support it, and it will help you.

In appreciation, a subscription to Secretary John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York, and the combination is one hard to beat. Our publicity campaign calls for $100,000. We are about 60 per cent subscribed. Will you do your share? We will prove its effectiveness.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman Nat'l Publicity Campaign.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club met in the hall of the Engineering building on the night of November 10, President Kessler in the chair. The meeting was held at that place to give all the members an opportunity of seeing the hall before a final vote should be taken on a re-location. Chairman Henshaw, of the committee, brought the matter before the meeting, and by a standing vote it was decided to take the larger of the two halls.

Secretary Young reported for the national flower show committee. There has been delay in getting out the schedules for the show on account of the printers' strike. Much space has been taken. The programme will appear in an improved form. One new member was installed, and several nominations for membership in the club were handed in.

William Phillips, a member of the club, and a Brooklyn retailer, reported on what was being done in Brooklyn during "Say It With Flowers" week. Secretary Young read a report on what was being done in Boston in the matter. On motion, it was voted to postpone "Say It With Flowers" week until the time of the spring show. A representative of the government loan organization of the second federal district addressed the club on "thrift" as a national necessity, "work and save" being the theme of his discourse. His address was well received and cards were passed around for individual subscriptions, a motion to that effect having carried.

Resolutions of condolence on the death of J. B. Deamud were read and adopted.

The following nominations were read for officers for 1920: For president—P. F. Kessler, present incumbent, who declined renomination; I. S. Hendrickson, A. M. Henshaw. For vice-president—John G. Esler, Roman J. Irwin. For secretary—John Young, present incumbent; Edward C. Vick. For treasurer—Wm. C. Rickards, Jr., present incumbent; Wm. Kather. For trustees—A. T. Bunyard, Emil Schloss, Thomas Booth De Forest, Max Schling.

Secretary Young reported that Patrick O'Mara, the well known seedsman, and a past president of the club, who has had a long spell of illness, is slowly recovering. Secretary Young read a paper on the local publicity fund of the city of Buffalo, N. Y., and advocated a similar movement locally, in keeping with what is being done in other cities. He was followed by Wallace R. Pierson along similar lines. The club voted $100 for the Brooklyn publicity campaign, which must be ratified at the next meeting.

William A. Manda, a new member, son of Joseph A. Manda, was introduced and gave an interesting talk on his experience as a member of the United States Marine Corps, in which he served throughout the late war.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., made a fine display of single and pompon chrysanthemums; also a large new and beautiful chrysanthemum named Golden Barbara Davis, as well as the roses, Pilgrim and Crusader.

BUSINESS MAINTAINS STEADY TONE.

There has been no let up as regards business, and all the stores are reporting a fine trade and good prices. There has been a large amount of decorative and funeral work going on, and it, together with the shipping trade, is keeping the wholesale market cleaned up in good shape every day. The frosts have cut down a lot of soft outdoor stock, but, as yet, has not been severe enough to affect the chrysanthemums. It is likely to come any night, however. All the growers have prepared for it, and it is not expected that much loss will result. The supply of chrysanthemums continues to be heavy and prices are just about the same as last week. First-class stock may be purchased very reasonably. There is a shortage of small white chrysanthemums for funeral work. Turner is still the leading chrysanthemum in the market regardless of color. In pink, May Hunter and Dr. Enguehard are the leading varieties. Bronze colors are not so much in evidence this past week, showing that the season has passed its high water mark. There is plenty of Bonnaffon to be had, but this variety cannot now be classed as a fancy. In red, Amateur Conceit is the best offered. There is a great selection of singles, pompons and anemones to choose from. There is also a good shipping demand for these small flowers. The call for the large, fancy stock has abated somewhat, but it is expected that this is only temporary. When local supplies give out, the shipping trade always increases accordingly. There is a great improvement in the supply of roses. Stock is very good this week, and some fancy blooms are being handled. Mrs. Chas. Russell, just now, is excellent. This is easily the best selling rose when well grown. There is not a sufficient supply of it coming to meet requirements. As yet, we have had no American Beauty. This variety will probably commence to arrive next month, but in small quantities only, as very few of our growers are devoting much space to it. The supply of Ophelia, Columbia and Shawyer is ample for all needs. There is a large cut of red roses. Cecile Brunner is scarce, as is Mrs. Aaron Ward. Irish Fireflame is noted in most of the stores. The violet market is now in good shape again, owing to ideal growing weather conditions. The Princess of Wales is now first-class. There is a large supply, and prices remain unchanged. Shipping trade in this flower is quite heavy. The carnation supply is becoming more plentiful, but stock is selling well. Light colors are in most favor. There is quite a large offering of gardenias. Orchids, such as odontoglossums, oncidiums and cattleyas, are quite plentiful. The steady demand for these makes the prices always firm. The cut of ericas is not enough for the demand. There are no more dahlias or gladioli coming in. Cut cyclamens are in good demand. In pot plants, cyclamens are the only offerings. The stock is very good and finds a ready market. Ferns and asparagus are to be had in quantities to meet all requirements.

NOTES.

The Art Floral Company had the elaborate decoration of the California theatre, this week, on the occasion of the second anniversary of its opening. The foyer and stage were massed with great quantities of chrysanthemums and foliage plants. The work was done under the personal supervision of P. Vincent Matraia.

The firm of J. A. Axell, on Bush street, is now handling the chrysanthemum cut of the Lynch Nursery Company, of Menlo Park. Mr. Axell will also handle the output of their range of carnation houses. They expect to begin shipping smilax in about two weeks.

Shibuya & Tschida have been sending in a fine lot of bronze chrysanthemums this fall. They have won instant favor, owing to their size and finish. Nagaroe and William H. Waite have proved to be among the best of the newer bronze varieties for commercial use.

Plans have been completed for the annual chrysanthemum show, which will be held in Lindsay, November 11-12. Many growers from the peninsula will send exhibits to this show, which always attracts large crowds.

Walter J. Lewis, of the Art Floral Co., is here from Los Angeles on a business visit. He says trade is good in the southern city.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

Rochester, N. Y. Rose Society.

The Rochester Rose Society at its November meeting presented an interesting programme, the principal speaker of the evening being Fred C. Wallace, who had for his topic, "Successful Growing of Hybrid Tea Roses," which he handled in an able manner, dividing his subject into sections on soil, time of planting, stock, labels, cultivation, proper food, treatment of diseases, and at the conclusion, naming a list of varieties best suited for the amateur grower. Rev. Edmund M. Mills, president of the Syracuse Rose Society, sent the following list of hybrid teas which he suggested for outdoor planting: Ophelia, Antoine Revoire, White Killarney and Mme. Jules Bouche. Pink—Lady Stanley, Lady Ashtown, Caroline Testout, Killarney Queen, Joseph Hill, Prince de Bulgarie. Yellow—Hillingdon, Los Angeles, Wellington, Mrs. MacKellar and Sunburst.

CHESTER.

The Late Oscar Hauschild.

Oscar Hauschild, well known in the florist trade of New York, was accidentally shot and killed while on a hunting trip near Denver, Colo., November 7. He was born in Germany 32 years ago. For a number of years he had been connected with the trade of New York, being for a considerable time the Hotel McAlpin florist. He was called in the draft, and spent seven months overseas in the United States army, and was discharged only a few months ago. He is survived by his mother, three sisters and one brother, Otto, now the florist at the McAlpin hotel.

The Late Thomas Bunyard.

Thomas Bunyard, a retired nurseryman, died at his home in Hellingby, England, October 22, age 83 years. He is survived by his wife and 11 children. Two of the sons, Alfred T. Bunyard, the retail florist of Madison avenue, New York, and Harry A. Bunyard, a well known seedsman, are residents of the United States. Other sons are engaged in the nursery and fruit growing business in England.

SPHAGNUM MOSS will be scarce in the west, owing to continuous rains for the past month.

STUYVESANT FISH has brought suit to have himself legally adjudged a farmer, so as to recover $5,000 paid as income tax upon money spent to meet farm expenses, which are claimed to be deductible from income.

THE publishers of our New York contemporary, the Florists' Exchange, who have been unable to issue their publication for several weeks on account of printing trade difficulties, in that city, expect to have their paper printed this week outside the affected district.

Personal.

C. Engelmann, of Saffron Walden, Eng., the well-known carnation specialist, is on a tour of Argentina and the United States.

Gas Damage Verdict.

The Sterling Floral Co., Sterling, Ill., through a decision rendered in the appellate court, October 28, in its suit against the Illinois Northern Utility Co., has been awarded damages in the amount of $2,130 for loss sustained by gas caused by the breaking of a main in the company's range.

Telegraph Liability.

The Illinois supreme court handed down a decision October 31, holding as void provisions in Postal and Western Union blanks, which exempted telegraph companies from liabilities for their errors, unless the message is repeated or insured. The sender can therefore recover damage he sustains by errors made by telegraph companies.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given, that Frank D. Pelicano, 119 Guttenburg street, San Francisco, Calif., submits for registration the new plant mentioned below:

Adiantum Pelicanii, a seedling of Adiantum Roenbeckii, which it resembles in habit, being very light in color and of vigorous growth; fronds grow erect, and average from 20 to 24 inches in length.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Smith Burnsiana Open to the Public.

William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., in a recent communication, calls attention to the fact that announcement has been made through John H. Cowles, secretary general, supreme council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, that the William R. Smith Burnsiana is now accessible to the general public, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., Sundays and holidays excepted, in the Burnsiana room, at the House of the Temple, 16th and S streets northwest, Washington, D. C. The Burnsiana room is located on the south side of the ground floor of the temple, immediately below the offices of the secretary general. Application must be made to the librarian on the main floor for access to the books in the locked cases.

EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

President Wm. W. Vert announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year as follows:

Boston, Mass.—William Nicholson (chairman), James Wheeler, Alex Montgomery. Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston, manager, Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop square and Otis street, Boston, Mass.

New York — Eugene Dailledouze (chairman), Wm. H. Duckham, A. Harrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55-57 West 26th street, New York, care of chairman.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge (chairman), John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Cincinnati, Ohio—R. Witterstaetter (chairman), James Allen, J. C. Murphy. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago—N J. Wietor (chairman), E. A. Kanst, Thomas W. Head. Ship flowers to chairman, 162 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character—not less than six blooms of each variety to be shown. Special attention is called to the rule that sports to receive a certificate must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during November, the dates of which will be November 15, 22 and 29.

HOGEWONING & SONS, Inc., 32 Broadway, New York

Detroit Florists' Club.

The florists' club members were the guests of Sidney Beard at the greenhouses of Beard Bros., West Fort street, November 4. The visitors assembled at 4 o'clock in the afternoon for the inspection of the stock, which was found in most excellent shape, some of the growers pronouncing it the best in quality ever seen at that place. Attracting the most attention, perhaps, was the immense stock of cyclamens. Closely following in importance were the pans of poinsettias and several houses of Boston and other varieties of ferns. Bedding plants and other miscellaneous stock were also in good condition. The bulb shed and frames outside were well filled with bulbous stock in pans and boxes. A supper was served at 6 o'clock, after which the club meeting was held. Vice-President M. Bloy presided and the proceedings were replete with matters of much interest to the 40 or more present. A vote of thanks was given the host, and the action included hearty congratulations to him for the uniformly good condition of his establishment.

The Twentieth Century Club was represented at the meeting by Mrs. Wm. McGraw and Mrs. E. J. Jeffries, who thanked the club for its cooperation with the school gardens committee of that organization, and gave details of the extension of such work planned for the coming season.

The F. T. D. meeting at Buffalo was discussed in its different phases, following a report of that event by A. Pochelon and M. Bloy, the latter declaring it the most absorbing meeting of the kind he ever attended. So intensive was the work, he said, that members were reluctant to cease the discussion of interesting topics even to eat, and much of the contemplated work was untouched at the close of the meeting. Secretary A. Pochelon was the recipient of the local florists' congratulations for having received the well merited gift presented to him at Buffalo.

Under the management of the club an exhibition of chrysanthemums and other seasonable stock will be given at the Hotel Statler, November 18. It will be non-competitive, and growers at other points are invited to send novelties or well grown specimens of blooms of any varieties for the exhibition. A meeting of the club will be held at the same time and place, and the members of the ladies' auxiliary of the club will be present.

The publicity committee reported to the meeting its cooperation with Albert Von Tilzer, a New York music publisher, who has composed a song with the title "Say it With Flowers," which was introduced for the first time at the Temple theatre here and sung by the artist, Miss Grace LaRue. The florists' windows and delivery autos carrying banners with the announcement and the slogan "Say it With Flowers" are receiving a great impetus.

The announcement of the death recently of Mrs. H. Cassell, wife of one of our new members, was followed by a resolution of condolence to the bereaved husband.

Sidney Beard, who has always been an exhibitor at the state fair association, spoke of this being a great opportunity neglected by the local florists, and on his suggestion a committee will confer with the management of the fair association looking to the improvement of conditions which it is hoped will encourage more extensive exhibits there hereafter.

The following permanent committees will make strenuous efforts to advance the club's activities the coming season: Exhibitions—Chas. H. Plumb, Thomas Browne, Joseph Streit, Peter Papes, Peter Reuss. Essays—M. Bloy, John Carey, Robt. Jean, Harry Taylor, W. C. McLaughlin. Entertainment—J. K. Stock, E. A. Fetters, Thomas Browne, Geo. W. Davis, John Warncke.

Past President E. A. Scribner, who has been in ill health for some time, was able to be present at the meeting, and received the cordial greetings of all.

Albany, N. Y.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" WEEK.

"Say it With Flowers" week was observed in this city, Troy, and Schenectady, November 3-8. The florists' shops in the three cities were made unusually attractive with displays of seasonable flowers and plants, advertisements were inserted in the newspapers, inviting the public to visit the shops, and gifts of flowers were made to the hospitals. One of the features of the week, was an automobile float prepared by the retailers. The vehicle, handsomely decorated with flowers and foliage plants, went through the streets of this city November 6, Schnectady, November 7, and Troy, November 8.

NOTES.

One of the weddings of local interest took place on the evening of October 22, when Miss Harriet Isabel Eyres, daughter of Harry G. Eyres, florist, 106 State street, was married to F. Leigh Hichman, of Little Falls and Albany. The ceremony was performed in St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal church by the rector, the Rev. Charles C. Harriman. The color scheme was pink and blue, which was carried out in the floral and other decorations. A reception followed at the Ten Eyck hotel, at which about 150 guests were present. After a wedding trip in the west, Mr. and Mrs. Hichman will live at 10 Madison place, Albany.

Arthur Cowee, the gladiolus specialist, of Berlin, Rensselaer county, was elected to the state assembly on the republican ticket, November 4. In a letter to the Women's Civic League, of Troy, which asked Mr. Cowee for a declaration of his principles before the election, the candidate replied in part as follows: "If elected, I shall endeavor to act as I believe will be for the best interests and welfare of the people of my district, as well as of the state at large."

The annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the park department was opened in the lake house, Washington park, November 9, and will continue for two weeks. Philip Bender, superintendent of parks, has for the exhibition this year, 393 varieties, of which 83 are new. A list of the new sorts, with a short description of each, was furnished the newspapers by Superintendent Bender a day or two before the exhibition was opened.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND NEAR BALANCE.

Toward the end of the past week, market conditions again were on the up grade. While the receipts of bunch chrysanthemums were still heavy, there was a greatly reduced amount of really good, large blooms coming in. All in all, the demand appeared to be equal to the supply, and it seems that the worst stage of oversupply has been passed. A good cold spell undoubtedly would regulate matters to the satisfaction of all concerned.

NOTES.

After having carpenters and interior decorators making a muss of their store since July 12, the Emil Welke Co., at 752 Third street, announced the formal opening, combined with a chrysanthemum display, November 7-8. The occasion certainly drew large crowds, who readily commented on fine impressions made as to decorations and display of stock. This firm, as a drawing card, put into use the famous slogan, "Say it With Flowers," by presenting all visitors with a sample. A large basket containing chrysanthemums and roses, with compliments from the Holton & Hunkel Co., was in evidence.

The florists' advertising club has rented a booth at the Auditorium for the food show, which will be held in the near future. It will also furnish the flowers for the dinner tables during that period. This undoubtedly will be the occasion of the "Say it With Flowers" week as carried out by other cities throughout the country.

Due to the bad weather, and with a forecast of a cold wave, which did not materialize, there were not enough members on hand, November 6, for the monthly club meeting to constitute a quorum. This is the first time in more than two years that no regular meeting took place.

E. J. Hamme, of Wauwatosa, Wis., is rapidly recovering from injuries received some time ago, when his auto collided with a large tree, which proved to be the stronger of the two.

Local firms are anxious about some of their Dutch bulbs which are still tied up at the Atlantic ports, due to the strike.

OCTOBER SETS VERY GOOD RECORD.

Eliminating that portion of sales last year that must be credited to the influenza epidemic, business during the month just past was above the average. Never before have early chrysanthemums moved so freely at increased prices, sales being made at $6 and $8 per dozen. Roses also brought good returns in October, but good stock in this line is scarce. Columbia is the leader and, with Ophelia, are money makers for grower and retailer alike.

NOTES.

Hess & Swoboda have planted 25,000 carnations which are now showing fine condition. They will also have a fine crop of roses for Christmas and after the holidays. Cyclamens are also looking fine and will be in for the holidays as will Begonia Cincinnati and poinsettias. For Thanksgiving, this firm will be well supplied with choice chrysanthemums, the varieties being Eaton, Chadwick and Golden Wedding. Two houses planted to sweet peas are making a fine showing, now being five feet high.

Thomas Evans, who has returned from service in France, is again connected with Hess & Swoboda. J. J. H.

Providence, R. I.

STRONG CUT FLOWER DEMAND.

Trade during the past week has been good, stock moving freely and a heavy call for cut flowers. Chrysanthemums are selling well and a general daily cleanup is the report in most cases. With a few exceptions, growers in this vicinity are planning to keep their ranges in operation throughout the winter.

NOTES.

Olney Williams, of Pocasset, is filling his houses with vegetable plants at present, and will later replant the range with carnations and other stock formerly grown by him.

The Riverside Greenhouses are showing some of the best cyclamens seen here for some time. These will probably be on exhibition at the flower show next week. H. A. T.

Louisville, Ky.

The demand for flowers, chrysanthemums included, lagged during the first 10 days of November.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson is still on the sick list and is unable to be at the store.

Miss Edith V. Walker & Bros. is the name of a new firm which will commence business, November 15, at 636 South Fourth street, having purchased the establishment of Mrs. M. D. Reimers. Associated with Miss Walker are J. David Walker and William G. Walker, who have severed their connection with the William Walker Co.

The Cost Of Flowers

It is not the price you pay, but the quality and freshness of the stock which you buy that makes its value. Our flowers are all Home Grown and perfectly fresh. We bring them direct from our greenhouses to our store three and four times per day, a few hours after being cut. On perishable stock like flowers, this is a big item. Regarding Quality, we pay our growers ten to fifteen per cent higher wages than is now paid in the Chicago districts. We have better men and they grow better flowers. We are Rose Specialists and are now cutting from 245,000 rose plants all in one range of glass, besides quantities of Chrysanthemums, Carnations and Beauties.

With all these advantages for our stock, our prices are never higher than other houses ask, and in a number of instances lower.

LARGE SUPPLY AND SLOW SALES.

Business was quiet the past week and the sales as a whole were disappointing to the wholesaler, grower and retailer. Stock was in such large supply owing to the poor demand that it was difficult to move it at bargain prices in quantity lots. Fancy stock in almost all items never sold at such low prices as last week, which were about the same as the old prices that used to be in order before the war. With the employes in the greenhouses demanding a six day week, nine hour day and more pay, the returns for the past week and the week previous will be very disappointing to the grower. The condition that has existed the past two weeks is not unlike that of other years in regard to the supply, with the exception of last year, when the deaths due to the Spanish influenza relieved the market then of its usual chrysanthemum time surplus, but the actual result is more disastrous, owing to the higher cost of production which confronts the average grower today. It is true that the market will stiffen with the passing of the chrysanthemum and pompon crops and it is very noticeable that a turn for the better is already here. It is a question whether high enough prices will be realized during the remainder of the season to offset the poor returns of the past two weeks. In these days of unrest one must look cheerfully ahead for better ones are coming and the future never will be as dark as last winter when for a time it appeared as if many of the growers would have to close down their places in part or entirely owing to the coal shortage, etc. Stock at present is in large supply, especially chrysanthemums and pompons, which are a big factor now. Roses are in heavy supply and the receipts of carnations are steadily increasing. Lily of the valley is scarce at $20 per 100, orchids at $15 to $18 per dozen and gardenias $6 per dozen. Paper White narcissus is in good demand at $6 to $8 per 100. Sweet peas, violets, snapdragons, calendulas, pansies and daisies are included in the offerings, together with a few other items not already mentioned, such as lilac, callas, bouvardia, etc. Green goods are plentiful, but higher prices may be expected on all items in this line in the near future if the advance information the writer has secured is correct.

NOTES.

Herbert Hansen and Louis Hoeckner of the Peter Reinberg store force, in company with Peter Showsboe, foreman of the greenhouses, made a tour of inspection of the Reinberg range November 9, to get a line on stock for the holidays. The roses and carnations are in splendid shape and the cuts of chrysanthemums and pompons will be heavy for Thanksgiving. Carnations are doing nicely, but it is expected that the demand will take care of the cuts for some time to come. The new pompon, J. Hamilton Lewis, which originated at the Reinberg greenhouses, will be given more bench space next season.

Charles W. Johnson's new seedling chrysanthemum, Mrs. C. W. Johnson, exhibited at the annual exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America at New York, November 5-7, was awarded the society's silver cup for the best seedling chrysanthemum not disseminated.

The Central Floral Co. had a special window decoration for armistice day that attracted much attention. A mound of earth with the inscription, "In memory of our fallen heroes," was sufficient explanation to the crowd which stopped to inspect it.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., is slightly disfigured but still in the ring. He broke a bone in his right hand as he was trying to open a door at home which accounts for all the bandages.

Ernst Wienhoeber and family have the sincere sympathy of many trade friends in the death of Mrs. Wienhoeber, November 5. Mrs. Wienhoeber had been in ill health a long time.

Henry M. Hirsch, 109 East South Water street, is mailing a November blotter to all his friends. His initials are the same as ever and he is proud of the fact that he is an Elk.

Vaughan's Seed Store is showing samples of remarkably well grown gladiolus bulbs from their Michigan farms, also specimen sprays of Thanksgiving holly.

The Central Refrigerator & Equipment Co., 155 North Clark street, has just installed Frank Ayres' new refrigerator at his East Randolph street store.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, attended the funeral of an uncle at La Porte, Ind., November 11, returning home with his wife the same evening.

Schofield, the North State street florist, had a special window display for armistice day. The designer deserves much credit for the arrangement.

Fine chrysanthemum shows in the Garfield, Lincoln and Washington park conservatories are attracting large crowds of people.

Homer Lange, who has been confined to his home for the past week, threatened with pneumonia, is out again.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association reports a strong demand for cattleyas at $18 to $24 per dozen.

The annual chrysanthemum exhibit at the Garfield park conservatory opened November 9 and continue until November 30, the hours being from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily. The collection includes 4,500 plants in 350 varieties.

Visitors: J. A. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.; Max Scheinuk, New Orleans, La.; Julius Dilloff, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York; Miss Edith V. Walker, Louisville, Ky.; C. F. Gaetzer, Rock Island.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday evening, November 6. President Zech occupied the chair and there was a good attendance. Four new members were elected, Fred G. Berry, 850 West 79th street; Antonio C. Rocco, 55 East Jackson boulevard; Tony Then, 218 Winnemac avenue, and H. C. Wullbrandt, 5315 West Madison street.

Much interest was shown in the new rose, Cornelia, exhibited by Robt. Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., a cross of Mrs. Aaron Ward and Ophelia. This rose was fully described and illustrated in our issue of October 11. The flowers were delayed and damaged in transit, however, and the awards committee thought it best to defer judgment. Weiss & Meyer, of Maywood, exhibited a fine vase of Columbia, and similarly excellent vases of Premier and Milady were shown by the Weiss-Spandikau Co. The three latter vases were highly commended, and Poehlmann Bros. Co. was given honorable mention for Christmas novelties, as also was the Little Wonder Irrigator Co., for its Little Wonder irrigator.

Geo. Asmus, of the publicity committee, made a stirring appeal for cooperation in the matter of advertising, stating that the larger part of the expense of such publicity should be borne by the producers of the stock to be sold, claiming they have by far the largest investment in the business.

The nomination of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: For president, Paul R. Klingsporn and Otto H. Amling; vice president, T. E. Waters; treasurer, Paul Weiss; secretary, Fred Lautenschlager; director, W. J. Keimel.

Vice-President Walter Amling reported on the success of the bowlers in the Detroit tournament, and he promised to arrange a series of games for the visitors to the carnation meeting and exhibition, January 21-22.

Chairman Waters, of the good-of-the-club committee, for the next meeting, December 4, announced an exhibition of holiday specialties and novelties in plants and supplies.

James Morton's resolutions on the death of Frank McCabe, Arnold Ringier, Andrew McAdams and J. B. Deamud, were presented and adopted.

GOOD SALES IN ALL LINES.

The rather limited list of offerings furnished the principal cause of complaint among the retailers during the past week, as business has been generally all that could have been asked. Chrysanthemums, roses, violets and carnations, in the order named, have been the best sellers, but the only reason that carnations need be named last in this quartette is the scarcity of stock. It is figured, however, that another fortnight will see a big increase in the receipts, so that shipments from outside points will not be so essential. The chrysanthemum growers are also beginning to send in some stock, and this is used to supplement the heavy arrivals from California. Japanese growers are slow in starting big shipments to market this year. Prices are being maintained well, with hardly any chrysanthemums sold at less than 50 cents each at retail against a wholesale price of 20 or 25 cents. The local cut of orchids is again increasing, but the trade holds up so well that this is little or no assistance to the dealers, and shipping orders are being daily placed outside. There are a few dahlias still offering, but the majority of growers had only outside fields to draw on, and the late frosts put the quietus on this trade. As for roses, there has been the same steady demand that is always to be seen here, with Ophelias and Columbia the leading sellers. Russell, Sunburst, White and Pink Killarney and some American Beauty have also been shown, and Cecile Brunner is moving well, along with orchids. Cattleyas are the main offering at present, with some trianae and Cypripedium insigne showing. Violets are all coming from the south and clean up in good order. Lily of the valley is still hard to get. Pot plants have been scarce, as far as fancy stock goes, and primulas, Martha Washington geraniums, pompons, cyclamens and calendulas are the main varieties to be seen. There is a good sale, and some florists have been featuring glossy leaved, non-flowering plants with good success. There has been a notable increase in the number of social events that require elaborate decorations, and other big orders are also common.

NOTES.

George P. Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros., is the proud possessor of a new seven-passenger Chalmers, and finds many excuses these days to spend time on "outside business." This firm reports a heavy cut of orchids, and splendid sales of chrysanthemums. Suggestive window displays have helped to boost the sales of yellow and golden varieties.

Potted bouvardias and Matchless carnations are reported by the Holly Flower Shop as among their best sellers of late. One attractive feature that has attracted business has been the placing near the door of a gilded stand, having various corsages ready made up on the different shelves.

SUPPLY SHORTENS WITH FAIR DEMAND.

Stock has shortened up considerably with the exception of pompons which are now in overabundance. The local rose supply seems rather limited, with the exception of American Beauty. Both single and double violets are now in and have a splendid call. Some very good sweet peas are also offered in white, pink and lavender shades. Outdoor stock is about done for, although there are a few dahlias, which meet with only a fair demand. Chrysanthemums now lead the market and varied stock in all colors is now being received in fair quantities. Carnations are good property and clean up well, bringing fair returns. Boxwood moves nicely. Adiantum and other greens are in good supply. Cypripediums are in but there is a scarcity of lily of the valley.

NOTES.

SOME IMPROVEMENT IN BUSINESS.

Trade in general seems to have improved somewhat the past week. The weather turned somewhat colder, which seemed to instill a little activity into the business. Stock is not quite so plentiful as it was, but the supply of chrysanthemums is still heavy. Some exceptionally good blooms are being sacrificed, and pompons have taken a decided drop in prices. The supply of roses has fallen off considerably and with the cloudy weather we are now having, they will weaken still more. Carnations continue to improve. Violets are in fair supply, and sweet peas are only to be had in limited quantity. Calendulas and snapdragons are not much in demand as yet. Dahlias have disappeared entirely. In greens, the market is well supplied, with the exception of plumosus, which is scarce.

NOTES.

The hunting fever seems to have quite a few florists in its grip. Last week, J. Jules Bourdet was hunting ducks, then W. C. Smith went out. Al Gumz and Frank Windler go out every Sunday, and now W. A. Rowe comes around with a brand new repeating shot gun, which he is going to break in the coming week. Looks as though we ought to be well supplied with game this fall.

The results of the bowling league scores was as follows: Roses took three from the Sweet Peas, and the Carnations took three from the Daisies. The Wednesday before Thanksgiving will be an off night; the florists do not think they will have time on the eve of the holiday for bowling.

Business for All Souls' day was not up to expectations, caused more or less by the unfavorable weather. The cemetery florists did a fair business.

BUSINESS TAKES ON FALL IMPETUS.

Business continues good; in fact, is increasing and improving daily. Funeral work is always in order and the florists are kept constantly busy supplying the call. Both quality and quantity of the stock have improved wonderfully. The fall season has been very good indeed and never were the dahlias and outdoor chrysanthemums so plentiful or of such fine form. Cosmos have also been abundant. Even at this late date there have been but slight frosts and while the trees show a tinge of red and gold they are still full of leaves and the grass is green. The early violets, both from indoors and out, are beginning to arrive. Chrysanthemums, both pot grown and from the greenhouses, are very fine and there are plenty of all varieties, prices ranging from $4 to $6 per dozen. White and yellow are equally popular. There are very few pink varieties as yet. Pot plants are seen in all of the shops and are good sellers. They range in price from $1.50 to $10. As yet, there are few carnations, but these will have their inning when the chrysanthemums are through. Roses are in fine shape and are attaining perfection in size of bloom and length of stem. Columbia seems to be the favorite with the growers and popular with the buyers as well. Russell, Ophelia and Kaiserin are also noticeable for their beauty and perfection.

NOTE.

The leading florists have adopted the early closing movement. The Joy Floral Co., Geny Bros., the McIntyre Floral Co. and L. H. Haury & Son have joined the campaign and have arranged to close their places of business each day at 6 p. m.

COOLER WEATHER IMPROVES TRADE.

Fall business has begun in earnest, the warm October succeeded by cold, crisp days. Chrysanthemums are very plentiful, with Turner, Marigold, Chrysolora, Chieftain, Old Gold, Touset, Pacific Supreme and others showing good form. Bonnaffons are also beginning to arrive. Pompons are in generous supply and as popular as ever. Violets have also shown much improvement as the result of cooler conditions and sunshine. Carnations are beginning to have a strong call and the supply is limited. Prices are firm. Cattleyas are of excellent quality and bring fancy figures. Cyclemens, primroses, Begonia Vernon, pot pompons and bush chrysanthemums are now among the flowering plant offerings.

NOTES.

George T. Boucher's chrysanthemum show attracted many visitors, November 3-8, the shop being transformed into a Japanese paradise. White lattice work, entwined with oak leaves concealed the ceiling and walls. The display windows were filled with vases of pompons artistically arranged against a background formed by large vases of Appleton, White and Yellow Turner and Marigold chrysanthemums, the effect further heightened by the use of purple, gold and brown plush. In the center of the store, an electric fountain was edged with yellow pompons, ferns and palms, while immense chrysanthemum blooms were grouped to advantage about the shop. The show was a most attractive and interesting one.

The chrysanthemum display at the Lamberton conservatories in Highland park is now at its best. There are over 2,500 plants on display in more than 100 varieties.

Felix Alberts made an attractive display last week in which he used oak leaves, bronze and yellow pompons and large vases of yellow chrysanthemums.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Charles Gow, of the Rochester Floral Co., in the death of his mother, who passed away, November 6.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., are shipping excellent pompons and chrysanthemums to this market.

FUNERAL WORK PRINCIPAL FACTOR.

The business of the past week ran true to form, as with the exception of there happening to be a lot of funeral work, election days are dull business periods, and the first four days were very quiet. Owing to the cool weather, there being a killing frost on Wednesday and Thursday, there was at once, a shortage of stock, and a distinct increase in the demand, the close of the week seeing the market entirely bare, with more orders for good stock than there were flowers to fill them. While prices did not advance materially, everything worth while sold up so close that higher figures are looked for next week. There were still quite a lot of dahlias on the market, November 8, the growers cutting all they could on Wednesday before the frost, of which final shipments came Saturday. The mid-season and late chrysanthemums are seen of very good quality, some Yellow Eatons bringing $5 per dozen, wholesale. There are a lot of good pompons, which, now that the poor outdoor stock is over, should bring good money. The cool weather shortened up the roses, which were in strong demand the last two days. American Beauties are of very good quality, and have gained $10 per hundred. Columbia, specials, have 30-inch stems and Premier, 24-inch. A week or two of cool weather, will improve these wonderfully. Premier and Russell are in daily competition, for better or worse, owing to the quantity of each handled or grown. Ophelia is good, as is Hadley, and, in fact, all the varieties are of seasonable quality. Carnations are improving and will soon be cut with full length stems. Matchless is the white, and Mrs. Ward the best pink. Benora, Enchantress Supreme, Laddie and Belle Washburn will be the quantity varieties the coming season, as shown by the shipments. Sweet peas are even now becoming a factor, and will be seen in larger quantities than ever before. There are already too many Paper White narcissus, which is not encouraging, anent the high price of bulbs. Calla lilies are looming up in 50 and hundred lots, but no giganteums, as yet. Snapdragons are good stock, as are calendulas, both of which will be seen in quantity before long. Violets, of winter standard, are almost here. Cattleyas are more plentiful. Greens of all kinds are about equal to the demand.

QUALITY.

Clarence Watson, with the Leo Niessen Co., declares growers cannot pay too much attention to quality, as poor, or low grade stock, rarely brings enough to pay the expenses of marketing. With the exception of wreaths, design work is fast going out, and flowers must be good enough to be sold loose or made into sprays. Outside pompons have been very hard to move, but the inside stock brings good money. It is no trouble to get $4 and $5 per dozen for high grade chrysanthemums, but poor stock has to be jobbed off. Choice flowers, single stems or bunched, carefully packed, to arrive early on the market ready for immediate sale, nearly always show up big in the returns.

NOTES.

That Charles H. Grakelow's business, Broad and Cumberland streets, is growing, is evidenced by the addition the past week of two stylish cars, one a Dodge, in lavender, and the other a Ford, in red. This makes a fleet of four, which can handle a large number of telegraph and local deliveries. It is rumored that Charles has an eye on the downtown trade, and these new cars may soon be seen at a Chestnut street store, not far from 13th street, in the city's busiest shopping district. All four carry the "Say it With Flowers" slogan in conspicuous script.

The Virginia Flower Shop, 224 South 15th street, opened this week. This is conducted by a woman florist, A. B. Robinson, a graduate of Max Schling. The shop is well situated for family trade, not very far from large apartment hotels. It is nicely fitted with silver oak fixtures and has a large show window, which contains nicely arranged baskets. Business the first week has been very encouraging.

All the trade, and particularly the palm growers, were interested in the California grown kentias, exhibited here a week ago by E. B. Washburn. If California can equal Belgium in the growing of kentias, then America can add another feather to her cap.

Berger Bros. closed out their last dahlias, November 8. Excellent chrysanthemums take their place. Paper Whites are seen in quantity, but find little favor from buyers.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is exhibiting high grade Enguehart and Bonnaffon chrysanthemums that sell on sight at top market prices.

Exceptionally fine Yellow Eatons were features of Edward Reid's stock the past week. He says there are even better coming.

Stephen Mortenson is sending very choice Columbia and Premier to the S. S. Pennock Co.

George Craig has placed a fine 24-horsepower Dodge car on the street. It is a beauty. K.

DEMAND OF FAIR VOLUME.

With both the supply of stock, and the demand for it moderate, business is moving along fairly well. Although it does not appear that there has yet been any heavy frosts in this vicinity, cold and high winds prevailed throughout the past week, and to some extent the supply has been cut. That has had a tendency to stiffen prices. The best varieties of chrysanthemums are now arriving, and are held at good figures, though it does seem hard for the wholesalers to clean up on any large quantity of high priced stock. The varieties, Golden Chadwick, White and Yellow Turner, H. Lee, W. H. Waite, Nerissa, Scoville and Pockett's Crimson, with other good ones like Colonel Appleton, Marigold and the Bonnaffons are now features of the market. At this writing, it is nearly three weeks to Thanksgiving, and it is a fairly safe prediction that it will clean up most of the chrysanthemum stock, though scattering lots will continue to arrive. In American Beauty roses, the supply is moderate, with a stiffening of prices, a few of the best specials going at 60 cents, wholesale. Thus far, there is plenty of tea roses, and some of the stock does not clean up, but good Premiers, Columbias and Russells sell well. The orchid market is reasonably firm, the best cattleyas going as high as $1.25 and $1.50, wholesale. Carnations continue slow. Some of the best of Mrs. Ward have brought $4 per 100; Enchantress has sold as low as $1.50. But it is unfair to pass harsh judgment on the carnations at this time. They are always slow while so many chrysanthemums are about, and it is yet early to expect much of them. Violets are improving with cool weather, and there is a better demand. The scarcity of Easter lilies creates a better demand for the callas, which are now arriving in considerable quantity. Lily of the valley is slow. There has been an increase in the supply of Paper White narcissus, and the price is weakening. Pink bouvardia, snapdragons, sweet peas and various other stocks are on the market, but not in sufficient quantities to attract much attention while chrysanthemums are plentiful.

November 10.—Business is fairly active. The colder weather has materially decreased the supply of stock and there has been a sharp advance in such roses as American Beauty, Premier and Columbia. Prices on all good rose stock are holding firm with an upward tendency where changes are noted. "Finis" may be written for the outdoor stock.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" SONG.

We have received a copy of the song, "Say It With Flowers," composed by Mrs. Frank H. Traendly and Mrs. Charles Schenck, and set to music by Harry Pease and Ed G. Nelson. We have previously taken occasion to favorably mention the poem. The writer of these notes has been so busy with horticulture, history, philosophy and poetry that he has neglected to properly cultivate his voice and does not feel competent to pass an opinion on the music, but taken as a whole, the song means something, which is more than can be said of many songs that are published. The cover is handsomely embellished with the picture of a pretty lady in a wreath of roses and other floral features. We have always known that Mrs. Traendly and Mrs. Schenck were clever women; we will now concede that they are very clever.

NOTES.

There is a good florist, Rudolph Schoenberger, in Jefferson Market, but he seldom has an order for Jefferson Market police court. There is always grief and tears in that court, but it is of a nature that does not call for floral tributes. But November 3, the women's division was gay with flowers in honor of Mrs. Jean Norris—the Mrs. is now submerged by the judge—who for the first time occupied the bench to dispense justice—the first woman that ever filled that position in New York. It is generally conceded that Mayor Hylan did a graceful act in appointing a woman as judge.

William Sullivan has taken part of the store at 131 West 28th street and entered the wholesale business for himself. He will handle orchids from the range of Frank J. Dolansky, Lynn, Mass. He is a veteran of the great war, having enlisted when the United States entered it.

The twenty-first annual show of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held November 5-7. We learn that there was keen competition for the prizes. Tarrytown can always be depended upon to stage a good show.

It is just one thing after another down at the docks. On November 7-8, extremely high tides flooded some of the ferry houses, and for a time, the boats for the Jersey shore had to stop running.

Peter F. McKenney, the well known retailer of Fifth avenue and 42nd street, has been seriously ill with bronchitis, but is now believed to be improving.

Exceptionally fine chrysanthemum stock is being received by J. J. Coan, 115 West 28th street. A. F. F.

THERE'S a growing tendency toward a closer contact—toward a better understanding of man with man in every line of endeavor today, two essentials which make for a sound and lasting prosperity. I want to be on such terms with every florist; I solicit new business on such a basis.

BAD WEATHER HURTS CUT FLOWER SALES.

With stormy weather during the past week, business has been rather dull, especially in cut flower sales, with a drop in prices. Pompons are a drug on the market, while Bonnaffon, Chieftain and others in the large varieties move slowly. Carnations are offered at $2 and $3 per 100 and $2 is the price for sweet peas.

NOTES.

The florists' association held its monthly meeting at the Parker House, November 4, the speaker of the evening being Major P. F. O'Keefe, who dwelt for some length on "Advertising and Its Results." This was thoroughly enjoyed by 53 members present. An excellent dinner was served and there was a lively discussion of plans for the "armistice week" celebration.

Philip Carbone's business is far ahead of last year. In the plant section French hydrangeas and Mme. Poulson rose bushes are the leaders. There are also numerous buyers for fig trees, cyclamens, chrysanthemum plants and begonias.

At the store of Penn, The Florist, business has been very good. The windows are artistically arranged as usual, the feature at present being a Florists' Telegraph Delivery suggestion.

Thos. F. Galvin, Jr., has gone into business on Devonshire street. His establishment is not large, as he believes in the old adage "start at the bottom and work up."

The Beacon Florists are making a good impression in their new location, and with the new manager, John Eiseman, things are bound to move along at a lively rate.

Wm. R. Nicholson is cutting a fine strain of Winsor chrysanthemums, both yellow and white; also, Bonnaffon, Chieftain and a large variety of pompons.

John J. Cassidy has plenty of funeral work to keep his force busy. At present he finds time to push his campaign as candidate for the city council.

Frank Reynolds, formerly with Welch Bros. Co., is now in business for himself at 260 Devonshire street.

The Boston Rose Co. is cutting good stock of Pilgrim, Crusader, Premier, Russell, Hadley and Ophelia.

Henry R. Comley is enjoying a good business with outdoor work far ahead of last year.

HOWARD M. EARL, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., has received word that his son, Kenneth, passed the examinations and will enter the naval academy at Annapolis next spring.

THE death is announced of Eugene Worrall Outerbridge, October 11, president of the E. Worrall Outerbridge Co. of Shelly Bay, Bermuda. The business will be continued under the same firm name by his sons.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened steady and December and January unchanged, December 10, with cash offered at $30.50. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.40, December, $5.70, March, $5.75, and April, $5.75.

THE executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association will meet at the Statler hotel, Detroit, Mich., November 20, for the purpose of selecting date and place of meeting for the next annual convention, and arranging programme for the same.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district remain about the same as last week, $2.75 for reds and yellows, and $3.25 for whites, for spot shipment. The weather has continued too mild and damp for ideal storing, and the unusually small size of the sets adds to their sprouting capacity.

WOLDEMAR NEUBERT, owner of the establishment of E. Neubert, Wandsbek, Germany, died December 31, 1918, 59 years of age. He was one of the largest growers of lily of the valley pips in the world. The attention of oversea firms was attracted to his lily of the valley in 1888, when Miss Florence Vaughan, sister of J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, traveling in Europe, gave him his first export order.

Lily of the Valley Pips.

German lily of the valley pips for export are required to be washed in running water and packed in fumigated moss, according to one importer. Another importer says, he has had to pay $30.00 per thousand, in Germany, for his supply of pips.

It is reported that Dutch official inspectors are now passing valley shipments, since insects found on the roots were feeding on organic matter and not on the roots themselves.

Cooper, Taber & Co's Dutch Branch.

Cooper, Taber & Co., London, Eng., write as follows, October 21: "As the paragraph respecting our Dutch establishment, which appears on page 586 in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of October 4, is likely to be misunderstood, we shall be obliged if you will kindly allow us to state that this is not a new movement on our part, as we have had an establishment there, to attend to our interests in Holland, for many years, and that it has not been established in any hostile spirit to our Dutch friends."

New York Seed Trade.

The S. S. Roma, from Marseilles, France, arrived November 5. The manifest showed but one case of bulbs. There were 54 cases of immortelles for Vaughan's Seed Store. Speelman & Son received 50 cases of immortelles. The Roma was stil in quarantine, November 10.

Two longshoremen stole 15 cases off the docks last week, supposing them to contain whiskey, and were nearly drowned in doing so. The men were arrested, but the cases containing Dutch bulbs for a Missouri firm, went adrift.

The S. S. New Amsterdam, from Rotterdam, arrived, November 5, bringing 1,600 bags of sugar beet seed, 29 cases of bulbs and 22 cases of trees and shrubs.

Tulip bulbs affected by bilge water on the steamer Glensanda resemble roasted chestnuts.

Pea Pack of 1919.

Wisconsin supplies 49.7 per cent of the commercial pea pack of the United States. Of the 8,658,000 cases of peas canned in the United States this year, 4,375,000 cases were packed in this state, according to the figures of the national pea packers' association. This state is easily first in the industry, with New York as the nearest competitor. This year the New York pack was 1,040,000 cases, or about 10 per cent of the total pack. Last year was the greatest year in the industry. Wisconsin canners packed 4,520,000 cases of a total of 11,063,000, or about 40 per cent of the pack. New York produced 2,000,000 cases. A case contains 24 pint cans, weighing one pound, four ounces each.

Onion Seed Crop in Canary Islands.

The onion-seed crop for 1919 suffered so from drought that the production of seed was certainly not over 30,000 pounds. However, 72,765 pounds were invoiced for exportation to the United States at Teneriffe, valued at $73,040, according to Consul George K. Stiles in Commerce Reports, September 19, 1919. The amount of seed exported as compared with the amount actually grown in 1919 is explained by the fact that there were very large quantities of seed remaining from the record crop produced last year. The consulate at Teneriffe has been informed by a number of the largest growers that owing to the small crop produced this year, they had shipped very large quantities of 1918 seed. They claim that large quantities of this seed had been sent on consignment, and that when not sent on consignment, the buyers had been informed of the fact that the seed formed part of the 1918 onion-seed crop. The season just closed showed exceptionally bad results as regards the white or "crystal wax" variety of seed, while the yellow and red crops showed a largely reduced but more nearly normal production than was the case with the crystal wax.

As far as can be learned, there were no unusual delays in the transportation of the crop from the islands to the United States. Freights continued excessively high, and approximately 85 per cent was routed via Liverpool, where no difficulty was encountered in finding empty bottoms to American ports.

As the same unfavorable weather conditions which reduced so largely the onion-seed output, acted in much the same manner upon the onions themselves, there is at this time a great scarcity of bulbs of sufficient choice variety to serve next November for planting to produce the onion-seed crop of 1920. In fact, there seems little doubt but what a considerable quantity of bulbs for next year's seed will have to be imported from the Spanish peninsula, which will considerably increase the cost of resetting the plantations here. This should not, however, necessarily prejudice the quality of next year's Canary Islands onion seed, as the peninsula-grown bulbs are, possibly, capable of producing first-class onion seed when given the peculiarly favorable climatic conditions for onion-seed growth that obtain in these islands. The figures of Canary Islands exportations of onion seed for the last five years' crop seasons are: 1915, $40,828; 1916, $84,387; 1917, $137,289; 1918, $98,458; 1919, $73,040.

As so large a quantity of year-old onion seed has found its way into United States markets, it may probably be of interest to growers to know that, according to apparently trustworthy statements of growers here, the germination possibilities of year-old seed are considered as 20 per cent below that of the present year's crop. This year's seed, of first-class quality, carefully packed and transported under average conditions, is claimed to be of 90 per cent germination; on this basis year-old seed should figure at about 70 per cent germinative power.

It is exceptionally important that onion seed, if kept for any length of time, should be carefully guarded from the air, from the light, and from humidity and in a temperature, if possible, between 50 and 80 degrees.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

PORTERVILLE, CALIF.—Max B. Jamison and M. P. Renfro have placed the contract for a range of houses which will be devoted to vegetables for winter use in this market.

Illinois Farm Land.

Metamora, Ill., November 11.—Probably the highest price paid for a quarter section of farm land in central Illinois has just been given by Samuel Leman for an improved farm four miles from here. The price was $110,000, an average of $687.50 an acre.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $3.00 to $4.00; celery, Michigan, box, 85 cents to $1.25; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 20 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.50; tomatoes, per lug, $2.00 to $2.50.

New York, Nov. 10.—Celery, per doz. roots, 10 to 60 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $3.00 to $4.00; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.75 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per carrier, 40 cents to $3.00; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $5.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $2.00.

Potato Growers' Meeting.

The Potato Growers' Association of America will meet in Milwaukee, Wis., December 8-13, during the Wisconsin potato exhibition, according to word received from Washington. The exhibition will be held at the Auditorium under direction of the Wisconsin Potato Growers' Association. Over 25 counties of the state have made entries. This will undoubtedly be the largest exhibition of standard seed and table potato stock ever presented in the state," according to J. G. Milward, secretary of the association. Exhibition space is being rapidly contracted for and demonstration booths will dubtless all be taken long before the opening of the exhibition.

The Wisconsin Potato Growers' Association is co-operating with the Wisconsin experiment station in promoting the show; all affiliated state departments are working harmoniously to insure its success.

E. O.

Lettuce and Radishes.

We recently had a visit from one of our state experiment station men, who was sent to investigate greenhouse crop conditions. Having been over a wide territory, this man was well posted, and to use his language—"Things look bad." Thirty days of dark, rainy weather, together with high temperatures, have upset all calculations. Tomatoes refused to set fruit, and cucumbers were practically wiped out by disease. That this condition is general and widespread is proved by the demand for lettuce plants to reset empty houses. Never before have we had such a call so early in the season for plants. As conditions are, there is little likelihood that enough plants are available, and we would caution growers to go very slow in buying plants from distant sources in such warm weather as prevails now; better seed directly where the lettuce is to grow, and thin out, when up. We have demonstrated time and again that unless one has access to very good plants, this direct seeding is very practical and very little time is lost, as these seedlings never stand still.

As a catch crop, Scarlet Globe radishes may be handy. If sown at once, they can be had for Christmas. They are in big demand then, and generally bring good prices. We sow them with a garden drill in rows six inches apart, and are very careful to adjust the flow of seed to eliminate thinning. Radishes need careful handling. Keep them very cool and well ventilated for several weeks until they show a tendency to bulb, when temperature can be increased. Radishes require much moisture—more than lettuce, and they need a good, clear house. Under a poor roof, they grow long and spindly, and are generally, a failure. As regards returns, we have made as much money out of radishes per square foot as out of lettuce, but we admit the labor of pulling and bunching is a big drawback.

MARKETMAN.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period November 4-10 indicate strong prices with shipments decreasing. Potato prices tended upward under lessening supplies. The general demand was good, but haulings were light in most sections, owing to weather conditions, lessening stocks and a disposition to hold for higher figures. Advances of 5-30 cents occurred in producing sections and of 10-40 cents in consuming markets. No. 1 northern sacked round whites advanced 15 cents at Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan shipping points, reaching $2.45-$2.70 per 100 pounds f. o. b. and carlots gained 40 cents at Chicago, reaching $2.80-$2.90 in that city and in St. Louis. Sacked Minnesota Red River Ohios were firm at last week's top of $2.80 f. o. b. and ranged steady in consuming markets at $3-$3.40. Nebraska No. 2 round whites were fairly steady at $2.10-$2.15 bulk cash to growers, with movement very light on account of weather and roads. Colorado sacked white stock ranged about steady in producing sections at $2.25-$2.50 cash to growers, and Idaho shipping points quoted $2.10-$2.25, while consuming markets strengthened slightly to a range of $2.90-$3.25. New York round whites were in active demand and closed about 30 cents higher at $2.52-$2.72 f. o. b. sacked, and strengthened slightly in consuming markets, ranging $2.25-$2.75 bulk. Maine Green Mountains were slightly stronger in New York and Boston at $2.50-$2.75, but advanced about 5 cents in the Presque Isle shipping section, reaching $2.33 f. o. b. sacked. Onion markets continued strong, gains of 25-50 cents being quite common with the demand fairly active. Middlewestern yellows ranged $4-5 per 100 pounds sacked in consuming markets and red stock reached $5 in St. Louis and Kansas City and $5.25 in New Orleans, selling at $4.80 f. o. b. shipping points. California yellow and red stock lost 25 cents in Chicago, ranging $4.50-$4.75, but sold strong at $4.75-$5.50 in most other distributing markets. Eastern yellow onions were firm at shipping points, ruling at the close $4.25 f. o. b. and held somewhat stronger in leading consuming markets at $4-$4.75. Most leading cabbage markets strengthened, especially in the west. Chicago advanced $10, quoting Wisconsin Holland seed at $35-$38 per ton bulk, and St. Louis gained $5, ranging $33-$35. New York Danish seed gained $2-3 in jobbing markets, ranging $30-$38, and quoted $28-$32 f. o. b. in producing sections. New York domestic stock advanced $1-$5 and ranged $16-$22 f. o. b. shipping points and $20-$27 in consuming markets.

Columbus, O.

BUSINESS CONTINUES ACTIVE.

The florist trade in this city during the past week has been more active, due largely to improved weather conditions, the rain of several weeks being succeeded by sunshiny days, and as a result buying is more lively. All of the downtown florists report an increase in volume of sales, with bright prospects for the future. The supply of flowers coming into the market has improved, but with better demand, there is a shortage in certain varieties, most noticeable in roses, where prices have advanced slightly. The leading varieties are Ward, Ophelia, Russell and Sunburst. Carnations are more plentiful, but there is a scarcity in colors. A large majority received are white. Sweet peas are still rather limited, and the demand is extra good. Chrysanthemums are coming in well, and there is a good demand. Bonnaffons are now arriving and find a ready sale. Chrysanthemums are selling from $3.50 to $5 per dozen. Social activity has increased recently, and there are quite a few weddings on hand. Others are announced for the immediate future. Funeral work has also been quite active during the past week. On the whole, there is a good, steady demand, and florists generally anticipate that business will continue brisk.

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.. President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

ACCORDING to the entomologist of the Wisconsin department of agriculture, the state's apple crop for 1919 has had a big boost in the market notwithstanding quality being much below the average.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Michigan State Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting at the Statler hotel, this city, December 2-4, at which time the subject of freight rates will come up for thorough discussion.

THE national forest reservation commission has approved the purchase of 66,381 acres of land in the White Mountains, the southern Appalachians and Arkansas, and will recommend an appropriation of $10,000,000 for extending purchases, insuring a continuing programme.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

SHIPMENTS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

With respect to the movement of nursery stock in bond through American ports to foreign countries, the federal horticultural board has issued the following provisional ruling:

(1) The classes of plants enumerated in Regulation 2, Quarantine No. 37, may pass through the United States in bond without permit or other compliance with the regulations. This is provided for in a paragraph of Regulation 4 of the quarantine, which reads:

Permits are not required for nursery stock and other plants and seeds. not under quarantine or regulation, entering the United States for immediate transportation in bond to foreign countries.

(2) The classes of plants included in Regulation 3 fall under "Rules and Regulations Governing the Entry for Immediate Exportation of Prohibited Plants and Plant Products" effective December 1, 1917, and may proceed to foreign countries in bond under the conditions indicated in Regulation 7 of the regulations referred to. The permit shall be in the form of a letter in quadruplicate which shall detail the safeguards to be enforced and, if necessary, the routing of the shipment, one copy of which shall be filed with the board and one each sent to the importer, the customs officer, and the inspector of the board at the port of arrival.

(3) Other plants or classes of plants and plant products for propagation not covered by Regulations 2 and 3 may be entered for immediate transportation and exportation in bond to foreign countries under the same terms as plants covered in Regulation 3, except as to plants which come with earth or soil about the roots or packed in earth or soil which has not been sterilized. As to such excepted plants their entry for transportation across the country in bond is prohibited, but provision may be made for their immediate export to the country of destination by any available ocean route.

In case of a mixed shipment, which can not be conveniently separated or divided into the different classes, the whole shipment must be governed by the class subject to the greatest restrictions as to entry.

Permits for Classes 2 and 3 will be issued for each shipment; in other words, no open permits will be issued. These permits will either be issued from Washington or, when so authorized, by the inspectors at the ports of entry provided for in Regulation 6 under Quarantine No. 37. Notification of arrival of such shipments provided for in Regulation 10 must be made by the importer or his agent to the inspector of the board at the port of arrival who, after inspection and determination of the nature of the shipment, will make the proper endorsement on the customs manifest, which document must be held until inspection has been made.

C. L. MARLATT,
Chairman of Board.

RUGOWSKI'S NEW ASTERS

Read the Following Strong Endorsement of Men Well Qualified to Judge:

MR. J. K. RUGOWSKI, Manitowoc, Wis.: September 15th, 1919.

"Dear Sir—In the name of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association, I wish to thank you for your exhibit of both Pink and White Asters at our annual meeting held at Milwaukee September 12.

"I am transmitting herewith the resolution passed at that meeting, endorsing these Asters as being very meritorious flowers. It was the sense of the resolution that these Asters be endorsed by the Association as having the largest flower and longest stems and in every way being superior to any Aster thus far seen in the market. It is with pleasure, indeed, that I am permitted to send this message.

"With best wishes for the future success of this flower, I am, Yours very truly,
"WISCONSIN STATE FLORISTS' ASS'N, H. J. Seal, Secretary."

Here's Another Proof of Merit:

"The sample flowers of Asters shown were the finest type of Ostrich Plume of Crego that I have seen in 32 years' experience." C. LITTLEFIELD, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

This Seed Will Be on the Market the Coming Season in Original Packages Only. Price, $1.50 Per Package.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

THANKSGIVING SUGGESTIONS.

Thanksgiving.

This first of the holidays of the season is rapidly approaching, which event, in its great demand almost closes the chrysanthemum period, that this year, on account of the late open season, appears to have been shorter than usual.

"Time flies" too fast for the man who is not up with his work every day, the schedule of which should be made out the same as an order, and carried out as intelligently. This is more particularly true of all holiday seasons, which busy weeks, such as Thanksgiving, should be carefully planned in all the details of securing or ordering stock well in advance, the arrangement of the store, and seasonable and effective window decorations.

The records of Thanksgiving day a year ago, should be gone over to see what can be done to improve that demand from new customers, holding on at the same time to all that is possible from last season. It is most important to send out cards of invitation for all holidays to the store's list of names, active, semi-active, and only occasional customers, as well as to good prospects, which publicity will often bring in a lot of new faces that soon become familiar. So many of the trade miss these opportunities; they think it too much trouble, or are afraid of the expense. This is a great mistake, as attracting the attention of so many people, all proven flower buyers, and friends of the store, at a time when they are likely to want flowers, is certainly a good business move. The circular should make suggestions and present flower facts in such a way that people will see the need and desirability of having flowers, and will buy them. Flowers are loved by everybody in a way; some look and admire, but not to the point of possession, while others cannot get along without them. Hundreds of articles that have little or no merit, are extensively sold, entirely by advertising, and flowers, which are so popular, should be pushed to the limit, particularly for Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is a great home-gathering, social holiday, a time when the house must look its best. There is nothing that adds such a touch of life and finish to the room as well placed palms, ferns and flowering plants in the windows. This should be emphasized in all the store's advertising and literature, and made possible by a well selected stock to supply the demand created. Feature the plants in choice pieces of pottery, some on pedestals. Pot covers in wicker are decorative, while crepe or white paper will make flowering plants look worth 25 per cent more. The difference in appearance between featured or decorated, and bare, red clay pots of the flowering plants, is very marked. They will easily bring at least 25 per cent more with this slight addition.

Make a display of fern dishes, nicely filled; now is the time of year to run them off. Many will need refilling, and a good stock of table ferns should be on hand.

The Thanksgiving day flower is the chrysanthemum. Many growers bring in whole houses of popular varieties for this week's business. The choice sorts are superb, and bear much the same relation for a gift flower as the American Beauty rose for Christmas. There is no flower that can compare with the chrysanthemum in decorative effect. The huge white, pink, yellow, orange and other shades, borne on such long stems, can be used to carry out all kinds of color schemes, and fit in with the furnishings of the most elegant room.

The anemones and pompons, of which there is such great variety of form and color, are very popular, and fill the smaller vases in many vantage points. If well displayed, a large stock of these smaller flowers can be disposed of. The small vase baskets, filled with pompons, are very attractive and will be found good sellers.

There is no more suitable flower for the Thanksgiving dinner table than the chrysanthemum. The large and small varieties can be used together, arranged on the cloth, down the center with autumn leaves or cut fern fronds. Croton sprays are a choice addition, their coloring blending harmoniously with that of the flowers. Where the decoration is elaborate, a hollow, center table can be filled in with growing ferns, with choice flowers coming through to resemble a large plateau. Rising from the center, a tall slender vase can be filled with choice blooms, which carried above the line of vision, is very decorative. An elaborate scheme is to carry the center decoration on a main stem or support, up to the ceiling, and spread the flowers out over the heads of the diners in a canopy effect.

As at all holidays, when there are many social events, corsage flowers are in great demand, and a line of these made up, will be good stock to carry. Samples arranged and finished with a ribbon and pin, give a much better idea than descriptions to prospective buyers. These, if kept in open boxes in the case, or similarly displayed in the window, will quicken the sales and give an impression that a specialty is made of this class of work. In all the large cities and college towns, it is the windup of the football season. There are fashionable events at which each lady wears a corsage or the college colors in flowers and ribbons. In some cities, this makes very important business and should be encouraged in every way by plentiful stocks of such flowers.

The show windows should receive especial attention. While it is conventional, the products of the land are generally used to portray plentiful crops, which are the foundation of prosperity, the giving thanks for which, the day is set apart. They are, therefore, fitting to be used as a part, at least, of the decorative scheme. Cornstalks, bearing half husked ears, sheaves of wheat or rye, together with vegetables and some fruit, which latter can be shown as coming from a cornucopia, will when tastefully arranged with baskets and boxes of flowers, vases of choice chrysanthemums, etc., make a display that at once suggests Thanksgiving day. This should be in place not later than Monday, November 24, as in most stores, not much time can be given to it later.

All kinds of cut flowers, as well as chrysanthemums, will find a ready sale at this time. Feature the choice roses in vase baskets; while beautiful in themselves, the decorative effect of a pretty basket of a tint or shade to contrast or combine with the colors of the variety, makes them much more attractive. There are a number of pieces of fancy, pottery flower holders, some with figures. Flowers can be sold from these the same as plain jars, and at times, the sale includes the receptacle. Shallow flower bowls are just as pretty and useful for flowers as ever, and if some are kept decorated, sales will be made.

Now that boxes are so expensive, sheets of stiff, white paper of the quality of good manilla, can be wrapped around a dozen choice chrysanthemums that are loosely laid in a sort of cluster, and wrapped to somewhat resemble a cornucopia. A tie of tape around the paper at the handle holds all together, and makes an artistic package, as the flowers while held firmly, are open to view. A few sprays of small pompons at the tie, gives a finishing touch.

Chrysanthemum Baskets.

The odds and ends of chrysanthemums can be made into very salable baskets with the addition of a few autumn leaves and fern fronds. Almost any kind or shaped basket will answer, as there is variety enough in the long and short stemmed stock to make any receptacle look its best. Anything a bit shopworn or passe can be given another lease of life by a touch of gilt or aluminum. A knot of ribbon on the handle gives a finishing touch that often makes a sale.

Shallow bowls also have a chance, as they look very well arranged with either pompons or some of the larger stock. There shoulld be some one about the store in charge of this kind of work. Customers do not, as a rule, come in and ask for such pieces to be made up, but when nicely displayed, they are sure to attract attention, and most of them are disposed of at a good profit.

The art or skill in arrangement of the various little additions, such as autumn leaves, fern fronds, berries, branches, etc., adds so much to the beauty of the flowers, as to enhance their value from 50 to 100 per cent. All such articles should be priced according to their appearance value, not on actual cost.

Displaying the large blooms in high-handled vase baskets is very much more effective than when shown in fibre or other jars. A few oak leaved sprays with the blooms, and a bow of ribbon on the handle, gives a decorative effect that greatly enhances the appearance of the flowers. Ofttimes, such an arrangement appeals to customers, and the chrysanthemums and basket are sold together. The flowers can be sold from the baskets the same as from jars, as nothing has been taken from the stems. When nicely placed, they greatly improve the appearance of the store.

Too much attention cannot be given to the proper arrangement of the interior of the store. There should be something with a "take me" look at every turn. There are always offerings in the way of novelties to be had in the supply houses, fancy baskets, vases. or plant boxes on stands for the sunny windows, all of which can be profitably featured.

Pot chrysanthemums are often seen rather bare of foliage at the bottom. A good-sized sheet of white paper, drawn up around the pot, and projecting far enough above to cover the bare stems, together with a few sprigs of laurel, stuck in the soil, will give such a plant a finished and salable appearance. An inside sheet, the color of the flowers, is a great addition. Two or three indifferent looking specimens may be potted together to make a larger plant, which will be almost sure to find a customer.

Baskets with low handles, filled with chrysanthemums which project quite a distance over the cloth, make good dinner table centers. Bright autumn leaves and sprays of highly colored crotons, together with fancy fern fronds, help to relieve, and at the same time, add to the decorative effect. Choice, large blooms, cut off short, placed in small shallow dishes of water, which they conceal, may, with a leaf or two, be dotted about an elaborate table and prove quite novel in a decorative way.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

Whenever there is a dull day, and they will come sometimes, even in busy weeks, it is best to speed up a little, put on extra pressure, and try and make the store more inviting. The street-front and window should be gone over and given a newness that will make the pedestrians stop and take a look. Many busy men, who are up on their toes all the time, like to see a dull day once in a while, as they then get a chance to carry out a pet idea or two, that the busy days have prevented.

Pompons and chrysanthemums are now at their best; they are an admirable corsage flower, and well-made examples, with selected stock as samples, will be sure to attract attention. Pompons, in the original bunches, tied with bright autumn leaves, and placed a number together in a wide mouthed vase, will be found good sellers. The single varieties are unique and much appreciated by customers.

Care must be taken in laying in stocks of the large flowered varieties, which may seem very fresh and beautiful at first, but later develop bruises and blemishes, caused by careless packing and handling, that renders them unsaleable. The greatest care should be experienced in every move with these heavy, fragile flowers; start a few petals, and some will unravel like a ball of string. Catch the head of a Bonnaffon or other light-stemmed variety on the edge of the box, or place it on the counter or table at an angle, and snap goes the flower. Never crowd more than 25 in a vase, or put too many vases in a limited space in the ice box, or bruised flowers will be the result. Remember that a few drops of formaldehyde will keep the stems sweet and foliage clean.

Cattleyas are now scarce and dear. If these are displayed in tubes of water, in baskets of the near Farleyense, the glory fern, they will show to the best advantage and can be sold from the tubes as well as from vases.

Thanksgiving week, one of the busiest of the year is now due. The store should be made to look its best, well stocked with foliage, flowering and berried plants. A few plant baskets, decked with ribbon bows, make attractive features and are likely to find buyers.

An attractive window decoration is a table of good size, covered with a cloth on which, for a centerpiece, is a double cornucopia, with the ends hooked around a center slender vase, this latter to be filled with long stemmed chrysanthemums. The horns of the cornucopia are to be filled with fruit and flowers, which spread out from each end over the cloth. A band of chiffon of suitable shade, tufted at the corners, laid on the cloth at the plate line, relieves the plain white cloth. Corsages and boutonnieres are a good finish.

CORSAGE OF BONNAFFON CHRYSANTHEMUM AND POMPONS.

How about the holly wreaths, loose holly and other Christmas greens Have they been ordered? If not, get busy at once. To be on time, never adds one cent to the cost, but when behind hand, one fares badly, there being little but the leavings, and generally additional transportation, together with uncertainty of arrival.

If there is anything wanted in the supply line, make out the list at once and send it in. Better have such stock in the store, than on the way, mixed up with the Christmas congestion.

Do not fail to check up the Christmas plant stock. It is bound to be very scarce this year. The very choice things are probably all gone by this time. There is great satisfaction in knowing that orders given early, will be filled.

Thinking of buying a new car? Do not get a heavy truck. The great majority of the loads are light and seldom fill the body. A retailer of experience, who has two light, but serviceable cars, says that he has often been importuned to get a large, showy truck, but has always declined on account of the great cost of running and upkeep, as compared with the smaller car, which carries quite large loads at less than half the gasoline and tire expense. He has always found it cheaper to hire larger trucks, when necessary as they were now plentiful, and the chauffeur made an extra hand.

Rush the filling of winter window boxes and the use of tubbed evergreens. Such stock should find a place at every well furnished home. Hotels, clubs and restaurants are all likely customers.

Dispatching Orders by Wire.

As the holiday season approaches, and telegraph orders are more numerous than at any other time, I feel that a message of warning at this time, of the necessity of being extremely cautious in avoiding any errors in taking orders for out-of-town delivery, is opportune. Be absolutely sure to get the full details as to correct name, address, card, etc. If possible, urge your customers to place their orders early, so that they can be transmitted by mail. This you will find to be more satisfactory, as the retailer receiving such an order, can make provision for same and avoid substitution in many cases.

I would like to call your attention to the importance of having the card attached to the order. Be very explicit in every detail. Many a gift has not received the proper acknowledgment, owing to the fact that the card did not state what city the gift was from. Just such an instance happened only recently. An order was received by wire to deliver a box of roses to a Mrs. Johnson, 1565 25th street; Card—Mrs. A. F. Davis, (no city mentioned). The florist who wired the order, made a complaint that the order was not filled; the party who had placed the order had heard from their friend in the distant city that they had not received any flowers from their city, so a complaint was lodged with the retailer who had wired the order. The retailer who had filled the order satisfactorily to his own judgment, was nonplussed at receiving this complaint. It so happened in the course of a few days that a member of the family came into the store. The florist at once looked up the original order and asked if they had received the gift of flowers on that particular day. They admitted the flowers were received and that the card of Mrs. Davis was enclosed, but as they had acquaintances of the same name in their home city, took it for granted that the gift was from them. After due explanation, the acknowledgment was forwarded with the necessary apology.

An order placed in Chicago for a box of roses to be delivered in Detroit, with a card, should read: "From Mrs. A. F. Davis, Chicago, Ill.," instead of from "Mrs. A. F. Davis," and not mention the city. The point in question is self-explanatory, and it behooves every member to see that every out-of-town order receives the strictest attention. By so doing, we can avoid many unpleasant conditions.

Stimulating Employes' Efforts.

Nearly all those who engage in business, either as proprietors or employes, do so as a means of livelihood. The ambition of every worker is at all times to get as much as possible for his services so that he may in time save enough to go into business for himself. All men are not similiarly endowed; some have more initiative, more ambition, and greater business instinct than others, and are thus better equipped to make their way through the world. All, however, have a desire to better themselves, and are generally willing to do all in their power to increase their earning capacity.

Every employe is worthy of his hire, and should be paid according to his ability. The business is established to earn money, and all those connected with it, in whatever capacity, should receive an amount in keeping with their value as a trade producer. They must be made to feel that their services are appreciated; that any extra effort they put forth, that adds to the profit of the business, is reflected in a tangible way in their pay envelope. In nearly all large industries, extra hours of labor receive extra compensation, much of it at increased pay, as time and one-half for every hour over.

At the recent convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at Buffalo, N. Y., one of the most earnest discussions was on hours of labor in retail stores, the concensus of opinion unquestionably being toward shorter days, early closing being the keynote of nearly every speaker. Good working systems, intelligently carried out, with head work as well as hands, could put through the business of an extra busy day at the regular closing time. It was apparent to all, that if the retail cut flower business is to be able to recruit competent young men, it must hold out to them inducements in hours of employment and recompense equal to those of any other lines. Profit sharing, it was shown, was being seriously considered, and in a number of stores, tried out by various plans which had proved a great incentive to workers, giving them a new and more personal interest in the business.

The salesman who is allowed a commission on all sales over a certain daily amount, will do his best to surmount these figures, and the helper, who on account of extra business, has to work over hours, does so gladly when he knows there is additional pay. Some of the larger retail cut flower stores have adopted the "per hour" system of compensation for all minor employes, and extra hands at holiday seasons, who being paid by the hour, then do not care how late they work.

Savings in all departments and co-operation among employes, will be the result, if it is stated that any increase in the volume of trade for the year, will yield them a substantial bonus. In a measure, it is then their business, and with this personal interest, many leaks are stopped, and nothing left undone that will be of benefit.

While there is nothing so cheering as an extra dollar now and then, words of appreciation will do wonders, and should never be withheld for work well done. While every one is expected to do his best, any extra efforts should not go unnoticed, as recognition will act as a spur to even better work.

Orchid Basket for King of Belgium.

The accompanying illustration shows a basket of orchids presented to King Albert, of Belgium, on the occasion of his recent visit to San Francisco, Calif. It was designed and executed by P. Vincent Matraia, manager of the Art Floral Co. The basket, seven feet high, was one of the most costly and beautiful arrangements of flowers ever made up in that city. It was composed of cattelyas, oncidiums, dendrobiums, phalaenopsis and odontoglossums. It was a superb piece of floral art and shows Mr. Matraia's creative ability at its best.

JOINT MEETING AND EXHIBITION.

Creating a tremendous stir among the residents of Indianapolis, Ind., and mingling in a half-dozen social events which emphasized the cordial relations existing between the two organizations, the Kentucky Society of Florists and the State Florists' Association of Indiana, met in the Indiana metropolis, November 13-14. The principal feature of the joint gathering was a flower show, which compared favorably with big events of the same nature held in other cities, and while this function was an undoubted success, members of the two associations felt at the conclusion of the programme, that the social phases of the meeting were just as worth while. The big gathering culimnated in a banquet at the Claypool hotel, Friday night, at which the wives, daughters and sweethearts of the members lent additional beauty to the scene. Addresses were made by the master orators of the two organizations, and the dinner was a fitting finale for what is regarded as the greatest meeting of the kind ever held in Indiana or Kentucky. The flower show was staged in the Riley room of the Claypool hotel and it brought out a profusion of beautiful roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and other flowers.

The judges were George Asmus, Chicago; Prof. H. B. Dorner, Champaign, Ill.; George Schulz, Louisville, Ky.; H. P. Knoble, Cleveland, O., and R. Witterstaetter of Cincinnati, O. Most of the awards were made by 8 o'clock Thursday night and the doors were then thrown open to the public. The newspapers had given considerable space to the flower show, and much interest had been aroused in the event. The Riley room was thronged both on Thursday and Friday night, and the general public indicated that it had devoted considerable study to the subject, for many intelligent discussions of the merits of certain varieties were heard.

A theater party at Keith's, was the Thursday night feature for the florists and their fair helpers. The performance was excellent, and the members of the trade did not lose the opportunity of letting the public know that the flower show was in progress. Both sides of the stage were banked wtih flowers, and as each of the eight acts came on, the players were presented with bouquets of roses, carnations or chrysanthemums.

A theater party at the "Circle," one of the most beautiful motion picture houses in the country, was held Thursday afternoon, and was repeated on the following day for late comers. Those who had already witnesed the screen production, repaired to the Marion Club and participated in a bowling tournament. Many of the ladies proved themselves to be experts at the game, and the visitors from Kentucky took the honors.

Indianapolis florists kept open house at their greenhouses and retail stores Friday morning, and most of the visitors took advantage of the opportunity to inspect local establishments. The ladies whiled away the morning hours in charge of a committee consisting of Mrs. E. E. Temperley, Mrs. Clarence R. Greene, Mrs. Harry Pahud, Mrs. Oscar G. Carlstedt and Miss Bertha Elsner.

About 200 plates were set for the dinner at the Claypool hotel, the famous chateau room being the scene. Almost half of the diners were ladies. An elaborate entertainment was given between courses. Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., president of the Indiana association, delivered the address of welcome as soon as the guests were seated. He spoke of a similar occasion in Louisville several years ago, when the Kentucky florists acted as hosts to the Indiana visitors, and asserted that it gave the Hoosiers great pleasure to be able to reciprocate. Mr. Rasmussen called on O. E. Steinkamp, secretary of the organization, for the reading of the roll of honor, containing the names of florists of Indiana who had responded to their country's call. As each name was read, the owner stood to receive the applause of the assemblage. Response was made by August R. Baumer, of Louisville, president of the Kentucky organization. He told the story of the darky, who was asked to change a five-dollar bill, and who, while unable to do so, "was thankful for the compliment." "I am in the position of the darky," said Mr. Baumer. "I should indeed like to express the appreciation of the Kentucky delegation, but it is beyond my powers. Nevertheless, I am grateful for the compliment paid me. It was 30 years ago that I attended my first flower show, and fittingly enough, it was in Indianapolis that it was held. Since that time, many changes have taken place in the personnel and methods of the industry. I miss some of the dear old faces. Yet, there has been no change in the relations between the Indiana and Kentucky florists. The two organizations have always been as one, and this occasion merely serves as an example of that fact. Such meetings are worth while in every respect. It has been truly said that two men who exchange ideas are far better off than those who exchange dollars. Two men with a dollar each, gain nothing by exchanging them, for at the end, each has but one dollar. But two men who have an idea are each twice as well off after the exchange, for each has two ideas. Ladies and gentlemen of the Indiana association, I thank you on behalf of the visitors from Kentucky."

The entertainment was unusually appropriate, a trio who possessed splendid voices, introducing between courses a new song based on the florists' slogan, "Say it with flowers." The song was brought from Chicago by one of the guests from the "Windy City" and scored a hit. "You'd Be Surprised" was another popular number introduced. "Till We Meet Again" was sung by the entire audience, and marked the end of the lighter entertainment. Just as the lights were flashed on, and everyone settled down for the speaking, a bellboy passed through the room, paging Mr. Steinkamp. Joseph Hill took the message, saying it had been sent in his charge. He read it: "The Bible says that every man shall take unto himself a wife. It is time that Oliver E. Steinkamp, secretary of the Indiana asosciation, explains why he has not obeyed this injunction."

Mr. Steinkamp was called on for an explanation. "I'd like to know what name is signed to that message," he said. "It is signed by the Chicago Florists' Club," explained Mr. Hill. "Well, I will give you a reply on April 1," answered Mr. Steinkamp.

Irwin Bertermann, of Indianapolis, made the initial address of the evening. Such gatherings, he asserted, were inspiration throughout the year, and served well to tide florists over some of the less favorable situations. Indiana, he said, was proud to entertain members of the trade from Kentucky and other states. Mr. Bertermann commented on the fact that the flower industry is keeping pace with others. He concluded by urging a campaign for more members, with the idea of ultimate representation on the board of the national organization.

Mrs. Kate Nanz, of Owensboro, Ky., spoke briefly, telling of the relations of the Owensboro florists with their Indiana friends just across the Ohio river in Evansville. Mrs. Nanz asserted that the Indianapolis show was equal to any staged in Chicago.

Before introducing E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., one of the veterans of the trade, who recently concluded a trip through the west and British Columbia, Mr. Rasmussen told the story of the Californian at the funeral. The minister, after making an eulogy of the decedent, asked if anyone had anything to say about the late departed. There was a long pause, and then the Californian arose and said: "Well, I don't know anything about the deceased, but I'll be glad to say a few words about California." Mr. Hill apologized needlessly for reminiscences which were deeply interesting to the florists. He spoke of living in Kentucky for two years, and paid tribute to Jacob Schulz, of Louisville, to whom he was indebted for practical aid and inspiration in his early struggles, he said. He also eulogized William Bertermann, founder of the well known Indianapolis firm, and one of the pioneers of the Indiana association. Fred Dorner, of Lafayette, "did as much for floriculture as any man in the country," said the speaker. Refering to his trip through California and other states, Mr. Hill told of the courtesies lavished on him. "I did not accept these for myself alone," said he. "I am sure that the western florists felt that in honoring me, they were to some extent honoring the Indiana florists' association. The word has gone abroad that Indiana has one of the biggest and best societies in the country." Speaking of decorations in the west, Mr. Hill said that the strangest was of a Mormon dignitary's grave at Ogden, Utah. The tombstone was embellished with the names of his 12 wives. Mr. Hill complimented the city of Victoria, B. C., on its work in decorating for the Prince of Wales. "It was splendid work, done in good taste, and not overdone," he said. "If I were a young man, I think I should go to Seattle. You can grow anything there. I saw 20 different varieties of holly, for instance. Portland is truly the city of roses, and I can well believe there are 500,000 plants in the city and its environs. Portland also has a test garden where new varieties of roses are being developed." Mr. Hill spoke of the work of the Japanese and Chinese in California, and quoted one of the former as saying that he had a good day's work done before the white florist was out of bed. "The white florist must get busy," said Mr. Hill. He concluded by offering a bit of good American sentiment. "Wherever we live," said he, "let us remember always that we are the sons and daughters of the greatest nation on earth."

Prof. H. B. Dorner, of the University of Illinois, Urbana, said he had learned three things during his former work at Wabash College at Crawfordsville, where he was assistant in floriculture. "I learned that to grow plants, we must understand plants and know our botany; never to recommend a man unless we are absolutely sure of him, and that we must never stand in the way of the advancement of an associate, no matter what our personal loss may be. I learned these things from Professor Thomas, now dead, who was my chief at Wabash. It was he who urged me to accept the post at the University of Illinois, though the offer came at a most inconvenient time for him." Professor Dorner urged the florists to use and help their state colleges. "Tell them what you want," he said. "Also tell the legislators what you desire. Get the statistics of floriculture. You hear frequent statements as to the size and value of the steel industry. If you secured and compared figures showing the money invested in nurseries, you would find that floriculture is even larger than the steel industry of which we hear so much. Can we not in this great Mississippi valley," he asked, "develop a center of floriculture to which the entire country will turn when it wishes information or instruction? Indiana colleges already have shown the people of the country something of what can be done. Let us make this section of the country a Mecca for all who would learn the secrets of flowers. Let us develop interest in floriculture everywhere in the country. After all, it is not flour or steel or grain or any other manufacturing that makes for the highest form of civilization, but music, painting and flowers—and the last is not the least. Florists have a greater opportunity than any other class of men in the country to act as leaders in the struggle to a higher plane."

A telegram of regret was read from the national organization, which was unable to be represented. Another told of the illness of Mrs. M. A. Reimer's daughter, which prevented that Louisville lady from attending and giving an address.

After the dinner, dancing was held in the Riley room, while card playing was indulged in by those who did not care to woo Miss Terpsichore. Thus the greatest meeting of the Indiana and Kentucky organizations closed.

Officers of the Indiana association, which engineered the arrangements for the meeting are as follows: Anders

Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., president; Herman Junge, Indianapolis, first vice-president; E. E. Temperley, Indianapolis, second vice-president; O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis, secretary; Charles Pahud, Indianapolis, treasurer.

A feature of the flower show was the exhibits of supply houses held in the Claypool, most of them on the same floor as the flower show. Dainty souvenirs were distributed by many of the exhibitors to florists.

Comment was made on the fact that both the Pacific and Atlantic coasts were represented. James A. Brown, of Capitola, Calif., was present, as was a visitor from Connecticut. In addition, Ohio, Illinois and other states were represented.

AMERI A FLOWER SHOP'S DISPLAY AT DENVER FLOWER SHOW, OCTOBER 29-31.

Denver Society of Horticulture Show.

The annual flower show of the Denver Society of Ornamental Horticulture was held in the city auditorium, Denver, Colo., October 29-31, the exhibition surpassing all previous achievements of the society in this line. On the whole, the displays were unusually good, and at a conservative estimate, it was visited by more than 50,000 persons. Great credit is due the Denver Garden Club, for its splendid support, both before and during the show. The Elitch Gardens Co. staged a fine display of chrysanthemums, noteworthy being Turner, Marigold and Chieftain. They also made an excellent showing of Premier and Ophelia roses, and their begonias showed good form. The Mauff Floral Co. was awarded first prize in the class of Premier roses and also exhibited a beautiful basket of Ophelia, together with a splendid display of palms, ferns, carnations and chrysanthemum cut blooms.

The Park Floral Co., as usual, had the largest exhibit of the show, its baskets, as well as corsage bouquets, always being the center of admiring throngs. A large number of pot chrysanthemums of the Caprice variety showed splendid condition. In contrast with a strong background of palms and ferns, the largest basket of Turner chrysanthemums arranged with autumn foliage ever seen at an exhibition of the society was a distinctive feature. A table decoration was also effectively arranged.

The Pikes Peak Floral Co., of Colorado Springs, had its usual fine display of chrysanthemums this year, added to which was a collection of baskets that would be hard to surpass anywhere. One of these, decorated with baby blue ribbon, filled with yellow chrysanthemums, attracted the attention of every visitor. Another basket arrangement of Ophelia roses made another exhibit of delicate colors rarely seen. A fine table decoration also occupied a portion of the firm's space.

The largest chrysanthemums of the show were staged by the Glen Eyrie Greenhouses, Colorado Springs, the features being Turner, white, and Chieftain, pink and white, in sizes surpassing anything previously seen at a Denver exhibition. D. S. Grimes & Son also had their usual high grade of chrysanthemums as well as a fine lot of Cottage Maid, Nebraska and Matchless carnations. In the Fairmount cemetery exhibit, special mention is due the fine showing of chrysanthemums in the varieties Razer, Winter Cheer, Turner, White Diana, Garza and W. Buckingham. The Crown Hill cemetery also staged excellent chrysanthemums and carnations, being the only exhibitor of Chrysolora.

Among the retail stores represented, the America Flower Shop drew special attention with a display of winter baskets, colored double gypsophila arranged with autumn foliage and orchids, presenting one of the novelties of the show. The general arrangement of this exhibit was most attractive, being banked against the side wall of the auditorium to a height of nearly 20 feet. The Daniels & Fisher Stores Co. also had an attractive space near the entrance to the tea room, well filled with a fine display of baskets of Caprice chrysanthemums and Ophelia roses, together with a fine line of corsages, all effectively arranged. The Alpha Floral Co. had a most attractive table, a velvet ribbon design lending pleasing contrast in the splendid arrangement of baskets placed upon it. George Cooper also had an excellent showing of autumn baskets, sweet peas and Ophelia roses. The Washington Park Floral Co. had as its feature, Carnation Denver, which will be disseminated next year. The Boldt & Lundy Flower Shop arranged a fine table of floral designs and cut flowers.

Mrs. S. B. Walker, who for the past 20 years has been engaged in growing Colorado native flowers, gave an exhibition of the varieties best suited to cultivation. She had a large collection of seeds as well as dainty cases of flowers from above the timberline on Pikes Peak, these being treated in such a manner as to show them growing in their native habitat. The varieties included rare eritrichium, with its forget-me-not coloring; Gentian frigida, Primula Parryi, Dryas octopetela, Mertensia alpina, Androsace shamæjasme, lloydia, Sieversia turbinata and others. The colors were perfectly preserved.

The city of Denver displayed chrysanthemums in several varieties and special mention is due the exhibit of Chapman begonias, a new local product, and the showing of large pnoenix.

One of the big attractions of the show was the display of S. Knudsen, of Boulder, Colo., whose choice collection of orchids was much admired. C. F. Maler also had a fine lot of cattleyas and cyclamens. W. D. Berger, one of the prominent members of the flower show committee and an expert in orchid growing, also had on view part of his fine collection.

Louis Kintzele had a fine offering of calendulas, George Braun exhibited Colorado silver cedars, and Fred Von Holdt had excellent Colorado-grown evergreens and deciduous trees. The Barteldes Seed Co. featured a fine display of Boston ferns and a large floral basket very handsome in arrangement.

Outside Tulips.

The tulips should be planted in the beds as soon as possible from now on. It will do them no good to remain out of the soil, for they will lose some of their vitality. While we do not like to plant them out when the soil and weather are warm, yet October and early November is the proper time to get them in. There is danger now of the ground becoming frozen at any time and they should all be planted while the ground can be worked, for it is very difficult to set them even after a thin crust has formed on the soil. The covering can, however, be left until freezing weather sets in, and, in fact, is better, for if the ground becomes frozen the bulbs will not make any top growth, which is likely to occur if covered now and kept too warm. Do not cover too deeply. The object of the covering is not to prevent the soil from freezing, but to prevent the alternate thawing and freezing that often occurs and which will in some cases throw the bulbs out of the soil altogether. Leaves three or four inches thick make the best covering, with boughs or boards laid across to prevent the winter winds from blowing them away.

New York Spring Show.

GRAND CENTRAL PALACE, MAR. 15-21, 1920.

Preliminary arrangements for the show are practically completed even at this early date, and prospects are bright for another very successful exhibition. The final schedule of premiums is now in press, and if anyone interested should not receive a copy within the next 10 days, he should make application to the secretary for one. In some of the usual classes, the value of the prizes has been materially increased.

The prizes, in the 100 square foot collection of cut orchids have been fixed as $200 first, and $100, second. As much as $1000 is offered in the class covering a 500 square foot bulb garden in three prizes, $500, $300 and $200. In the open class for the display of rose plants in the form of a growing garden, the prizes offered are $500, $300 and $200, and similar prizes are offered in the class for the display of cut roses covering 300 square feet, and this class is to be repeated on the Thursday of the show week, with the prizes duplicated, an innovation which the public will appreciate. The prizes in the class for a display of carnations covering 150 square feet of space are $150, $100 and $50.

The official programme is well under way, and will contain, beside the usual programme matter, cultural articles by leading floriculturists.

The Garden Club of America, the well known national organization, has arranged for the installation of a special booth covering an area of 1,500 square feet, in which lectures will be given daily, and conventions of different clubs held. It is also expected that an illustrated lecture will be given each afternoon and evening. There will be a tea room, as before, conducted by ladies connected with hospital work.

The flower show committee is assured that the retail florists will take a more active part in this show, which will add to the occasion. The Dupont interests, which now have control of the Grand Central Palace, will also participate in the exhibition through the International Exposition Co.

There has been a great demand for trade space, and practically all available space on the main floor has already been reserved. The following are among those who have made early reservations:

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The first complete order for a billboard sign, that is, an order accompanied by a cheque covering the price, $50, was received from the Springfield Floral Co., Springfield, N. J., and the sign is to be installed on the company's property along a much traveled highway. Florists ordering billboard signs are requested to observe the requirement of our committee, that cash accompany the order. The reason for this is obivous. Under the terms of our contract with the manufacturers of the billboards, we are obliged to make prompt payment of all invoices in order to get the specially low price on our quantity liability, and if our requirements were not made, we should have to face a temporary necessity of meeting our liability from our fund, which would not be right, for it would have a tendency to impede our publicity work. A billboard purchased individually would cost $95, at factory, while we supply them under our contract for $50, delivered at any railroad station in the United States. We have orders pledged covering 100 of the billboards, some of the pledges calling for four billboards each. Our committee is very anxious to get 500 of these splendid publicity agents working, and all who have sites, and feel that they can help us to the extent of purchasing a sign, are urged to get into communication.

Our committee is most anxious to hear from that big army of non-subscribers to whom it has been appealing for some time. What a tremendous success their support would mean for the complete establishment of our slogan, "Say it With Flowers," the best slogan ever promulgated. Already, our promotion bureau is in receipt of requests from publicity engineers in other lines of trade for the privilege of using it to carry along counter slogans of their own. One such personage, quite recently applied for the privilege of using it in connection with publicity for candy. He proposed to use it in the following way:

"Say it With Flowers"
"Prove it With Candy."

Needless to say, our committee does not approve of a proposition of this kind. Our slogan has cost too much to publicize, to allow of its use in the interests of other industries. Expert publicity men concede that its value to us is not less than a million dollars as an investment. Our friends are to keep on the lookout for any misuse of it. And while we are on the subject, let us suggest that florists' who are using it, be sure to use it in the script form adopted for all our publicity. While printers as a rule cannot duplicate the form from ordinary type, our promotion bureau provides, at small cost, electrotyped lines in a variety of sizes, and adaptable for any purpose. They make a wonderful difference in the appearance of the slogan.

Now will you, Mr. Non-subscriber, wake up to the importance of immediately subscribing to the campaign fund? You are receiving the benefit of our publicity—we cannot prevent that, even if we should wish to do so. Our campaign is conducted on broad lines, as it ought to be—but who should pay for the publicity, if not those who receive benefit from it? He must have a heart of flint who will not contribute his mite to the fund. Our committee works hard to make every dollar count in the publicity—and the detail work in connection with it is costing very much less than such work has cost most other campaigns. There is no wastage, not a penny goes astray, nor is likely to under the sharp eyes of the gentlemen who are directing the campaign, and are prominent contributors to the fund themselves.

Do not let another week pass. Sit down at once and send off your cheque to the secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York. The amount need cause you no anxiety. Send whatever you think you can afford. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Western New York Publicity Fund.

Growers, wholesalers and retailers of Buffalo, N. Y., and vicinity are raising a fund for the purpose of promoting the sale of flowers in western New York. President J. F. Ammann, of the Society of American Florists, addressed 100 retailers and growers in that city, October 25, having for his topic, "The Value of Advertising," and presented the subject in such a convincing manner that it was easily to be seen that it was necessary for the grower to advertise his product. The retailer understands the value of advertising, but in the growers' case, it is a matter of education. His address brought out many points showing the advantage of publicity to this branch of the trade, the growers were enthused and a plan of action was worked out.

Another meeting was held October 30 at which 32 growers and retailers subscribed the sum of $6,500. Since that time 43 names have been added to the subscription list, making a total of 75 who have contributed a total of $9,400, representing 75 per cent of the florists of Buffalo and growers who ship to that market. On November 6, the subscribers met and elected the following committee: Wallace H. Eiss, chairman; Robert Scott, Mark Palmer, Arthur Kowalski, Harold Brookins, C. F. Treichler and Edward Lehde. The committee's aim is to have 100 per cent of both retailers and growers represented and increase the fund to $10,000, and there is little doubt that it will be successful in accomplishing this.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at the meeting October 30:

1. That a voluntary guarantee fund be raised by the retail florists of Buffalo and the growers of cut flowers and plants, who grow and sell their products within the city, and the growers of cut flowers or plants who ship to or bring their products to Buffalo, and the seedsmen and nurserymen of the city of Buffalo.
2. That the name of the fund be "Western New York Florist Publicity Fund."
3. That this guarantee fund is to be used solely for the purpose of promoting the sale of flowers in western New York, and a certain part of the fund is to be set aside by the committee for national publicity.
4. That the moneys so guaranteed be turned over to an advertising committee, who will have in charge the matter of properly using the fund collected for advertising purposes in promoting the sale of flowers and plants.
5. That the advertising committee consist of three (3) growers, who ship to or sell their products in the city of Buffalo; three (3) retail florists, who have their business in the city of Buffalo, and one wholesaler of the city of Buffalo.
6. That the subscribers of this fund elect this committee by ballot on the last Thursday of October of each year.
7. That the term of the committee be one year, starting November 1st, 1919, or until their successors are duly elected.
8. That the committee so elected call together the subscribers to the fund at least once in every three months and make a detailed report of moneys collected and expended.
9. That the subscriptions to this fund are not to be binding unless at least 75 per cent of the retail florists of the city of Buffalo and 75 per cent of the growers within the city of Buffalo, and 75 per cent of the growers, who ship to or sell their products in the city, subscribe to the fund.
10. That the subscriptions to this fund be for one year.
11. That the subscriptions be paid to the committee in four (4) equal payments.
12. That the payments be made every three (3) months in advance.
13. That the subscriptions made to the fund by the several individuals be binding.
14. That the subscribers to the fund reserve the right to call a meeting of the subscribers at any time upon presenting a written petition to the elected committee, if signed by at least 25 per cent of the subscribers to the fund.
15. That these resolutions can be amended at any regular meeting of the subscribers by two-thirds vote of the subscribers present at that meeting.

Edison and His Pleasure.

Edison, in his home, told Roger Babson, of Wellesley Hills, the great statistician, that he made the most money on his moving picture machine, but gained the most notoriety from his talking machine, and the most satisfaction from his invention of the incandescent electric light, although he never got a cent out of the patents, as they were all stolen from him. But he still maintains that the electric light invention gave him the most happiness in spite of the fact that he received nothing out of it. The pleasure he receives in seeing the various places throughout the world using it, has amply repaid him.

The Society of American Florists feels that the knowledge of having spread the propaganda of "Say It With Flowers" is something that has given the florists the same light that Edison gave to the world. There is satisfaction in being able to give something that will merit reward, but it is far more satisfactory to the user to know that he has also contributed to the cause to permit of the continuity of its uses.

To many who have felt their inability to do their share toward the campaign fund, we will quote William Ellery Channing; "A man in earnest, finds means, or, if he cannot find, creates them." Our fund consists of amounts so elastic as to allow anyone to give who will. How do you feel when your name is off the list?

HENRY PENN,
Chairman National Pub. Campaign.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—A 19-month old chrysanthemum plant with nearly 1600 blooms was one of the features of the annual municipal flower show held here, November 9-18.

NEWARK, N. J.—The Massman Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 by Harry H. Picking, Charles O. Beyer and Stanley L. Gedney, Jr., and will engage in the florist and nursery business.

With Buffalo, N. Y. Retailers.

The florist business of Buffalo is in good hands, the stores generally being well kept and conducted in as up-to-date a manner as are those in all the leading cities. W. J. Palmer & Son's Delaware avenue shop is a dream, occupying a lot 25x235 feet; 100 feet store and 135 feet greenhouse. Two extensive flower cases contain quantities of stock, with a large cold storage room in the basement, all kept cool by an automatic system, which insures an even temperature. An electrically lighted framework, displaying transparencies of choice artistic floral wedding and other arrangements, is very attractive. A roomy basement under the store contains all the frames, boxes and other accessories of the business. The folding paper boxes are stored in bins, on end, being, it is said, more accessible than when laid flat on shelves. A "Help Yourself" system of selling flowers has been tried out here and proved a success. A glass cash receiver, such as is used on street cars, is set up on a box, into which the money falls. Around this is fitted a wire frame, to which are attached a number of wire spirals, which hold test tubes filled with water, each containing a rose. A card, which bears the words, "Help Yourself—10 cts. each," is the silent salesman. This turns in an average of $5 a day in cash sales. The electric bowl lights on the ceiling, the rugs on the floor, and the display tables and other features, make this the handsomest store in the city. Their Main street store, right in the heart of the retail district, is, with its entrances on two streets, a very well arranged and busy shop.

S. A. Anderson, 440 Main street, in the thick of things, has a commodious and up-to-date shop. A large window contains a wealth of bloom and well made baskets. This is not partitioned off at the back, but is open, so that a full view of the store is afforded. Large mirrors are effectively placed to enhance the beauty of the interior and reflect the many large vases of flowers and groups of palms, ferns and flowering plants. A roomy basement gives needed space for the handling of large orders or busy holiday seasons.

Wm. Scott Co., Inc., with their store and greenhouse combined at Main and Balcomb streets, handle their business most economically. Large, well dressed show windows are a feature.

Felton's Shop of Flowers, 1388 Main street, is a model store, widest on the street front, where its large show windows make an attractive display. The interior is tastefully fitted up with white enameled tables and wall fixtures. There is offered a good stock of plants and flowers.

L. H. Neubeck, at Main and High streets, with store and greenhouses together, makes a very good bid for the business of this residential district. He is especially well equipped for holiday business.

W. H. Sievers, 330 Genesee street, has a commodious shop, built to his order, in which he makes a special bid for funeral work. To give an idea of the extent of the business, a carload of sphagnum moss, 125 five barrel bales, is used each year in filling designs, hundreds of which are kept mossed up, ready for instant use. Standing, full-round wreaths are favored in sizes from 10 to 24 inches. All designs are backed with green wax paper. Frames for casket covers are in several lengths, all seven inches wide. These are made of corrugated pasteboard, with a stout wire edge. When mossed, they are quite firm, yet flexible. When nicely filled, they cover the top of a casket very effectively. A well-lined wooden box, five feet long, 12 inches deep and two feet wide, is used for funeral palms in winter. This holds six palms laid down, and protects them from frost in quite long distance hauling in cold undertakers' wagons. Green and bronze galax are found much better material for edging design work than ferns.

Jacob B. Wiese has a model shop in the Washington market. Large show windows on both sides, in which there are displays of plants, flowers and made up work, make a splendid showing.

Peter Hoffman, 301 Washington market, has also a very convenient and compact place of business in which he makes a good showing. The benefits of the market's cold storage system in the cutflower show cases is a great convenience.

Stroh's Quality Flowers, 379 Main street, is a busy place, being in the heart of the shopping district. A large stock of cut flowers, all well featured in window and store, made this an attractive shop.

There are a number of other stores, over 75 different establishments, many of them quite important, all showing the Buffalo energy, but it was not possible to visit each of them at this time.

FINE DEMAND IN ALL LINES.

Trade is in fine condition here in all branches of business. There is a steady demand for flowers of every description, with the result that both wholesaler and retailer are cleaning up all daily offerings of stock. In chrysanthemums, which are still the most popular seasonable flowers, prices of all stock are firm. While the daily receipts are not so heavy as heretofore, owing to the advancing season, there is still a fine lot of blooms to select from. The Turner family has now passed out for this season. Chieftain, May Hunter and Dr. Enguehardt are the leading pink varieties. Some very fine Helen Frick are also to be had. In whites, Jennie Nonin and White Chieftain are best. Mrs. O. H. Kahn is the leading bronze, while Major Bonnaffon is about the only thing we have in yellow. The Chinese growers are sending in heavy cuts of small white and pink chrysanthemums, most of which are used in funeral work. They are very acceptable just at present, for there is a scarcity of other stock for this work. Pompons are more in evidence now than for some time past. Every color is available, and this stock is in much demand for decorative work of every description. There is quite a supply of singles, also. The rose market is in very good shape. Stock is in generous supply and bringing good prices. There is a steady call for first-class Russell, but only a limited supply is arriving. All other varieties may be had in the best of quality, particularly Ophelia and Columbia. Shawyer, Radiance and Hadley are also good and sell readily. There are no more Ulrich Brunners. Just now Cecile Brunner is quite scarce. It is in great demand. Quite a good supply of Mrs. Aaron Ward is coming in. This is very popular for corsage work and largely used in the absence of Cecile Brunner. The shipping demand for roses is reported as quite strong in the wholesale market. Most of the carnations arriving are of poor quality and substance. Very little of the new crop has come in that might be said to be first-class. Most of the stock received is from plants that are being held over, and consequently are inferior. Good stock commands fine prices. The violet market is somewhat overcrowded, owing to oversupply. While the shipping trade is disposing of an immense cut every day, it does not seem to diminish the supply much, and violet peddlers are to be seen everywhere, trying to dispose of surplus stock. They are offering both the Giant and Princess. This condition is liable to end as soon as the cold weather sets in. The orchid supply has shortened up very much during the past week, and at present, there is not enough stock to supply the local demand. This applies to cattleyas only, as we still have quite a few of the other varieties, such as oncidiums and odontoglossums. As yet, we have no lily of the valley. The supply of all outdoor flowers is practically at an end. Some very nice ericas are coming in, and are moving well, chiefly in basket work. Cut cyclamens are coming in freely, and sell rapidly. There is little change in the plant situation. Cyclamens are to be had, but no fancy stock has arrived as yet. There is a consistent demand for Bostons in all sizes. Cibotiums and aspidistras also sell well. Ferns of all varieties and asparagus are getting scarcer every day.

NOTES.

The Western Nursery Company, at Redwood City, is sending in a large cut of chrysanthemums to this market. They are also cutting a large crop of pompons. Their greenhouses are planted to carnations, principally the Enchantress family. The S. Enomoto Nursery, at Redwood, is another grower who has made a great success of chrysanthemum growing. He is also an extensive shipper of cut flowers. Quite a stock of Japanese plants is carried at this place, most of which is disposed of locally. Carnations are grown, both outdoors and under glass.

Efforts to save from extinction, by ruthless tearing up and waste, Hetromeles arbutifolia, often called the California Christmas berry, one of the state's most colorful marks of beauty, are being made by Mrs. Bertha M. Rice, secretary of the California Wild Flower Conservation League. Mrs. Rice is soliciting the aid of scientists, school children and nature lovers in her fight. She will address the Audubon Society of the Pacific this coming week on "Natural Flora and its Influence on Wild Flower Conservation."

Martin A. Poss, proprietor of the Floral City greenhouses, at San Mateo, reports that trade has been excellent at his place. His store has been kept busy with funeral work right along. His greenhouses are all filled with seasonable stock, and the greater part of it is for his holiday trade. Mr. Poss has made many improvements at this place in the last few years, and has built up a very substantial trade. He has developed a large landscape department, which employs many men.

Owing to the scarcity of European bay trees in this market during the past few years, some of our growers selected Eugenia Myrtifolia as being a good substitute. They have been trained as standards and pyramids, and have proven to be a great success. They are not attacked by scale, and where climatic conditions are suitable, they should be very desirable. They are being largely used in this city and give much satisfaction.

The E. W. McLellan Co. will shortly be in with a fine cut of Russell roses. Their range at Burlingame is in the best of shape, and the crop outlook is very good. They are cutting a large supply of Asparagus plumosus, all of which is used in their shipping trade, which Manager Avensino reports to be very brisk. Chrysanthemums, roses and violets make up the bulk of the stock going out.

Albert O. Stein's splendid store at 1150 Sutter street, has been receiving a fine lot of exhibition blooms of the newest chrysanthemums. They are shown to the greatest advantage in their spacious store. Decorative work, which is a specialty here, has been brisk during the entire fall season, and the firm has been called upon to carry out many of them in outside cities.

The Charles C. Navlet Co., at 423 Market street, is disposing of large quantities of bulbs and reports counter trade as ahead of last season. In their cut flower department, they are showing large stocks of seasonable flowers, and are specializing on violets, of which they use large quantities daily. They ship large numbers of floral designs to out of town points.

G. Rossi & Co., who operate a large establishment at Colma, are growing a large quantity of bulbs this season. They will feature tulips and hyacinths principally. Their fern houses are now producing a large supply of fronds daily. They have several houses of kentias and aspidistras and many thousand Bostons, all of which look to be in good shape.

The Richard Diener Company, at Kentfield, has harvested a fine crop of gladioli bulbs. They have many of their own seedlings in sufficient quantity to put on the market this season. Mr. Diener is now busily engaged on his new catalogue. They are asking fancy prices for some of their new seedlings, which are said to be very beautiful.

Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is sending in a large cut of his new adiantum, which has been known locally for some time past as Adiantum Pelicani. He has worked up a large stock of it during the past few years, and intends to disseminate this valuable novelty in the near future. Trade at his store on Kearny street keeps up well.

Shellgrain & Ritter, on Kearny street, report a splendid trade of late. The shortage of the orchid supply has handicapped them to some extent. Manager Shellgrain says funeral work and decorations have kept the force busy every day. Their store, which is always attractive, has been showing some splendid chrysanthemums and roses.

H. Plath, proprietor of the Ferneries, is supplying the trade in this city with a splendid lot of ferns. He has a fine large stock, but finds the demand almost equal to his supply. He has some beautiful specimens, which will be ready for the holidays. He says shipping trade is very brisk and continuous.

Julius Eppstein, of the St. Francis Flower Shop, has had a busy week with decorations. He used large quantities of yellow and white chrysanthemums in the work. Nothing but the best in flowers is carried at this store, which specializes in gardenias and orchids.

Domoto Bros. are receiving a steady cut of good roses from their greenhouses. T. Domoto says his houses will produce a heavy cut all season. Plant trade is opening up nicely here, but lack of rain has delayed the digging of ornamental stock from the field.

Podesta & Baldocchi have been making elaborate window displays of many varieties of orchids. Victor Podesta is in hopes that the shortage of orchids, which we are now experiencing, will be only temporary, as he says the demand for them is strong at all times.

J. Seulberger & Co., at 418 Fourteenth street, Oakland, report a steady demand for all kinds of flowers and plants this season. This is one of the pioneer establishments of this city, and has always been noted for the fine quality of the work turned out.

G. Nespoli, who is one of our best known fern growers, has his range in excellent shape at the present time. He is the largest grower here of Adiantum Williamsii, which he grows to perfection. All his cut is disposed of in this market.

Enomoto & Company are receving a heavy cut of pompons from their nursery at Redwood City. These are all used in their shipping trade. Their carnation houses are looking promising, and a steady cut is being received daily.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, was in town during the week, arranging for his Thanksgiving supply of flowers and plants. Nearly the entire supply of flowers used in that city are shipped from this market and vicinity.

The Young American Florists, at 3011 Mission street, are doing a large amount of business in chrysanthemums. They do a heavy funeral trade for the cemeteries, and are extensive buyers of medium priced stock.

The United Flower Supply Co., at 448 Bush street, report a steady demand for florists' supplies of all kinds. Shipping business is good with them. They are shipping violets in quantity to distant points.

The H. M. Sanborn Co., at 1325 Broadway, Oakland, is having a most successful season. Their fine store is always arranged in an attractive manner, and they always carry a fine grade of flowers.

Brown & Kennedy, at 3091 Sixteenth street, have had a busy week on funeral work. They have been large buyers at the market every morning, which indicates that business has been good.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

Baltimore.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS HOLD FIRM POSITION.

The market during week underwent a slight change, both in quality and quantity. Chrysanthemums are still the predominating flower, colors being a little more plentiful, and some varieties have made their appearance, which have not been sold in quantity before on this market. Marigold is one of the yellows, which has made quite a hit, the color being such a rich gold makes it stand out from the others. Although, there have been some heavy frosts, no freezing weather has been experienced, and the glut of out of door chrysanthemums stops the sale of carnations and other miscellaneous flowers used as decoration for the dinner table. Armistice day was celebrated in the rain, and after supplying the retailers with some stock needed for filling necessary orders, the wholesalers closed at noon. Orchids are still very scarce, and some few gardenias are now on the market. The first cypripediums of the season, grown here, were sold November 12.

CLUB MEETING.

The florists' club met at the accustomed place at the usual time, with President Ekas in the chair. There were about 30 present, wholesalers, growers and retailers being well represented. Mayor Broenning was tendered an honorary membership in the club, and the secretary was instructed to write notification of same. The entertainment committee reported on the ladies' night at the Southern hotel and the deficit existing after the sale of tickets, was cheerfully met by the club, the consensus of opinion being that it was the best money the club ever spent. The committees for the ensuing year were announced, and W. F. Keys, Jr., was appointed the club's florist for the year. Some very interesting questions left over from the previous meeting, were discussed. The question box revealed the following: "If the grower pays double for the things he buys, what must he demand for his product, and if he demands a legitimate return, what will occur in the retail store?" The question will be answered at the December meeting by growers Fred C. Bauer and Isaac H. Moss, and retailers Robt. W. Johnston and Robt. L. Graham, Jr. Announcement was made by the entertainment committee that refreshments would be one of the features at the next meeting.

NOTES.

Robt. W. Johnston, who served his country in the recent war in the first division, and went through five drives without an injury, had a very unique window decoration for Armistice day, consisting of trophies brought back from the front. Louis Glick, of the Leo Niessen Co., and Harry Glick, of Sieck & Glick, recently joined the florists' club. Welcome, wholesalers.

Frank E. Cremer, a grower of Hanover, Pa., paid this city a visit last week calling on some of the wholesalers.

TRADE BENEFITS BY SPECIAL FEATURES.

Business during the past week, known as "Say it With Flowers" week, in this city was excellent. The committee in charge advertised extensively in the local papers and displayed large posters with the slogan on autos and in the flower shop windows. Armistice day was set aside for donations of plants and flowers to the various hospitals. The day was also featured by a parade of florists' vehicles through the principal streets of the city. Long stem roses at this writing are scarce and bring high prices. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and on account of the rose shortage, are selling from $1.50 to $4 per dozen for Bonnaffon. Sweet peas are arriving in good numbers and move at $2-$2.50 per 100. Lily of the valley remains at $18 per 100. Easter lilies are quoted at $3 a dozen. Pansies and pompons meet with a good demand.

NOTES.

Mrs. J. Regan's shop on Summer street, presents a very attractive appearance, the displays being very effective and artistic.

S. Goddard is shipping to this market excellent stock of Carnations Laddie, Pink Delight, Benora and a new red seedling.

The Boston Rose Co. is having good success with Pilgrim, Crusader, Premier, Ophelia and Hadley.

B. A. Snyder & Co. report good business with steadily increasing shipping demand.

Welch Bros. Co. report trade shows considerable increase over previous years.

The Late John T. Shore.

John T. Shore, for many years head gardener on a large private estate at Harrison, N. Y., died there November 12, age 76 years. He was born in Ireland, but had long been a resident of this country. Mr. Shore was well known and highly respected in the gardening fraternity, and by seedsmen and others doing business with the estate. Some years ago, he organized the Westchester County (N. Y.) Horticultural Society. Later, he served a term as president of the National Association of Gardeners. He was a school trustee for 18 years, and assisted in establishing the Harrison fire department, of which he was president 15 years. Robert Shore, a brother, is superintendent in the botanical department at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

THE supply of bouquet green and cut boxwood is very short.

MUCH business is waiting on the actual disappearance of the coal miners into the ground.

UNDERSIZED bunches of immortelles are being imported again this season. The correct weight of standard size bunches should not be less than four ounces. Caveat emptor.

THE federal horticultural board is reported to have punished a resident Dutch importer, who made immediate distribution of Iris Tingitana which he imported as a novelty to grow on.

E. G. HILL, the well known rose expert of Richmond, Ind., says that on account of the high price of manetti, Oregon growers are experimenting with sweet briar as a substitute for this stock.

GLADIOLUS SCAB seems to be the result of soil conditions. Where soil is sour and heavy, certain varieties, which are probably more susceptible to scab than others, will nearly always show this disease.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The following requests for registration of roses have been approved by the rose registration committee. Unless objections are received at the society's office within three weeks from the date of this publication, the registrations will be permanently accepted.

Name, Cornelia. Class, hybrid tea. Parentage, Ophelia and Mrs. Aaron Ward. Description: Habit of plant, strong and vigorous. Character of foliage, like Mrs. Aaron Ward. Freedom of growth and hardiness, free; hardiness not tested. Flower, medium to large. Color, outer petals light flesh, with center bright malmaison pink; base of petals bright orange. Form, good. Fragrance and bud, fragrant; bud like Mrs. Aaron Ward. Petalage, very double. Freedom of bloom and lasting quality, very free and lasting. The rose is similar to both parents, but is different in color and superior, because it is the best of its color to date, commercially valuable as a bud, half expanded flower and full flower.

Signed: Robert Scott & Sons, Inc.

Name, Crusader. Class, hybrid tea. Parentage, Montgomery seedling. Description: Habit of plant, vigorous. Character of foliage, large, dark green. Freedom of growth, free. Flower, large and full. Color, crimson red. Form, globular, high center. Frangrance and bud, moderate fragrance, ovoid bud. Petalage, 65. Freedom of bloom and lasting quality, free bloomer; good keeper. The rose is distinct.

(Signed) The Montgomery Co., Inc.

Name, Pilgrim. Class, hybrid tea. Parentage, Montgomery seedling. Description: Habit of plant, vigorous. Character of foliage, normal green, large. Freedom of growth, very free. Flower, large and full. Color, deep rose pink, outside; silvery pink, inside. Form, perfectly imbricated. Fragrance and bud, decided fragrance; long-pointed bud. Petalage, 40. Freedom of bloom and lasting quality, very free; splendid keeper. The rose is distinct; of a two-toned pink.

"Say it With Flowers" at Chicago.

During Thanksgiving week, Miss Frances Kennedy, well-known musical commedienne, will present the feature act at the Majestic Theater, Chicago, when she will sing William Von Tilzer's already famous composition, "Say it With Flowers." The Retail Florists' Association of Chicago has recognized the unusual impetus that will be given to the trade through this unique event, free of commercialism, and has taken steps to make the performances at the theater unusually enjoyable to its patrons. During Miss Kennedy's engagement, the lobby will be handsomely decorated with palms and flowers, which will carry on cards attached, the already well-known slogan, "Say it With Flowers." While Miss Kennedy is singing her song, she will distribute a basket of flowers, to each of which will be fastened a tiny card with the wording, "Say it With Flowers, Compliments of Frances Kennedy." At each performance, the singer will be presented with a beautiful floral piece over the foot-lights.

Tuesday, November 25, has been designated as "florists' night," and it is urged that every effort be made to make the representation of the trade at the Majestic that evening as noticeable as possible. A special programme for this performance is now under consideration. Tickets may be secured from A. Lange, 77-79 East Madison street.

Members of the association will be supplied with a beautiful card which it is requested be given a prominent place in their windows, which should be decorated with a view to calling all possible attention to this feature. It is also expected that there will be considerable publicity given to the song through the newspapers. The song is a masterpiece of melody and thought which has immediately won instant popularity wherever it has been introduced and its presentation in Chicago during a holiday week, by a popular stage favorite, is rare good fortune worthy of a big boost by all members of the craft in the city and vicinity.

GOOD SUPPLY OF EXCELLENT QUALITY.

Cut flower stock is more plentiful and the quality greatly improved over previous weeks, especially in chrysanthemums, which are now the leaders in popularity. Roses are good and priced a little lower, as they do not move as freely when in competition with the chrysanthemums. Carnations are better in grade and the supply has increased. Narcissi and stevia are now arriving and for the first of the season, they are of very good grade. Pot chrysanthemums are more in evidence and are very good, both in the large and small varieties. Funeral and hospital work holds up well and there have been numerous weddings, some quite large affairs, during the past week.

NOTES.

A fine supply of stock is seen daily at the establishment of H. Kusik & Co. This is especially true of Bonnaffon and White Eaton chrysanthemums, both very good for the season. Ophelia, Russell and Columbia roses are also fine and the carnation supply is increasing steadily. Wire work is in heavy demand.

W. J. Barnes has had a heavy call for funeral and hospital work which has made a heavy demand on his chrysanthemum supply. Pot plants of this flower are moving faster than in any previous year. As a close to the week, he arranged an elaborate wedding decoration at the Princeton hotel.

Visitors: P. A. Manson and Tucker Smith, Pleasant Hill, Mo.; Paul R. Klingsporn, Chicago; Wm. Montgomery, Santa Cruz, Calif.; M. Lambert, La Porte, Ind.; J. C. Steinhauser, Pittsburg, Kan.; Alex. Newett, St. Joseph, Mo., and Julius Dilloff, New York.

Samuel Murray has an ample supply of fine chrysanthemums, the quality being much better than in former years. As a result they easily bring high prices. Roses, also are fully up to standard. Business in funeral and wedding work is excellent.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. held its annual chrysanthemum show at its store and the gratifying attendance augurs well for excellent business during the coming season. The flowers made a fine showing.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports excellent orders booked for Thanksgiving. This firm has increased its glass area at the farm. It has also affiliated with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

Arthur Newell reports a good business. He is at present featuring a good supply of large chrysanthemums and pompons from California. Very large pot stock is being received from Chicago.

T. J. Noll & Co. are handling chrysanthemums in quantity, roses are plentiful and good home grown carnations are coming in daily. Shipping trade is unusually heavy.

Wm. Foith reports increasing business with splendid crops of carnations and other stock coming on. He expects to be in fine shape to care for his Christmas trade.

The Rosery reports excellent business, especially in funeral orders. They recently made a strong feature of straw flowers arranged in baskets of different shapes.

McGrail & Conkling are handling fine stock of chrysanthemums, both cut blooms and in pots. Funeral and wedding orders have been quite numerous.

A. F. Barbee is cutting excellent chrysanthemums and Ophelia roses. Carnations are in fine shape and he has a fine block of begonias.

Miss J. E. Murray reports excellent business and is well supplied with high quality stock.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., Saturday, November 15, with Vice-President Kidder in the chair. Mr. Kidder announced that the trustees had appropriated $7,500 for six exhibitions during the ensuing year, and that Miss M. R. Case, of Hillcrest Farm, Weston, had contributed $1,000 for four additional exhibitions.

The following officers of the society for the year 1920 were elected. Wm. C. Endicott, president; C. S. Sargent, vice-president. Trustees for three years—Albert C. Burrage, Ernest B. Dane, Edwin S. Webster, and Fred A. Wilson; trustee for two years, Arthur Fewkes. Nominating committee—Oakes Ames, William Anderson, John K. M. L. Farquhar, Samuel J. Goddard, and John E. Thayer.

An interesting feature of the meeting was an exhibit of a large collection of cypripediums of numerous species and hybrids by Albert C. Burrage, Douglas Eccleston, superintendent. It was awarded a silver medal. Mr. Burrage also exhibited a plant of Laelio-Cattleya Alice Burrage, never before shown. It is a cross between Laelio-Cattleya Lustre and Cattleya Reubens. This was also awarded a silver medal.

SUPPLY SHORTENED WITH FAIR DEMAND.

Business continues fair, with no particular increase noticed, except a few weddings. The weather has been ideal, and there is no good reason why trade should not improve considerably. A noticeable thing, however, is the number of November weddings that have taken place, and are still scheduled for this month. Funeral business has been only fair. The supply of stock has shortened up a trifle. This is particularly true of roses. In fact, they have become positively scarce, and a selection of rose stock is a problem from day to day. Carnations are improving, but with the steady supply of chrysanthemums, carnations are still down in price. It seems that all cut chrysanthemums are coming in early, and Thanksgiving should clean up about everything, as the growers are cutting their late stock now. Violets and sweet peas are coming slow, but with the present weather continuing a while, should show decided improvement. Other miscellaneous stock is equal to the demand, with the exception of lily of the valley, which is a real luxury at $26 per 100, which makes it prohibitive for ordinary wedding work. Greens are in fair supply.

NOTES.

The florists' club held its November meeting at Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney's tea rooms as the guests of Messrs. Schaeffer and Steitz. It was one of the best meetings the club has held for some time. The attendance was very good, and as an added attraction, the trustees staged a chrysanthemum show, which was very creditable for a florist club meeting. M. L. Wilkinson, of the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney establishment, welcomed the florists, impressing upon them the beauty and sentiment of the wares in which the florist deals. He also sounded the keynote of the future of the St. Louis business, and pictured the vast territory for trade open to the local growers in the great southwest. He is a man of great vision, which is natural for the head of one of the greatest mercantile houses of the west. As a tribute to him, the club sent him all of the cut flowers on exhibition at the meeting. One of the outstanding features of the club business was the 44 new applications presented, 40 of which were handed in by Frank A. Windler. The club now boasts over 80 per cent of the florist trade in and around this city among its membership. After the meeting, the hosts served an elegant lunch and everybody departed happy, after inspecting Messrs. Schaefler and Steitz's floral department, which was found to be one of the most completely equipped flower stores in the city.

The results of the bowling league the past week were as follows: Carnations took three straight from the Sweet Peas, and the Daisies took two from the Roses. These results tightened up the race considerably.

Quite a few large weddings are scheduled for the latter half of the month. A number of florists reported having three and four for Thanksgiving day alone.

GOOD OUTLOOK FOR THANKSGIVING.

Trade during the past week has been excellent, with stock plentiful. Chrysanthemums are moving well and the outlook for Thanksgiving is promising. There will be some chrysanthemums for that occasion, but the largest blooms will be about done for this week. Carnations are of good quality and move freely. The rose market has taken a jump and with the arrival of cooler days, the violets have shown improvement although the demand is not heavy. Sweet peas are seen and will continue to improve in quality. Small pompons sell well. Snapdragons are plentiful.

Iowa Horticultural Society Banquet.

The members of the Iowa Horticultural Society held a banquet, November 12, at the Harris-Emery tea room, Des Moines, which proved a most enjoyable affair, the attendance numbering about 85 persons. The tables were attractively decorated with baskets of pompons. The dinner was followed by a social session. The pripcipal speaker of the evening was President J. F. PLACE YOUR THANKSGIVING ORDERS NOW.

Business was better the past week than it has been for some time, although at intervals it was very quiet. One dealer, in comparing his prices for last month with those of the same period in 1918, finds that they were at least from 20 to 50 per cent lower this season than they were then. Prices this month are better, but far from what they should be as any grower will admit, except in rare instances where he may have had some item exceptionally good that the buyer wanted very much, or in such cases, where the returns were based on orchids or lily of the valley. Chrysanthemums are in large supply at this writing, and are moving fairly well, although at times considerable pushing is needed to move all the stock. Pompons are in good demand, and are cleaning up nicely at prices ranging from 35 cents to 75 cents per bunch. Carnations are having a good call, and so are violets, which have advanced considerably in price. Home-grown lily of the valley is still commanding 20 cents, but a large quantity of eastern stock has been offered here this week at 16 cents and 18 cents. Lilies are none too plentiful, although several shipments have been received from out-of-town points. The dealers are asking $4 per dozen for the best lilies, but the buyer is not in any hurry to take them at that figure, judging from all reports. American Beauty roses are in strong demand at high prices and clean up nicely each day. Roses in general are in good supply and are moving as well as can be expected considering the general market con tions. Mrs. Chas. and Thayer are the principal offerings in this line, although there are a few other varieties available including Montrose. Sweet peas are commanding good prices and so are gardenias. Daisies, Paper White narcissus, yellow narcissus, snapdragons, pansies, calendulas, callas and bouvardia are on the bill of fare. Red winter berries are seen at a few of the stores, and some California holly has made its appearance. Ferns are bringing $3. Boxwood is in strong demand at 35 cents per pound, and wild smilax is cleaning up at $6 per case. Smilax is bringing $3 per dozen. The outlook is very encouraging for a brisk Thanksgiving business, and while at present it appears as if there will be plenty of stock to go around, everyone will do well to place their orders immediately, for a grand-cleanup in all lines would not be at all surprising.

NOTES.

The Fleischman Floral Co. has been exceptionally busy the past week at its establishment at 84 East Jackson boulevard. Manager Ed. Mallison has been complimented often the past few days on the "Flowers Gratis" advertisement that appeared for his firm in the leading daily, November 14.

Chas. A. Samuelson returned home, November 14, from Idaho, where he has an extensive farm and orchard. Ed. Enders is glad that he is back to relieve him from some of the work which was so plentiful this year that he has not been able to take a vacation.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are enjoying a splendid business with both a good local and out-of-town demand. The outlook for Thanksgiving is very bright at this establishment and many advance orders have already been booked.

Kennicott Bros. Co.'s sales for October were considerably ahead of those of the same month of 1918. Their sales for July, August and September also show a gain over the corresponding period of last year.

Mike Poletsos, 35 East Adams street, reports that the first nine days of this month were exceptionally brisk, with the sales for that period greater than the entire month of November in 1918.

George Wienhoeber reports that his October sales were much better this year than for the same period in 1918.

Al. Barber, of the Park Flower Shop, Cleveland, O., was here this week, buying stock for his Thanksgiving trade.

Hilmer V. Swenson, of the Hilmer V. Swenson Co., is back from a successful trip through the east.

It is rumored that a new wholesale house will open for business here in the near future.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., and Paul Weiss, of the Weiss-Spandikow Co., visited the growers at Richmond, Ind., last week.

Frank Oechslin reports business good in the plant line with the sales running ahead of last season.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner report a brisk demand for Bonnaffon chrysanthemums, which are in heavy supply with them. Their house is now receiving the entire output of a good-sized rose grower, which should help increase their Thanksgiving sales considerably.

John Poehlmann says that Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s cut flower sales for last month were far ahead of those of October of last year. American Beauty roses are in brisk demand here, not to mention the Premier, which is at its best with this house now.

Wietor Bros. are pleased with business and are looking forward to a brisk Thanksgiving trade. A full crop of Killarney roses is in sight for this occasion, not to mention the usual supply of chrysanthemums and pompons.

The Alpha Floral Co. always has a magnificent showing of stock at its South Wabash avenue store. Chrysanthemums particularly, have been featured extensively in the window displays of late.

The Joseph Foerster Co. has no reason to complain of dull business, judging from the many customers seen at their store at all times. Their city trade has been very good all season.

Mida's Trademark Bureau, inviting patrons to visit their booth at the national business show, says: "We should be pleased to welcome you, and pin a flower on your lapel."

Superintendent Brydon, of the Wrigley Estate, at Lake Geneva, Wis., has been sending in some well grown chrysanthemum blooms.

Heaton Nichols, for some time with the Ohio Floral Co., is now at Harry C. Rowe's store on east Madison street.

The George Wittbold Co. started another campaign of advertising in the daily papers this month. Louis Wittbold's son, John, is becoming quite active in the business, and was elected secretary of the Retail Florists' Association at its last meeting.

The opera season opened this week and, of course, the retailer benefited considerably by it. Orchids are in such short supply that many of the retailers were unable to fill their orders for them.

J. A. Budlong Co. is enjoying a busy month, and judging from the heavy receipts of stock at the store, this firm will not have to turn any Thanksgiving orders away.

At Peter Reinberg's store, the shipping trade is showing a marked improvement, and the outlok is encouraging for a heavy Thanksgiving trade.

Bassett & Washburn report a busy week, with a heavy demand from out-of-town points. Chrysanthemums and roses are in good crop with them.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, who attended the flower show of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, at Indianapolis, last week, reports that the exhibits of roses, chrysanthemums and carnations were particularly fine.

The A. L. Randall Co.'s store fixture department is placing a new standardized refrigerator on the market. A new catalogue covering this branch of their business, is ready for mailing, and is being sent free to all florists.

The E. F. Winterson Co. had several vases of the new chrysanthemum, Mrs. C. W. Johnson, on display at its store this week. Everyone pronounced it a winner.

The John Kruchten Co., has been moving a good supply of chrysanthemums the past few days, particularly Bonnaffon, which are arriving in quality.

The American Bulb Co. is please with the demand for lily bulbs this season, and is moving a large supply of them.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are handling more stock than ever, especially chrysanthemums, which are plentiful with them.

At Percy Jones' store, chrysanthemums are in strong demand, and clean up nicely right along.

STOCK PLENTIFUL AND DEMAND STEADY.

Trade conditions in this city and vicinity are very fair, the demand holding to an even trend and the supply ample for requirements. Chrysanthemums are available in all grades at prices varying from $3 to $18 per dozen, with a few specials offered at $24. Roses are plentiful but their sale is limited owing to the abundance of chrysanthemums. Carnations are of good grade and move well. "Say it With Flowers" week was well advertised and will bear good fruit later on. The store windows are especially attractive at present. Florists' Telegraph Delivery orders are now coming to this city in good numbers and the local shops are good boosters.

NOTE.

The second flower show of the park greenhouses was a great success, the chrysanthemums being in perfect condition, with Turner, white and yellow in profusion, with fine flowers. The estimated attendance for the week was 142,000. The miniature lake and fountain surrounded by pot pompons was greatly admired.

BISON.

Detroit, Mich.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS REACH HIGH MARK.

The chrysanthemum season is now at its apex and the finest blooms of the local growers are seen in great quantities at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. This house also handles much of the stock of George Bayer, Toledo, O., whose famous Bonnaffons excel those of any other grower shipping to this market. The original cases are usually sold without inspection, a mark of distinction and merit not enjoyed by any other consignor. Roses are coming in of fine quality, and sometimes the quantity is in excess of normal demands and a reduction in price is necessary to move them. Carnations by their improved quality and increased cuts are becoming a factor. Violets are arriving, but meet with slow sale, as the quality is not attractive. As usual at this season, the chrysanthemum is, by its seasonable popularity, used for nearly every occasion requiring effective display, and a corresponding neglect of other items follows.

NOTES.

The Strand Company, C. Oscar Strand, president, 49 Washington boulevard, the latest addition to the city's retailers, is meeting with encouraging trade in its unique shop, admirably equipped and well supplied with a quality and variety of flowers to support their slogan, "Charm with Distinction." The company's greenhouses of 60,000 square feet at Farmington, Mich., are sending in fine carnations and chrysanthemums. The firm carries a full stock of bulbs, and in this line, has been favored with many big orders.

Michigan's 339th infantry hero dead arrived in this city, November 16. The sixty-eight metallic caskets in the cortege were laden with a profusion of flowers, wreaths, sprays, and clusters, of all colors. Most of the wreaths bore cards inscribed, "The Detroit Florists," who contributed them, through the publicity committee. A. Pochelon, chairman, had charge of the arrangements of the florists' tributes, many of which were of exceptional merit.

Wm. Hielscher, for many years a manufacturer of florists' wire designs, at 264 Randolph street, has abandoned that line of work and entered the retail florist business, buying the shop and greenhouse attached of Casper Pult, East Milwaukee avenue. Mr. Pult will take a well earned rest, which will include a trip to Europe in the early spring.

James Hamilton, the well-known gardener for E. S. Buhl, sailed November 16, for Glasgow, Scotland, from which city he came to this country, 15 years ago. He will be away for about three months, and will visit the floral centers of England before his return.

Raleigh Wells, for many years a salesman of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange force, has taken a position with Peter Reuss & Co. in their Broadway store.

HEAVY RECEIPTS WITH BRISK MOVEMENT.

Conditions for the past week again showed an improvement over the previous one. While the daily receipts of pompons and single chrysanthemums are still heavy, the demand is great enough to give the market a good tone. The supply of large chrysanthemums is about equal to the call. Roses were somewhat more plentiful and moved well, while carnations still feel the competition of the bunch chrysanthemums.

At the Brown Deer range of the Holton & Hunkel Co., they are again crowded for room, in spite of the many up-to-date houses which are operated in a systematic way. Directly a bunch of chrysanthemums is cut, there is always plenty other stock to fill in.

Gust Bauman & Sons have worked up a good retail trade at the Wanderer's Rest cemetery. Their stock never looked better, especially the carnations. A large cut of single chrysanthemums will come in just right for the Thanksgiving trade.

We were treated to a little surprise November 13-14, when the thermometer went down to 14 and 17 above zero. Quite unusual to get so cold in this vicinity in November.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. feels somewhat easier since the arrival of all their Dutch bulbs, also their consignment of giganteum lilies. November 14-15.

Gust Rusch & Co. have added another man to their wire department, which gives them a chance now to fill all orders on short notice.

The A. F. Kellner Co. is rushed with decorative work at the Auditorium, for the food and music show, to be held November 20-25.

From present reports, there will be a good supply of all kinds of cut flowers for the Thanksgiving holiday.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The annual flower show of the park board which opened November 9 and will continue until November 23, had more than 3,000 plants on view included in which were chrysanthemums in nearly 300 varieties.

Seattle, Wash.

SHORTENED SUPPLY LIMITS SALES.

Trade fell off a little here during the past week, but limitation of offerings was the main factor in this condition. There is still a notably light cut of carnations, and the growers say they are not at all inclined to force production for the sake of immediately relieving the situation. California chrysanthemums still supply the bulk of the trade, but the local crop is now arriving in fine condition, and will command a readier sale on account of the greater comparative freshness. The Japanese growers have been delivering some especially good White Turners, and Cecile, a pink pompon. Transient business has shown a steady improvement, the fall season being marked with the return of those having summer homes and the passing of most garden flowers. The celebration of Armistice day, while lacking the spontaneousness of the 1918 holiday, drew large crowds to the business section, and all of the retailers were featuring corsages. The rose cut is holding up well, with Ophelia more common than Columbia. Ward, Killarney, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Sunburst are also to be had, and two growers are planning to bring in quite a few Lady Hillingdon this year. It is believed that this rose can be made to take well with the better class trade here after a little pioneering work. Cattleyas and Cypripedium insigne are the orchids offered most freely, the local cut being heavier than ever before for this season. As the prices are also holding up, this leaves no cause for complaint from the trade. The social season promises to eclipse all records. Funeral work is the usual big feature of trade, but there are not the returns from weddings that might be expected. Sales of pot offerings are large. There is evidently going to be a greater demand for flowers this Christmas season than ever before, and the retail trade is already laying careful plans. Telegraph orders have been larger this fall than ever before, and the national advertising campaign of the S. A. F. is being given credit for a considerable share of this increase. There is little lily of the valley to be had and prices are high. The usual heavy deliveries of greens are coming in from the south.

NOTES.

The Hollywood Gardens featured Armistice day with a special window display. One of the smaller windows was used to drape a large flag over the back, the folds falling flat on the window floor. Directly in front was placed an attractive basket of orchids, while on each corner was a gold candle stick, holding a blue candle. Beside one of these was a basket of red carnations and Shasta daisies, and by the other, a basket of American Beauty roses and White Turner chrysanthemums, to carry out the red, white and blue idea.

H. P. Anderson, proprietor of the University Floral Shop, 4309 Fourteenth avenue, Northeast, is carrying on a small advertising campaign in the University of Washington Daily, which is producing good results. This is the only shop adjacent to the campus, and serving the university district, and the attention of the students and householders to the value of a live green plant in the study room, of fresh flowers for the halls, or of wall boxes of ferns for the living room, is made the basis of daily ads.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop arranged a basket for a local jewelry house recently. Maple and bronze chrysanthemums, double French marigolds and three or four perfect bunches of Almeria grapes were grouped in a tall, wide mouthed basket. These grapes are always available for the holiday season, and their translucent, red afforded an effective contrast to the bright hued flowers.

The visit this week of Eamon de Valera, president of the Irish "republic," was the occasion of a great demonstration, and good business to all of the florists accrued. Anna F. Burns, of the Burns Floral Company, supplied the feature piece for the reception at the Hotel New Washington, a basket of Yellow Turners larger than the little Irish miss who presented it to de Valera.

A visitor last week was Walter K. Louis, of Los Angeles, who is associated wth P. Vincent Matraia in the Art Floral Company, of San Francisco. He reported conditions in the florist trade as generally good in all of the cities he has visited in his official position as secretary of the Western Confectioner's Association.

Rosaia Bros. have been featuring chrysanthemums and Ophelia roses almost entirely in their window displays of late, and report a very good business. Pot pompons have been used at the base of the pillars in the store with equally good effect.

HEAVY THANKSGIVING TRADE INDICATED.

Despite strikes, and rumors of strikes, business has been good and all indications point to one of the largest Thanksgivings in the history of the trade. With the exception of roses, stock has been plentiful, with enough to supply all needs. Outdoor stock is finally eliminated, which gives the flowers grown under glass the call, and consequently prices are firmer. American Beauties are of very good quality, and while the supply is not large, there are plenty to satisfy the demand. The receipts of all roses are on the short end, as most growers have pinched back for the Christmas trade. What are coming, are mostly of the longer grades, while the demand is for the cheaper quality. Chrysanthemums are not in very large supply, as the early and mid-season varieties are about cut out, and the growers are trying to hold the later ones for the Thanksgiving business. Carnations are in good supply, and the quality is fine. Paper White narcissus finds a ready market at good prices. Sweet Peas and calendulas are beginning to be a factor and meet with ready sale. The supply of greens is ample.

NOTES.

E. J. McCallum, H. D. Wood, C. E. Philips and Ed Niggel, all of the McCallum Co., have just returned from a 10 days' hunting trip in Forest county, Pa., and some of the tales they are telling are really too much.

The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co. is again featuring "the dollar box," which they were forced to discontinue last season, owing to the shortage and high prices.

The retail stores all report business as brisk, while some of them say they are booked full with decorations until the first of the year.

LARGE SUPPLY MOVES WELL.

The market is fairly good. The supply is large, but it is not as heavy as it was during the past three or four weeks. The demand is steady and has caused an advance in price. Orders for Thanksgiving are coming in nicely. Chrysanthemums are in a good supply, but they are not as plentiful as they were a fortnight ago. However, the demand for them appears better than it was at that time. Roses are fairly plentiful. Among others, Madame Butterfly, Ophelia, Columbia, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney and White Killarney may be had. Madame Butterfly are selling as quickly as they come into the market. Pompons are fairly plentiful. Callas may be had. Single violets and sweet peas are regular arrivals.

NOTES.

C. J. Ohmer and wife, and their son, James, have returned to their home at West Palm Beach, Fla. They spent the entire summer and early fall, visiting here and at the lakes.

W. Ray Murphy and H. W. Sheppard attended the flower show at Indianapolis last week. They have only words of praise for the exhibition.

GOOD VARIETY AND FIRM PRICES.

Business was quite brisk in every way during the past week. A large assortment of flowers is coming in and customers are buying liberally. Funeral work has been good, but the striking feature is the large number of weddings. Party work is also good, as the social season is now in full swing and many events are scheduled for the immediate future. On the whole, the market is satisfactory, with a better assortment of flowers coming in as the holiday season approaches. Prospects for Christmas trade are exceedingly good, both in flowers and in plants. Chrysanthemums are one of the best features. There are many varieties and they find a ready sale at from $4 to $10 per dozen. Pompons are also active, and prices range from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Carnations are in better supply than formerly, and quite a few pink varieties are offered for sale. White is still in the lead, however. A few reds are arriving and find ready call. Sweet peas are plentiful and of good quality. They retail at about 75 cents a bunch of 25. Greens are plentiful at all of the florists. Plants are now being shown at the downtown establishments. Fine cyclamens are exhibited, and are attracting a good deal of attention. Preparations have been made for an active trade in plants during the holiday season.

NOTE.

Quite a few white carnations were worn by pedestrians, Armistice day, November 11. In fact, all florists reported an extra heavy demand for carnations during that day.

J. W. L.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.

There are several well appointed stores in this thriving city of 75,000 inhabitants. Ira G. Marvin has an up-to-date store, with fine show window and large work room in the rear. A handsome flower case, filled with choice seasonable stock, is a feature. An office and commodious greenhouse for the storage of palms, occupies the entire second floor. A cash flower store at 8 South Main street, where there are also several greenhouses in the rear, is an important branch. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery has been found an important adjunct to the business.

Arthur W. B. Evans, 14 North Main street, just off the Square, is centrally located. His store is commodious and very well arranged. His business the past year had been very satisfactory.

The New York Floral Co., at 70 South Main street, is right on the square in the center of the shopping district. Their large window is kept beautifully decorated, as they feel it is their greatest asset. A good stock of flowers is carried, and business reported very good.

The large center square contained a number of flower beds, filled with foliage and flowering plants, all in splendid condition. This is a part of the park system and is in charge of Park Superintendent Charles Seybold, who is one of the country's best landscape architects.

Gottlieb Bauman, 168 South Main street, just off the square, is centrally his large store. He has a fruit department and two large spaces in the new Wilkes-Barre market, one for plants, and another for cut flowers. Mrs. Bauman is a valued assistant.

o You Sell Flowers?

Do You Merely Let the Public Buy Them?

Too many florists "accept orders" for flowers—they don't force their sales.

Those whose books show real profits are the ones who really sell their stock. They "arouse interest" and "create desire" for their merchandise.

That which makes the public pay you its money for your flowers is their beauty. The corner grocer displays his cabbages, but too often the florist hides his flowers.

To increase the flower business and to promote the display and sale of flowers, we sumbit—

THE RANDALL STANDARDIZED ISPLAY REFRIGERATOR

(Illustrated on opposite page)

This refrigerator is the size and design which long experience in flower store equipment has taught us to be the best. It's best from the standpoints of floral display, economical operation and the keeping of flowers. It's just the right size for 90% of the retail stores.

We have standardized this box. Every detail has been developed to perfection. We build them in quantities under the "continuous production" method, and so reduce the cost—you get the benefit.

Don't wait until you think you need a refrigerator—get in touch with us on this propostion today, if you know you want to sell more flowers.

GOOD DEMAND AND NO CARRYOVER.

Opening strong, owing to the great demand at the close of the previous week, the market, November 10, was very encouraging, there being sale for all good stock at advancing prices. It eased up a little for a couple of days, but Friday and Saturday, business was fine, and there was little left to carry over. The chrysanthemums are of a trifle higher grade. The Chadwicks and Eatons, white and yellow, have arrived; they are always a welcome addition and mark the beginning of the end, as there is nothing comes after them. The later varieties of pompons are also seen in good shape. They are in great demand, and will be a strong factor in next week's stock. Roses are fast getting into winter form. There are not any too many, and as they gain in quality, the prices quicken to keep on a par with them. American Beauty, Russell, Columbia, Premier and Ophelia are the leaders. The flowers of Premier are now in better form, showing less of the bull heads that were prominent when the young plants were growing so fast during the summer. Premier with 24-inch stems, and Columbia with 30-inch, are now offered. Carnations are better and more plentiful, and will take quite a jump when the chrysanthemums pass out about December 1. There are good snapdragons, a fair showing of calendulas and more sweet peas than ever before seen at this season. The quality of all of this stock is fine. Violets are selling up to the last bunch, the crop shortening up as it always does before Thanksgiving week. Cattleyas are much below the demand; anything worth while brings $1.00.

NOTES.

The retailers are, for the most part, satisfied with their business for the season, some, in fact, reporting a very busy week with weddings, coming-out teas and other social functions. J. J. Habermehl's Sons had some quite large affairs, both in and out of town, and the London Flower Shop is kept busy with the debutantes. H. H. Battles' large store is always rushed with orders, and his show window, with its unique color and artistic flower effects, is very attractive. His bee-hive Century Flower Shop is a model flower store in every sense of the word, where the transient trade are sure to find seasonable plants and cut flowers in great variety, all featured and arranged as to be most inviting and salable.

A chrysanthemum grower of experience stated that Major Bonnafon is one of the best yet. Many varieties have been introduced that would surpass it on the exhibition table, but they have come and gone, while "the Major" is as popular today as ever. Some growers get the notion once in a while that it is running out and drop it from their list, only to take it up again later. The Chadwicks, white and yellow, are also old reliables that are splendid producers and bring top figures in the market.

Elmer Weaver, Ronx, Lancaster county, Pa., the sweet pea expert, was in town last week. He feels that growers of cut flowers generally should contribute liberally to the S. A. F. advertising fund. Being producers, they can assist materially in this way to make a better market for their stock.

The florists of the nation's capital appear to have made a wonderful success of "Say it with Flowers" week, even if they did "go up in the air" over it. It was President Blackistone's idea, and we hope that it greatly quickened what promises to be a successful flower season.

One of the large wholesalers is of the opinion that as soon as the chrysanthemums are cut out, there will be a substantial advance in prices, particularly in the higher grades of all stock, as there is not any too much now when the market is full of chrysanthemums.

Philip Breitmeyer and wife, of Detroit, Mich., were in the city the past week, attending the wedding of their niece, Miss Margaret Stortz. Mr. Breitmeyer looks well, and reports business in Detroit, and throughout that section, very satisfying.

Charles H. Grakelow, referring to his downtown store plan, thinks he will wait a while, until the rent profiteers cool off a little. Just at present, they want the penny, and the cake, too.

The new mastic floor laid recently in George Craig's store, gives the shop a most finished appearance. His greenhouse and garage in the rear are a great convenience.

Charles B. Stahl has installed a new show refrigerator, a facility he has needed for some time. Business has been good through the fall, particularly in decorations.

MODERATE SUPPLY; PRICES SATISFACTORY.

Although it is always hard to find a wholesaler that will say that business is good, we will say for that branch of the business, that it is not at all bad. Now that much colder weather has put down the outdoor stock, the supply is not exceptionally heavy, and good prices are being realized. In fact, some of the leading retailers say that prices are too high, but they often say that and it is a question that they are quite willing to leave to the two branches to arbitrate. The stock of American Beauty roses is light, and prices have been creeping up, a few of the best specials having sold at the rate of $50 to $75 per 100. All good tea roses are holding firm. Special orchids range from $1 to $2, the latter price having been paid for some of the hybrids. Violets took a high jump during the past week, wholesaling at $2 per 100 from November 12, and going to $3 on the 14th on account of the demand for the football game at New Haven. Carnations, too, have improved in price, the Mrs. Wards now selling at $4 and $5 per 100, though the carnation market cannot be called active. It is an unquestioned fact, that, considering the great fortunes that were amassed during the war, and that some lines of business are even now making "war time profits," the public is not buying flowers to the extent that one has reason to expect. Various reasons are being assigned for this, depending—to borrow from Sam Weller's famous remark—"on the taste and fancy" of the reasoner. A few days ago, a man was heard to state that "prohibition is doing it." As the United States supreme court will eventually pass an opinion on the justice or injustice of prohibition, we offer no argument as to its merits or demerits—except, that if men are saving money by not being able to get whiskey, they should spend some of it for flowers. The diamond merchants report that they are behind with their orders, so great is the demand. In the windows of the Fifth avenue stores, furs and other sorts of wearing apparel, tagged with enormous prices, are being displayed, and it is reasonable to suppose that they are being bought. But—the plain people, that Lincoln said, "God must have loved, because he made so many of them," are not buying diamonds or expensive furs. It is true, that in many lines of work, wages are much higher than formerly, but in others, such as call for people of education, taste and refinement, there has been little advance, while the cost of living has doubled, and these are the people who when they can afford it, are good customers of the florists. It seems like a vain repetition, but is worth remembering, that there must always be a limit to the prices charged for flowers, and no propaganda can put them beyond that limit without an injury to the trade. The people must be sheltered, clothed and fed, but in the final analysis, though they may love flowers, they know that they can—if necessity compels—do without them.

November 17.—Business is quite active and there are indications of a busy week. The horse show opens today; the Metropolitan opera season this evening, and the Prince of Wales will arrive tomorrow to be the guest of the city for the remainder of the week. It seems certain that all these events will have an improving effect on business.

NOTES.

The Brooklyn florists have distributed large numbers of cards as follows:

"Say it With Flowers."

"November 16-22 is flower week. You are invited to visit the up-to-date flower stores of the city as often as possible during the week. The proprietors and their employes will be glad to welcome you and your friends, and show the wonderful array of fall flowers.

"Yours for a more beautiful borough,

"The Florists of Brooklyn."

The firm name of Riedel & Meyer, Inc., wholesalers, 49 West 28th street, has been superseded by that of Riedel & Williams. Since the death of Mr. Meyer some months ago, the business has been carried on by Henry C. Riedel. He has now taken as a partner, Fred C. Williams, a brother to Mrs. Riedel, who has taken a financial interest in the business.

The Traveling Wholesale Florist, 133 West 28th street, is attracting attention with sample Christmas wreaths, which he is exhibiting in variety. They are made up of pine cones on evergreen foliage, and decorated with the red winter berries, which are unusually large.

James B. Deal, formerly in the retail business in this city, who spent a year in the United States army in France, and was wounded by a machine-gun bullet, is now with the Cadieux Company, retail florists, 1007 Madison avenue.

T. Doganges, the retailer of 695 Columbus avenue, has acquired the lease of the store at 685 Columbus avenue, which has been conducted as a flower shop. He has thus eliminated competition from the block.

Business is active at the Dards store, Madison avenue and 44th street. In addition to a fine stock of large chrysanthemums, many attractive features in the pompons and singles have been noticed.

The Cornwall Florist has one of the attractive stores of Broadway, at 91st street. It is always well stocked with a good quality of plants and cut flowers.

George Sullivan, well and favorably known as a salesman in the wholesale district, is now with the United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street.

Malandre Brothers, Broadway and 72nd street, arranged an elaborate window decoration with Red Cross features in honor of Red Cross week.

The Madison Floral Company, Madison avenue and 33rd street, has been making a fine window display of massed chrysanthemums.

Joseph Levy, of the Brooklyn Cut Flower Co., who has been ill for several months, is said to be in a serious condition.

R. Hale, manager for T. F. Galvin, Inc., has recently been busy arranging wedding decorations.

John Young & Co. are receiving fine stock of the chrysanthemum, Pink Chieftain.

Hentz & Nash, Inc., are handling a considerable supply of the pink bouvardia.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, November 19, was $60.

VISITED NEW YORK: Ralph B. Howe, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago.

THERE is a glut of delayed stocks of Dutch bulbs in several cities, especially bedding varieties.

DUTCH and probably German inspectors have issued certificates on lily of the valley, and this crop is moving forward.

IMPORTERS who have French bills to meet were able to purchase francs, November 18, at the low rate of 9.60 for one dollar.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district remain about the same as last week, $2.75 for reds and yellows, and $3.25 for whites, for spot shipment.

GILROY, CALIF.—L. W. Wheeler and wife, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., will spend Thanksgiving in Los Angeles, and expect to go east soon after the first of the year.

THE fall meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association will be held at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Mo., November 29, when a number of important questions will be discussed.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—O. H. Drew, formerly of Hibernia, N. Y., is at Baldwin Lake, having secured patent on a considerable tract of land there. He will be here for Thanksgiving, but will return to the lake for the winter's trapping.

SPEAKING of the foreign demand for California grown onion seed, a large contracting house in England writes this month offering 17,000 pounds in 15 different kinds of California grown onion seed of 1919 crop, at prices from five to 10 cents per pound above contract cost.

VISITED CHICAGO: F. G. Cuthbertson, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif.; C. C. Massie, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; H. A. Johns, of the Sioux City Seed Co., Sioux City, Ia.; Carl Chesmore, of Chesmore Seed Co., St. Joseph, Mo.; N. B. Keeney, Leroy, N. Y.; Joseph L. Schilder, of Schilder Bros., Chillicothe, O.; H. M. Wilson, of Washburn & Wilson Produce Co., Moscow, Ida.; Howard Webster, of Mel. L. Webster Co., Independence, Ia.

THE Wisconsin Pea Packers' Association held its annual meeting at Milwaukee last week, the following officers being elected for the ensuing year: W. I. Berg, Oshkosh, president; F. W. Traxler, Plymouth, vice-president; H. W. Wollum, Owen, treasurer; J. A. Hagemann, Fort Atkinson, secretary. Seedsmen represented at the meeting included the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.; the Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis.; S. F. Leonard Seed Co., Chicago; N. B. Keeney & Son, Leroy, N. Y.; Rogers Bros., Alpena, Mich.

CALIFORNIA seed growers are badly in need of rain, the ground being so hard as to be almost unworkable.

Wholesale Seedsmen's League.

The annual meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League was held at the Detroit Athletic Club, Detroit, Mich., November 19, among those in attendance being representatives of F. W. Bolgiano & Co., Washington, D. C.; the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation, Boston, Mass.; W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.; Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.; Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield, Conn.; the J. M. McCullough Sons Co., Cincinnati, O.; D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.; Alex. Forbes & Co., Newark, N. J.; David Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa.; S. F. Leonard Seed Co., Chicago; the Chas. H. Lilly Co., Seattle, Wash.; C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif.; Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis.; Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia.; J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York; Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York; Weeber & Don, New York; Mel L. Webster & Co., Independence, Ia.; Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.; T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va.

Chicago Seed Trade.

S. F. Leonard, of the S. F. Leonard Seed Co., and a large corps of assistants, attended the Wisconsin Pea Packers' Association meeting at Milwaukee, last week.

Leonard H. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, is at Detroit, Mich., this week, attending the seed trade meetings.

The Albert Dickinson Co.'s plant was raided by automobile bandits, November 17, and a sack of mail taken.

R. B. Howe, of the W. W. Barnard Co., is in the holly district.

Seed Trade Advertising Campaign.

A. J. Brown, of Grand Rapids, Mich., has some ideas regarding a publicity campaign to boost backyard gardens again next spring. He believes an advertising campaign now, supported by contributions from all growers and dealers, especially by California growers, based on a percentage of the sales of all concerns, should help to sell the entire 1919 crop of garden seed and avoid carrying over surpluses as last year. He suggests that packet prices among mail order houses should be so fixed as to secure a price which will cover the increased overhead charges, both for packeting and handling, and give a liberal size packet for the increased price, say 10 cents, and omit all five-cent packets.

Tariff Hearings Suspended.

Washington.—No more hearings on revenue and tariff legislation will be held during the present year. A comprehensive survey will first be made of the situation. There is a possibility that the question of a tariff on beans will be taken up shortly. Complaints have been received from a number of states that Japanese beans are being shipped into the United States and disposed of at prices ruinous to the American producer. Bean growers of this country are already somewhat disgruntled at purchases by the war department of Japanese beans, and collapse of the castor bean project sponsored by the government, and they are making a strong plea for protection.

Market Gardeners

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Loui ville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Shipments of local grown lettuce to the Rocky Mountain states have proved so successful that during the 1919 season two Japanese co-operative associations, an Italian gardeners' association and two commission houses here have sent more than 250 carloads to eastern markets, growers being paid $2.50-$3 per crate of 36 dozen heads f. o. b. this city. Fertilizers on peat land have made a two-crop season possible with a production of 700 to 800 crates per acre.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $3.00 to $4.00; celery, Michigan, square box, $1.15 to $1.60; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 37½ cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 80 cents; tomatoes, per lug, $2.00 to $2.50.

New York, Nov. 17.—Celery, per doz. roots, 10 to 50 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $3.00 to $4.00; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.00 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 12 to 25 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $3.00.

Tomatoes in the Bahamas.

The tomato crop for 1919 promises to be the largest ever grown in the Bahamas, according to Consul Karl de G. MacVitty in Commerce Reports. Approximately 2,000 acres have been planted—1,500 on the island of Eleuthera and 500 on New Providence—which is a considerable increase in acreage over that of any previous year. Shippers estimate that they will be able to export 400,000 crates of tomatoes to the United States during the winter season, which will prove a decided increase over the exports of 1917 and 1918, which were 73,605 and 35,500 crates, respectively.

The tomato industry is still in its infancy in the Bahamas, and its development has been handicapped by the lack of shipping facilities. If a frequent and regular shipping service between Nassau and New York can be obtained, it is believed that this industry will so increase that tomatoes will form one of the leading exports of the Bahamas.

Sweet Potato Diseases and Control.

"Sweet Potato Diseases," a 26-page Farmers' Bulletin—No. 1059—just issued by the bureau of plant industry of the United States department of agriculture, and now available for distribution, explains in non-technical language the character of various field diseases and storage rots which do much to menace the profitableness of sweet-potato crops of this country. Accompanying each description of a disease are suggestions as to how the disease may be controlled or prevented. The comments on the manner in which the various diseases are spread and the best methods of prevention are also of timely value. Supplementing the text are a number of illustrations which should be of assistance to the grower in identifying various field diseases and storage troubles. Stem rot, black rot, foot rot, Texas root rot, scurf, leaf blight, and white rust are among the field diseases treated, while the list of storage rots discussed includes soft rot, ring rot, Java black rot, and charcoal rot.

The new bulletin is a revision of Farmers' Bulletin No. 714. It can be had by addressing the United States Dept. of Agriculture, Washington.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for the period November 11-18, show last week's conditions still in force with markets strong. Potatoes were slightly higher with haulings light in most shipping sections on account of conditions of weather or roads. And there was some disposition to hold for higher prices and also more or less complaint of car shortage. The demand was fair to good with gains in consuming markets of 5-20 cents and similar advances in most shipping sections. No 1 sacked northern round whites gained 5-20 cents in shipping sections, closing $2.65-2.75 per 100 pounds f. o. b., while carlot and jobbing sales in middlewestern markets ranged $2.75-3.15. Minnesota Red River Ohios gained 5 cents to $2.80 and were firm in terminal markets at $3-3.50. Colorado and Idaho sacked white stock strengthened in producing sections to a range of $2.25-2.65 cash to growers, while consuming markets quoted white and russet stock at $3.00-3.50. New York round whites gained 15 cents at shipping points, closing $2.70-2.82 sacked, and bulk stock was nearly steady in most consuming markets at $2.50-2.70. Maine Green Mountains sacked, gained 15 cents in jobbing markets, closing $2.75-2.80 in New York and Boston, and advanced 5-10 cents in producing sections closing $2.42 f. o. b.

Choice eastern yellow onion stock was in good demand in producing sections, advancing 50 cents in western New York to a close of $4.50-5 per 100 pounds f. o. b. sacked, while eastern and middlewestern yellow stock followed a wide but firm range of $4.00-5.00 in consuming markets. Middlewestern red onions ruled $5.00 in south central markets and $4.75 f. o. b. shipping points, with fair demand.

Leading middlewestern cabbage markets advanced fully $5 with closing range $35-40 per ton bulk for Wisconsin Holland seed stock. New York Danish seed strengthened slightly in jobbing markets to $30-40, while Cincinnati reached $45-50. Best stock gained $7 in producing sections, closing $37-40 f. o. b. while poorer grades ranged $33-35. New York domestic advanced $3 in producing sections, reached $20-25 with similar gains in consuming markets to a general jobbing range of $22-30.

Wilmington, Del.

E. F. Lewis. Newport pike, has quite a range of glass. Carnations and chrysanthemums are a specialty, the latter followed by sweet peas and spring stock. He finds late struck cuttings of the Seidewitz chrysanthemum kept clear of disease. A. H. Lewis, almost adjoining, has quite a group of houses. Some years ago, getting tired of consigning his stock, he put in a telephone, and has worked up a retail trade that comes in entirely over the phone, so that frequently he has to buy to fill his orders. Lewis Bros. have another adjoining place. All four of these florists are of the same family. Their houses are planted mostly to carnations, asparagus and sweet peas, all of which looked well.

In this city of over 100,000, where live the powder magnates of the world, who in the past few years have added many millions to the wealth of the city, there are several progressive flower shops and a number of successful growers. George Carson Boyd, 216 Tenth street, has an up-to-date shop with greenhouse in the rear. The interior of the store is well arranged with its large cut flower case and other fixtures. There is a good stock of baskets and other accessories, and an air of readiness that helped to account for his large patronage.

The Central Flower Shop, 509 Market street, which George Condack has opened this fall, is right in the thick of things. Mr. Condack started in several years ago, selling on the street, then moved to a hallway, and now has a fine large store with two show windows, which are kept well decorated. He believes his store is worth every cent of its $250 a month rent, and that he will make good. He is a graduate of the Philadelphia "school of hard knocks," and has energy plus that will stand him in good stead.

M. F. Hayden, at Tatnall and Ninth streets, has a very pretty corner store with an abundance of light through its front and side show windows, which are kept attractively decorated with plants and cut flowers. Miss Hayden is the manager, Mr. Hayden's time being taken up at his greenhouses in the suburbs. Business had been very good all fall.

A. B. Cartledge, 220 West Ninth street, has an inviting store, with well dressed windows. Baskets, covered with decorated mats, were a feature. These, when suitably filled, can be used for all kinds of occasions. F. C. Thornett, the manager, said they had found the F. T. D. business very desirable.

Sines & Welch, 212 West Eighth street, specialize in funeral flowers, which together with other work, keeps them fairly busy all the time. They find a good demand for a line of waxed flower designs.

There are two street markets, which several of the growers find a good outlet for their plants and flowers, except in freezing weather.

New Roses For 1920

Frank W. Dunlop

(Dunlop) THE IMPROVED RUSSELL

Dunlop, is a seedling of Russell with Mrs. Shawyer as the pollen parent and combines all the good points of Russell with the quick, free growth of Shawyer, so noticeable in Columbia, the other Shawyer off-spring.

Madame Butterfly

(Hill) THE GLORIFIED OPHELIA

Butterfly, is a glorified sport of the popular Ophelia, and originated with the E. G. Hill Co. It is even freer in growth than its parent and the flower is a glorious combination of pink, apricot and gold.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisvill , Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

DAKE'S CORNERS, N. Y.—Reuben A. Dake, retired orchardist, died at his home here, November 6, age 75 years.

THE Illinois State Horticultural Society meets at Bloomington, December 16-18. A fine apple show is looked for.

YAKIMA, WASH.—Lee M. Hutchins has been appointed plant pathologist by the state department of agriculture and will make his headquarters in this city.—H. M.

MANISTEE, MICH.—Orders placed with nursery firms by farmers in this section indicate that the fruit growing industry of this county will be gven great impetus in the spring.

TOPPENISH, WASH. — Superintendent L. M. Holt of the Wapato Indian reservation here, in his annual report, estimates the value of nursery stock grown there this year will total $376,000.

FRESNO, CALIF.—The Kirkman Nurseries have purchased a large tract in the irrigated district of Madera county and will establish a branch there. An extensive fig orchard will also be planted by this concern.

OLYMPIA, WASH.—M. L. Dean of the state division of horticulture, has issued a warning to fruit growers to exercise extreme care in nursery stock purchased to keep the state free from peach yellow and little peach diseases. —H. M.

THE United States department of agriculture has issued Farmers' Bulletin 1056 which describes the more important fungous and insect enemies of the pear in the humid sections of the Pacific northwest. The present losses to the crop are largely due to pear scab and insect pests and growers can greatly increase yields by careful spraying at the right time and with proper materials.

THE United States reclamation service is advertising the sale at auction of over 6,000 acres of what is claimed to be frostless citrus land at Yuma, Arizona, beginning December 10 at 10 a. m. and continuing daily until the tracts which range from five to 20 acres each have been offered for sale. Ten per cent of an accepted bid must be paid on the day of sale, 15 per cent within 60 days, and 25 per cent for each of the three following years.

Forest Replanting From Air.

Representative Randall, of California, has urged the forestry service to start a reforestation programme for the fire-denuded areas in the Sierre Madre range by using aeroplanes to scatter millions of tree seeds over the mountains as soon as the rainy season begins. Civic organizations in Pacific coast cities have also been asked to organize forestry associations to press action by the government.

S. S. SKIDELSKY & CO., 50 Park Place, New York City

Scranton, Pa.

Geo. R. Clark, 124 Washington avenue, also carries seeds and bulbs. A large greenhouse in the rear is a great asset, particularly at holiday seasons. "Wear a flower, and make Scranton grow," is a slogan and custom with the merchants of this city, many of whom are button makers, as one fourth the buttons used in the United States are made here. Wearing a flower fills the empty button hole, puts a "never a care" smile on your face, and stamps you hereabouts as a resident and booster for Scranton. Mr. Clark said this custom had given the business quite an impetus, as it brought many into the store, who would not otherwise have come.

This city, with its 130,000 population, and some 30,000 more suburbanites, who depend on this center for their supplies, contains several live and up-to-date flower shops, together with a number of growers on whom they depend for much of their stock. Muir's old established flower shop, 430 Spruce street, is right in the center of the shopping district, where they are kept busy with transient trade, and have also a good demand for funeral flowers. Mrs. Muir and her son are active in the business, and have a large personal following.

B. E. & J. T. Cokely, 46 North Seventh avenue, conduct the Scranton Florists' Supply Co. This is an enterprizing firm catering to business all over the country. They make a specialty of florists' wire designs, paper block and script letters, and also are manufacturers of the Baur patent carnation clips.

Miss A. Besancan's corner shop is most modern and up-to-date in all its furnishings. Large show windows, tastefully arranged, and the well stocked interior, shows enterprise that is fully justified in the many orders seen going out.

Schultheis, the Florist, has a busy shop with nicely arranged windows. The interior is well filled with plants, and stocked with baskets, vases and other accessories. An F. T. D. emblem was well displayed.

Kennedy and O'Hara, two lady florists, who have recently opened a shop at 1372 Washington avenue, are much encouraged. They are in a residence district, and expect to build up a good neighborhood trade.

The New York Floral Co., 401 Spruce street, has a very attractive window and well furnished store. With a good stock of flowers, they are ready for all customers.

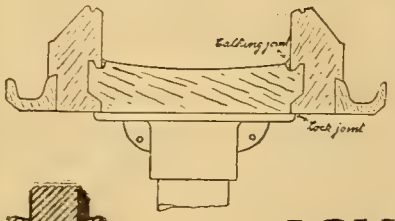
A PERFECT GUTTER

"LEAK-PROOF" (Patent Pending)



When planning the details of your new houses, the question what kind of gutters to use will be of vital importance. Shall it be a metal gutter (you know they will sweat and drip in cold weather, be burning hot in summer, will rust and cost an enormous price, especially this year)? Or use the old wood gutter, with its probability of leaks which before annoyed you so much? Let us submit you our estimate with our "LEAK-PROOF" gutter, made of the best grade of Louisiana Red Cypress. This style gutter eliminates the objectionable features of other gutters and will give you PERFECT SATISFACTION. Has been proved and stood the test.

TRADE MARK

PULVERIZED SHEEP – PULVERIZED CATTLE

MANURE

PROTECTS YOUR CROP

It is direct heat dried and sterilized, weed seeds, grass seeds, fungus and disease germs destroyed in a direct heat rotary drying process that does not change or destroy any of the valuable elements in crude manure.

Air dried manures cannot be sterilized and usually carry excess moisture that actually makes them cost more per ton than WIZARD BRAND even at the same or a lower price.

Look for the WIZARD BRAND Trade Mark tagged or printed on every bag. If it is not there you are not getting WIZARD BRAND protection for your crop and pocket book.

Your dealer can get WIZARD BRAND for you if you insist or we will quote with freight rate on any quantity from a bag to a carload promptly.

THE SEASON'S PROSPECTS.

Paper by Arthur Niessen, Philadelphia, Pa., Read at the November Meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Association.

Measure of Prosperity Depends on Effort.

First, there is no doubt in my mind but that the season will be a very satisfactory one. Your share of whatever prosperity is in store, however, will be in proportion to the effort that you have put forth to produce it. The laws of compensation are not likely to permit you to share to a larger extent. I fear that I am indulging in a pastime, that seems to have become one of our national indoor sports—too much talking. Is it not true that we already have an over abundance of talk, and not sufficient action? Is it not evident everywhere that there is a lack of personal initiative?

Some people look to the government to cure all social unrest and business disturbances. The experiment, in most cases, has been a sad failure. We welcome any legislation of a constructive nature, but we should resent sending politicians to Washington to manage our national affairs, instead of business men, who are better qualified to understand the needs of the country.

We hear much about the profiteer, and everybody denounces this selfish monster, and while everybody condemns the profiteer, nearly all continue profiteering. Everyone is doing his share; the manufacturer, the jobber, the retailer and labor is not missing an opportunity to grasp a share of the spoils. From every side, we hear profiteering must stop, but where shall we begin, and who will make the beginning No one is willing to sacrifice even a trifle, lest his neighbor should profit ever so little by the good one might do for the benefit of the general cause.

Thrift and increased production are to overcome the high cost of living. That is what we are told, not only by the statisticians, college professors and the self-styled public adviser, but by the government itself, and while Uncle Sam is preaching thrift to his people, they are working overtime at Washington to find ways and means to collect more taxes, and spending the money in an almost reckless fashion. Every taxpayer is trying his utmost to make the other fellow help pay his assessment. The high tax rate has increased our cost of living as much as anywhere else. Who will be the first one to practice thrift? Who is willing to curtail or decrease production, and work a few hours a day, instead of six and eight? In many plants we find a condition where most of the people can see danger ahead, but no one is willing to take the initiative to clear the road.

Co-Operation Big Factor.

A similar condition today, confronts us in our business pursuits. Through the trade organizations, such as the Society of American Florists, the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, and many local clubs, we have aimed to create a more favorable understanding among members of the trade and the different branches of our business. It has been their endeavor to procure close co-operation, and undoubtedly much good has been accomplished. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery has probably accomplished more in that direction than any other organization, for the reason that the benefits derived, are traceable to actual visible results. When an F. T. D. florist receives a telegram in the morning for a $25 order there is no question in his mind that the F. T. D. is a good institution. The actual facts are in evidence.

There has been a great deal of discussion about the uplift of our business; how to increase sales, improve working conditions and a hundred other subjects. Who is going to right all the wrongs? Who is the big leader among us that will be our standard bearer and show us the way? Is there such a man in our profession? I say yes, thousands of them, if only each and every one of our craft will see his duty to himself, to his neighbor, and to his business. Everybody should set his own house in order, and the rest would be comparatively easy. The great trouble is, we complain because nothing is being done. What are you doing to help build up your own and your neighbor's business? What are you doing to elevate our profession; to make it more attractive for the young men and women that will carry on our business in the future? What are you doing to make our business bigger and more profitable? You have the opportunity every day, and every minute of the day. Doing your duty—that is the solution.

Co-operation means nothing unless you personally are co-operating. An advertising campaign misses its mark completely, unless you are part and parcel of the campaign. Unless the public can see a reflection of the national advertising campaign in your store, you are losing the benefits of the advertising. The S. A. F. national publicity campaign can do nothing for you, unless you are willing to do something yourself. Sometimes, we hear an argument, that only the big retail stores are being benefited by national publicity. Admitting that they are being benefited, it is only to the extent that they are taking advantage of the opportunity that exists for all alike. Every florist, or group of florists, should do some local advertising, and if the local effort is linked together with the national publicity, there is bound to be satisfactory results. Every florist in the country should be a subscriber to the national publicity campaign, but that is not sufficient. You must work along with the publicity campaign. Any collective movement only gives you an opportunity to participate in its benefits, but unless you take advantage of that opportunity, you can not expect to accomplish anything. All this argument points to one essential feature. You must do your part. You must do your duty. You must grasp every opportunity to improve our business.

The retailer that keeps a careless shop that does not deliver the goods in quality or value, one that lacks courtesy, one that is not aggressive, is not an asset to our business. The grower that produces an inferior quality of flowers, that places them on the market in a careless manner, may the flowers be good or bad, is a detriment to our business. Poor flowers interfere with the sale of the good ones. If you do not pay close attention to the small details of growing, watering, ventilating and a hundred other details that enters in the growing of flowers, and for that reason produce stock that lacks in size, form or keeping qualities, you are doing an injury to our business.

If you want the business to grow and expand, you should render 100 per cent efficiency in your establishment, and the rest is simple. You are the one to be benefited, and you are the one that must make the effort. No movement of any nature, may it be through the S. A. F., or local organizations, will produce good results, unless you personally do your share. Before you criticize or condemn, always ask yourself the question—Have I done my part? Not until you can answer that question in the affirmative, will you derive the full benefits of any national or local movement.

Look over the list of the subscribers to the national publicity fund, and you will find nearly all the progressive florists in the country. Unfortunately, some of them do not subscribe to the extent that they should. The S. A. F. should, for next year, ask every subscriber to double his subscription, and I believe over 90 per cent of them will do it gladly. Some men condemn national advertising, and the very first purchase they make, is a nationally advertised article, which they never would have known had it not been for advertising.

We often hear the remark, that "we must educate the public to the use of flowers," but first of all let us educate ourselves to the point that we thoroughly understand our own business. Some years ago, I expressed a thought that the S. A. F. should start a campaign of education among the retail florists, have three-day sessions at some central point, and bring all the trade from the neighboring cities together, and have an educational session. Show them by actual demonstration, how to link the national publicity campaign with their own business; teach them anything new in the business, the correct margin of profit, the value of local advertising, or any problem that might be brought up for discussion. A great deal of good could be accomplished. The distribution, or rather the selling of flowers at retail, is the all important feature of our business that needs development. The production will take care of itself. I will leave it to the progressiveness of the grower to keep up with any effort made by the retailer.

In my talk, I have wandered somewhat from the main point that I wish to emphasize most strongly, and that is, that no one can help you, unless you are willing to help yourself. Our business is in a very healthy condition. The past season was undoubtedly one of the best we ever had, and the coming season looks promising to me. If we could only arouse every one of our craft to fully realize the wonderful opportunities that exists today, greater opportunities than we have ever had in the past, and let every man do his share 100 per cent, our business would grow in leaps and bounds.

Doing your duty—that is the final answer.

Bouquet Green Dyeing.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

We have a quantity of lycopodium or bouquet green held over from last year which has faded and wish to know if there is any way to prepare or dye it a good natural green? Please give the necessary directions.

Wisconsin. R.

It is possible that the lycopodium may be made use of without a total loss, by first soaking the plant thoroughly. It should then be dyed with an aniline green suitable for dyeing cotton goods, that is, of approximately the color of natural vegetation, and if it does not fall to pieces too rapidly with this process, it may be kept in a pliable state indefinitely by soaking for two or three hours in about a 10 per cent solution of glycerine and water. The strings of lycopodium may then be hung up to dry and will retain their fresh condition for a long time.

P. L. R.

DAYTON, O.—In the matter of Wm. Kiefaber, plaintiff, against the Miami Floral Co., a hearing will be held in Room 1 in the new court house, December 1 at 10 o'clock a. m., a court order having been issued that all claims against the firm or Robert G. Corwin, receiver, must be presented before that date or be forever barred.

SMALL VASE BASKET OF ODDS AND ENDS OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Holiday Preparations.

All eyes are now focused on Christmas, which busy period promises as much or more business than any that has gone before. Preparedness is the watchword of the successful man; he plans and plans and plans, first to secure an ample stock, and then with his perfected methods to sell it to the best advantage.

The modern, up-to-date retailer will by this time have his plant stock engaged, and all the supplies and selection of novelties in baskets, vases, fancy pottery and ferneries, on the shelves, or at least in stock on the premises. He finds it just as easy to order early, as it does not cost a penny more, but in most cases, means a great saving. Novelties that have merit, are soon sold out and then, for late orders, it is a race with time, resulting quite frequently in hastily made articles, that meet with transportation delays, which mean last minute delivery. "A penny saved is a penny earned," and the money gained by early purchasing in every line of the florist business, makes a great addition to the profit side of the ledger.

The detailed record of last year's holiday business is an excellent guide to the planning for this year's busy period. There, should be found lists of all stocks bought for the various departments, and whether they were more or less sufficient to meet the demand. It is well to go over the purchases made so far, and check them up with last year's account. Then, if not complete, there may yet be time to order the various articles required.

Foliage plants, palms, dracænas, pandanus, aspidistras, rubbers and then ferns in quantity, are the staple decorative house plants. Poinsettias, in pots and pans, cyclamens, begonias, heather, primulas, azaleas, etc., make up the list of the blooming stock, while oranges, ardisias, Jerusalem cherries and peppers, the latter three of which carry the Christmas color in their red berries or fruit, are seen in every well selected stock.

All kinds of Christmas greens are profitable to handle, and orders for the loose holly, holly wreaths and crosses, mistletoe, ground pine and laurel wreathing, should be in the hands of the woodsmen as soon after the first of November as possible. The cost of this material, made up and packed to your order, is but little if any more expensive, than that picked up at the wharves or markets at the last moment. This stock should be carefully ordered in quantities that are reasonably sure of sale, as all that is on hand after January 1, is generally dead stock.

Miniature Norway spruces in pots and tubs, are good stock. They are largely used as table ornaments. Have your nurseryman get a lot ready and store them before a severe frost dulls the color. Small knots of red immortelles or red cape flowers, wired on the ends of the branches of these small trees, give them a decorative touch that is worth much more than it costs.

Fancy wreaths made of clippings of the nursery evergreens, such as the various retinosporas, arborvitae, junipers, etc., decorated with holly berries, cones, plain or whitened, gilt or silvered ruscus in its various shades, are as choice as anything in this line. These can be made up from Thanksgiving on; if kept in a cool place out of drafts, they will remain in perfect condition for a month or more. Such wreaths are suitable for house and window decoration, or can be placed on the graves in the cemetery.

FLOWER BOWL WITH SINGLE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The magnolia or oak foliage wreaths, with their various decorations, should be for the most part, finished by this time. If not, they cannot be made ready too soon, as to have to crowd this work into the rush period of the last week, puts a strain on the store force, that by earlier planning, could all have been avoided.

Such necessary stock articles as pot covers, to be sold with plants, wicker plant boxes on stands, fern dishes, jardenieres and pedestals, cut flower vases and other forms of holders, are all looked for in the flower shop, and should be ready to display as gifts.

Everything in the stationery line should be on hand, full and plenty, as this is the busiest period of the year for job printers. Tags and tag envelopes, customers' cards and envelopes, order sheets, bill heads, etc., or anything on this list that is short should be ordered at once. Cut flower boxes are as necessary as the flowers themselves. Certain sizes will get low, and the box manufacturer should have all the time possible. There are often transportation delays, as they frequently have to come from out of town. Order anything required in this line at once. Also, see that there are sufficient shipping boxes.

Wax and wrapping paper, tape and twine are requisites, as are bundles of clean newspapers, which may be necessary in case of extremely cold weather.

The Christmas circulars, or invitations to customers, can be made a great aid to publicity. They should be ready for mailing not later than December 10. With the store looking its best, and crowded to capacity with its line of floral gifts, this invitation should be mailed to a large list of extra names of people who are likely to need plants and flowers, and on whom the well-stocked store will likely make a good impression.

Plan for an elaborate outside store front decoration. From a publicity standpoint, the money and time spent for this work will bring greater returns than for any other form of advertising. The decorative features of the business give the florist an advantage over all other lines, so that his shop should always be at once the most conspicuous in the block.

If there are still window boxes on the store list that have not as yet been filled with their winter evergreens, customers should be urged to have the work done at once, so as to avoid having to answer the call for them at the last minute to be in place before Christmas eve.

Look up the car or wagon heaters, and the stock of coal for the same.

These are some of the necessary details that are of prime inportance. They will be of little interest to the planner, but may help the plodder. The Christmas, and in fact, every important holiday, is a harvest time to the store that uses efficient, up-to-date methods, first in preparedness, by early buying, which keeps costs to the lowest minimum, while at the same time every opportunity is taken advantage of to exploit and place the stock before the greatest number of possible customers.

Foreign F. T. D. Membership.

It is perhaps opportune at this time to elucidate on the feasibility of spreading F. T. D. propaganda in foreign countries on membership in our association. It is of inestimable value to the association, that the foreign field should be given more attention and our membership largely increased. At present we have representatives in England, Scotland, Wales and Cuba. Within the past month, we have added Cairo, Egypt, and Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic. Why are we not represented in France, Italy, Switzerland, Japan, Norway and many other countries where Americans are sure to travel within a short time? It is obvious that it is necessary for every F. T. D. member who places an order abroad, to strongly urge the dire necessity of foreign representatives, so that we may place orders with the confidence and assurance that they will be properly executed.

The F. T. D. office is frequently called on to furnish information relative to the placing of orders in other countries. Recently, we have had such inquiries for France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Norway and China. We have furnished the information desired in each case, but how much better it would be if we had a member in each country, who could be relied on to take care of our needs in their respective countries? The time has come when the F. T. D. gospel should reach every corner of the globe, and the members should bear in mind, that no opportunity should be lost, and that everyone should grasp at the chance to encourage foreign membership.

The secretary's office has not been negligent in this important mission, as we are constantly on the alert, and at every opportunity, take advantage of any lead that will assist us in this work. It is, therefore, obligatory upon every member of the association to furnish this office with any information that will help us in this great work of building up our foreign membership. Last April, the secretary drafted a circular letter, asking and urging florists in foreign countries to become members of our association; if they did not desire membership, to at least become correspondents, so that we might place orders with them in the confidence that they would be properly executed. At that time, we mailed about 500 letters to all parts of the world, with the exception of Russia, Austria, Hungary and Germany, owing to the unsettled conditions in those countries. Just as soon as conditions will warrant, we will complete our programme of F. T. D. propaganda, and we hope to have a better response to our efforts than we have had in the past. The answer to our appeal of last April has not been up to expectations. However, we gained two new members, and received several letters, the writers saying that they would act as correspondents, which we have already found to be of material assistance to our members. We hope to make a second appeal sometime in the near future, and we shall make every effort to present our claims in their own language, which we did not do in our initial attempt, and we are hopeful that results will prove more satisfactory.

I cannot understand why France, Italy, Switzerland, Spain, Australia and the Hawaiian Islands do not realize the importance of membership in the F. T. D. A., or at least, giving us the privilege of showing them their lost opportunity. Their absolute indifference, by not being courteous enough to make a reply to our correspondence, is beyond my comprehension. However, it is quite possible they do not understand our intentions, and take it for granted that it is another American trick to fleece them in some way. Some line of educational propaganda will be necessary to enlighten them on the necessity of international co-operation. The secretary is fully awake on the subject, and will lose no opportunity to spread the gospel of F. T. D.

ALBERT POCHELON,
Secretary F. T. D. A.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

This is the season or period when the retailer needs to be wide awake, with his mind on the business all the time, attending not only to the urgent demands of the present month, which is the third best of the year, but he must at the same time look ahead and plan for the busier holiday period which is but a little more than a month away. The business should be so systematized that, no matter how large the volume, or the frequency of extra busy days, these should not interfere with the attractive and effective arrangement of the store and windows, which must always, because of their selling power, be kept to the highest point in efficiency. One would not think of going on an important mission without first making themselves as presentable as possible, being dressed in their best, with all details of their personal appearance perfected, so as to make a good impression. It is all the more necessary to keep the shop up to its best all the time; not only for those attracted before, and who have found it a reliable place to deal, but so as to appeal to strangers, people who pass hurriedly along with other things on their mind, and to flower lovers who, in answer to advertising or circulars, are prompted to call and see if there is anything different in this, to them, new store.

An endeavor in one way or another should be made to get the names and addresses of all strangers, who are recognized as making their first visit. If possible, a sale is made of an article to be sent home or to another address, accompanied with a card. Visitors should always receive polite attention, but never urged to buy. A piece of the store literature, small booklet or circular, can be handed them, and before they go their address asked for, so that they may be sent various store notices. In most cases, it will be given.

Those who have not as yet ordered their Christmas plant stock, will find the cream of it already bought up. It costs no more to place orders well in advance, but it does secure first selections, or at least, a portion of something choice that is nearly always in limited quantities. Heather, cyclamens, oranges, ardisias, and frequently poinsettias, are sold out long before the demand is satisfied.

Standard holiday stocks from the supply houses, such as plant baskets and pot covers should be on hand not later than December 1. Give them time. Yours is not the only order. Then there are transportation and other delays.

The most economical way to do business, is to plan well ahead. Order so as to get quantity discounts, with cheapest transportation. Secure all rebates that come from cash or prompt payments. Telegraphing at the last, getting rush goods with the paint hardly dry, or late from delays on account of excess express business, eats great holes in the profits.

The market is full of pompon chrysanthemums. These can be run off in the small vase baskets, a number of which should be on hand filled at this season. Arrange the colors of the baskets and flowers so as to get the best effects. A little bow of ribbon on the handle is always worth more to the appearance than it costs.

A few filled plant baskets of foliage and a little flowering stock, are always attractive and make good store or window ornaments, while quite frequently they are just what is wanted.

Fruited plants, such as peppers and solanums, are seen in good color, and if featured, are attractive and salable. Chrysanthemum plants, now in full flower, are very showy; half a dozen will stand around until they get passe, while a stock of 50, well displayed, can soon be disposed of. People are attracted by the quantity, while the few sample plants go unnoticed.

Winter window boxes should be pushed at every opportunity. There are quantities of choice evergreens in the nursery rows, grown especially for this purpose. The boxes over the store should be at their best, while tubbed evergreens in variety make a good showy street front. Garden vases can be kept out all winter if filled with one or more choice specimens. A greatly increased business in this line is possible if it is pushed by the trade. Orders taken from store samples, in tubs or boxes, will be gladly duplicated by the nurserymen, saving the storekeeper all the bother of filling.

One good turn deserves another. The publicity campaign is boosting your business, so give it a raise in return. Send a five or ten dollar encouragement. Do it today.

Matthews Optimistic.

Warren G. Matthews, the well-known florist of Dayton, O., recently made an extended tour of the east and writes as follows, November 17: "The writer has just returned from New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and found more enthusiasm among the florists than he expected. Everyone is looking forward to a great Easter business, notwithstanding the fact bulbs have doubled in price. Already the dealers say they have not enough for the call. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery branch of the business is growing by leaps and bounds. It is the cleanest and nicest part of the profession, and only in its infancy."

Rhode Island Hort. Society Show.

The exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society in connection with the Providence county farm bureau and the market gardeners' association, November 13-14, proved one of the most successful shows in the history of the organization. In the floricultural section some of the finest chrysanthemums exhibited in many years were staged, the Maplehurst Greenhouses at Longmeadow being winner in a number of classes and also captured high honors for carnations and snapdragons. John Macrea, florist, Providence, also won many prizes, especially for carnations. Fred S. Peck, (John Doig, Gr.), also carried off numerous ribbons for fine chrysanthemums and carnations, as did Fred Hoffman, of Pawtucket in the floral art classes. T. J. Johnston & Co. were also prize-winners in many classes. In foliage plants, Fred S. Davis, Providence, staged some attractive groups.

The vegetable section was a prominent feature of the show, the entries all being invitingly displayed. The principal exhibitors in these classes included E. L. Lewis, D. N. Potter, J. W. Peck Co., Fred S. Peck, Fannie C. Bowen, D. N. Potter, Inc., H. W. Tinkham, Wm. Manchester, S. Z. Manzigan, H. W. Thompson, C. O. Childs, Mrs. Albert Sparn and N. L. and D. S. Vaughn. Another interesting feature was the display of celery which included nearly every commercial variety of the present time by S. C. Damon of the Rhode Island State College experiment station.

There was also an excellent display of fruits made by L. C. K. Clarner, Frederick Jencks, Jesse Carpenter, W. Steele, N. L. Vaughn and C. J. Schonhardt. E. K. T.

HOUSTON, TEX.—The Houston Horticultural Society has distributed thousands of palms at a price of 75 cents each in its city beautiful movement.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—The Art Floral Co. of this city, has been incorporated by Paul M. McMillan and Wm. G. Albrecht with a capital stock of $10,000.

PLANT NOTES.

Primulas.

As fast as the primroses grow, space them out so that there is a good distance between each plant, and so that the leaves do not touch, allowing room between the plants for a free circulation of air. If the plants are placed on a bench with a front and back board, place boards across and set the plants on these or stand the pots on inverted pots so as to bring them up into the air. Take care in watering not to wet the foliage more than necessary, or the leaves will be spotted. Many good primulas are ruined by being overcrowded and the foliage allowed to remain damp. If the plants are not going to be in flower for the holidays they can be placed in a temperature of 60° at night for a short time, which will rapidly bring them along, but do not attempt a higher temperature than that, nor for any great length of time. These plants are cold-loving subjects and are more satisfactory in a house that never goes above 50° at night. Primula obconica is now blooming freely and can be kept in bloom until spring if grown cool. These plants are particularly useful in filling Christmas baskets. Care must be taken in the handling of these plants by persons who are at all subject to poisoning from coming in contact with this, rhus, or other poisonous plants, for they sometimes cause a very troublesome and irritating eruption of the skin.

Ardisias.

The berries of the ardisias should now be turning a bright red and the foliage taking on that beautiful glossy appearance which makes this plant so popular at the holidays. Where these plants are grown in great heat the berries do not color as brightly, and the leaves lack that thick, leathery texture and glossy appearance, and the plants are not so satisfactory in the houses. They also chill very easily, and if this happens the berries drop off. It is much better to finish them from this time on in a bright, sunny house, with good ventilation; this will tend to color up the fruit and give the plants a much healthier appearance, and they will prove more satisfactory. We have seen these plants, where grown cool and not forced, hold their berries until the next year's crop was borne. Keep a sharp lookout for scale on ardisias; they quickly get covered with the brown scale unless carefully watched, and when these insects appear constant washing is the great remedy. Clean off the first that appear. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Catch Crops.

With the close competition that the greenhouse man is up against at the present day it does not pay to have any of the bench room idle, or if a crop shows that it is not going to succeed and be remunerative it had better be thrown out and the room occupied by something that will pay. The several different plants and flowers have their seasons, and when they are done a succeeding crop should be all ready prepared to take the place. It therefore pays to have some catch crop ready in cases of this kind. There are many annuals that can be grown and carried along in small pots and if not used and eventually discarded the loss is small. These, if planted out in the benches, will bloom in the early spring and give a very welcome variety to the flowers of that season. There are many flowers grown today that were first grown as catch crops, such as the antirrhinum. Among others which might be grown this way are the centaureas, either bachelor's buttons or sweet sultans, nasturtiums, lupines, calendulas, eschscholtzias, salpiglossis, schizanthus, stocks and others. There are also many of the early blooming perennials which can be lifted and heeled in where they can be easily obtained during the winter and transplanted to the greenhouse. Among these are Coreopsis lanceolata, Aquilegia cœrulea, gaillardias, heuceras, sweet william, and others which the grower has in stock. A dealer will always find customers who appreciate these flowers, which are often not seen during the winter months, and by having the stock of a few of these odd things one can often plant out a section of a bench that otherwise would not be returning any revenue, and thereby prevent loss.

Stevia.

The early stevia will now be coming into flower, but if the plants are in pots, and there are a good large number, they should not be brought into flower all at once. By keeping some of the plants in a cool location they can be retarded so that plants may be had in bloom up to February. A house or deep frame where the night temperature can be kept just above the freezing point will hold them in check and they can be brought in as desired. The dwarf variety is very easily handled in this manner, but the tall plants are not so easily moved around. Keep the plants well tied up for the joints are very brittle and break down easily, and the long variety should be very carefully handled even after the sprays are cut, for they break down with their own weight when in flower.

Cold Storage Lilies.

Cold storage giganteums in small bunches, can be forced and handled most economically, planted in wooden flats or shallow boxes about 12x18 inches in depth. These hold 15 bulbs and when planted, they are placed along the edges of the walks, under the tables, are easily watered, do not upset or fall over into the passage, there is no breakage as is liable with pots, and they are more quickly moved about when necessary. Another advantage is that four stakes in the corners of the boxes, with a string around, ties up the whole lot. To get the best results at this season from cold storage lilies, the temperature must not get much below 65 degrees. They must be kept constantly on the go from the planting of the bulbs until the cutting of the flowers. Green fly is their greatest enemy, which is often found even when the plants appear clean, down in the heart of the shoots or stems as the buds are forming. If not immediately overcome by smoke or nicotine, the result is no buds, or only such as produce defective flowers. Many a crop has been lost by neglect of this important detail.

BEACON, N. Y.—The report of Benjamin Hammond, well known manufacturer of insecticides and greenhouse paint, as president of the board of education, shows a year of marked advancement despite unsettled conditions.

THE ROSE.

Early Winter Care.

Do not be in too great a rush with your rose cutting for the next four weeks, or until "The Queen of Autumn" begins to slow down. There is not much use in trying to clean up big shipments of roses during the chrysanthemum season at good prices, so one had better cut only a few of the best blooms, and pinch off the buds of the shorter growths for mid-winter cutting, or until the demand for roses is heavy. By the time this article reaches the press, about all of the pinching for the Christmas cut will have been finished, and the important thing now is to keep all the side growths rubbed off the flower stems as they appear, and do not let them get too much of a start, but take them as soon as they get long enough to rub out with the fingers.

One should take sufficient time to make the first going over a thorough one; then you will find quite a number of side shoots missed when going over the plants a second time a day or so later. The plants should be kept tied and the stems straight, or the plants will be a mass of tangled growths with crooked necks. We usually apply a pretty good mulch to all the beds that are making growths for Christmas blooms, applying the mulch as soon as the growths are several inches long. Wash the mulch in well, and see to it that the soil is not allowed to get on the dry side or a check in the growths will be the result, followed by a loss of foliage. When mulching during the late fall and winter, it will be advisable to use manure that is fairly well decomposed, as the fresh cow manure often brings down the leaves, and this is caused by an excess of ammonia, and the reduced ventilation at this season. So if fresh manure must be used, keep the ventilators open as far as possible, even if one has to run a coil or two to keep the temperature up to where it belongs.

There is one thing the beginner should remember and that is that the rose usually suffers more from the want of water than from overwatering, and we have found that Columbia and Premier require an unusual amount of water to keep them in vigorous growth. Of course, perfect drainage makes a wonderful difference in the amount of water the plants will take, and unless the subsoil under the solid borders, drains readily, one can hardly expect to produce very fine blooms. This is also true of the raised benches, where the bottom boards have narrow spacing, but this fault can be partly overcome by running the coils under the tables, which greatly assists the evaporation.

Now is the time, while the weather is yet open, to get in a supply of sand for the propagating, soil for potting, and manure for mulching, etc., which, if put under cover, out of the weather, will make less work later on and where either is wanted at short notice, one can be right on the job. If one intends doing any grafting, and as yet, have no orders placed for manetti stocks, they should get busy at once, for it is very doubtful if any can be procured even now. A great many more roses are being grown on their own roots from year to year, owing to the scarcity of good manetti and the extremely high prices asked for stocks of inferior quality. And unless the quality is good, one had better resort to the own root stocks. However, in our rambles, we cannot help noticing a falling off in the quality of the blooms, where own root stocks have almost taken the place of the grafted plants, and, in our own mind, we are sure that grafted plants will give one, and sometimes two, more crops than the own root plants benched at the same time, but if good stock cannot be had, of course we have to do the next best thing, if one has a good heavy clay soil, particularly suitable for own root plants. There will be very little difference noted in the quality of the bloom, and the quantity will average very well, but the grower that has the light sandy loam to contend with, will suffer the most if he cannot continue with grafted stock, so in the latter case, with the high cost of good English manetti, we suggest grafting, if the stocks can be had. It surely seems strange that we cannot grow as good manetti stocks in this country as in England or Ireland, when one considers the different climates we have here, and almost ideal location, for growing. Of course, when one could buy the stocks for $10 per thousand, and even less, when buying large lots, one could not grow the stocks at a profit, considering the higher price of labor in this country. But now, with the price raised to from $30 to $40 per 1,000, it looks to us like a good business proposition for the grower of manetti in this country, and we surely hope that something along these lines will be accomplished in the near future. This has been attempted in a small way, it is true, but with rather poor results, as the fault so far with the home grown stocks seems to be a tightness and thinness of the bark and lack of vigor, causing very poor covering qualities at the union of the grafts. This may be overcome by growing in localities where the soil is continually moist or wet, and protected from our hot sun by growing some other crop that will shade the stocks to a certain extent. At the same time, the fact remains, that we have not progressed far with the home grown stocks, but we feel assured that the time is not far off, when we can get our supply in this country, without the old trouble of having the stocks wasted by being too near the boilers in the ships, or frozen stiff in the freight yards, etc.

The time has now come for the normal winter temperatures inside, 58° to 60° at night, 65° to 80° during the day, according to the weather. We never have advised extremely high temperatures at night in the rose houses, as there is too much danger in the severely cold weather, of an unavoidable drop in the temperature in the average range. So if the small grower can maintain an even temperature of 58° or 60° at night through the cold waves, he will have nothing to fear along that line; 65° will do nicely on cloudy days in cold weather, with no air, but at 70°, air should go on, as this is overheating with no ventilation; 75° on bright days, with ventilators open, is all right, and 80° can be safely carried on still, bright days, with plenty of air on the houses. These figures represent absolute safety, if good judgment is used in ventilating. Higher or lower temperatures will be running great risks, in the average small range where several varieties are usually grown in each house. And if one has a variety that takes a somewhat higher temperature, day and night, than the temperatures given above, the variety should be planted to itself, and heated accordingly. This, of course, applies to the warmer blooded plants, such as Ward, and we may say Ophelia and its sports, seedlings etc., which seem to take a temperature from two to four degrees higher, in order to keep them from slowing down in midwinter. But even these will not suffer at a 60° night temperature, if run evenly at that figure. It is the unevenness of the temperature that plays havoc with the plants, so bear this in mind.

National Publicity for Flowers.

It is pleasing to note from the list of new subscribers published this week, that our Canadian friends in the trade are appreciating the work of our publicity campaign. The legion of florists in our own United States, who have not yet subscribed to the fund, should, to use a slang expression, sit up and take notice—then sit down and write their cheques for the contributions which, surely, they intend to make. There is no room for doubt as to the beneficial effect of our campaign. A year or more ago, some might have been of the opinion that a shortage in production of flowers, through lack of fuel and war conditions, was the cause for a general clean-up of market stock at inflated prices. Such conditions have long since passed, but today we find the markets cleaning up as never before, in spite of increased values. Why? Simply this: The public are buying more flowers. Flowers are going regularly into homes where before their use was only occasional. Anniversaries are being more generally remembered with the "Say it With Flowers" spirit. The sick are being cheered with bright flowers continually, and the sending of flowers to hospitals is now practised on a much larger scale. New uses for flowers are being suggested every day, and the florists are reaping the benefit arising from the new demand. The glut point in our markets is no longer a dread, and the ash barrel has become a poor customer, indeed. If our campaign is not in great measure responsible for this change, what is? Our committees have gone the limit with their resources. To continue the work, means that we must have more support. We cannot expect the liberal-minded men, who have contributed to bring our work thus far, to shoulder more of the expense, even though some may be willing to do so.

Our committee is now urgently in need of further funds. In the interest of our industry, more money should be forthcoming, and we now appeal to all those neglectful members of our craft to come forward with their support, and help us to nail down the success we have met, and to carry it along indefinitely. We are a long, long way from our goal of $100,000, but with the cooperation that we have a right to expect, its accomplishment should be easy. Think the matter over—and act. Opportunities never linger; let us grasp the one we have sought and can, with the proper support, retain.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" IN THEATRES.

The Von Tilzer song, "Say it With Flowers," has proved to be a "hit" at the theatres where it has been presented. In New York last week, at the Palace, crowded houses greeted it, and it became quite a feature as rendered by Miss Grace LaRue. The setting of the song was helped by local florists, who supplied flowers and gave other assistance. In Cleveland, where Miss Frances Kennedy exploited the song, about 200 florists attended the theatre on the first evening, and they supplied about 1,500 corsage bouquets for the ladies in the audience as souvenirs, and, besides, used banners on their delivery wagons, and special window trims. Chicago is also prepared to give the song presentation every support. In the weeks of December 7, 14, and 22, Louisville, Ky., Cincinnati, O., and Salt Lake City, will be among the prominent cities to have the song featured. Altogether, a corps of 100 or more vocalists will shortly be featuring the song every week, and florists in every city are urged to lend every assistance they can in the presentations. It is good publicity, at no expense to our campaign.

BILLBOARDS.

A number of billboards have been ordered, for shipment to various parts of the country. Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., have ordered no less than three for their own locations. The cost, $50 each, delivered at any railroad station, is not much, and the country should be fairly sprinkled with signs in a short time. Look over your opportunities for a display of one of these signs and get your order in—the quicker the better.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" EXHIBIT.

About the best way to bring our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," plus a fine display of cut flowers and plants before the public, was demonstrated at the food and music show, which occupied the entire auditorium for six days running, November 20-25. The "Say It With Flowers" booth continued a set table and a sideboard properly decorated, which were changed from day to day. Vases of chrysanthemums, both large and small, were in evidence, while the sides were ornamented with willow plant boxes containing foliage and flowering plants. A large fancy vase on one corner was tastefully filled with foliage plants and vines. It was by far the neatest booth and was not cheapened by giving away a lot of useless souvenirs. Mrs. Ella Voelzke-Kitzerow, an experienced florist, had charge, and was relieved by Miss Hilda Kellner. When we realize that the average attendance was about 6,000 people a day, the result of this successful campaign by the florists' advertising club certainly will bear fruit beyond expectations, especially where it's so close to the holidays.

FLORISTS' CLUB TO ELECT OFFICERS.

The next regular monthly meeting of the florists' club will be held December 4, at the newly renovated store of E. Welke & Co., 752 Third street. Besides many points of vital interest to come up will be the annual election of officers for 1920. All members should attend.

ALL STOCK IN GOOD DEMAND.

Trade in general here for the months of October and November up to this time has been very good, having kept pace with last year. Considering the business resulting from the influenza last year, the business this year is very encouraging. There has been a marked increase in table decorations, corsages and other work resulting from various entertainments. While the volume of business has been good, still there has been an ample supply of stock, especially chrysanthemums, including pompons, which have been very good, particularly yellow and white Turners. There has been a fair supply of roses, and the quality of the stock has been as good as can be found anywhere. Premier, especially, has been good, and has demonstrated that it is a free grower and a wonderful producer. Columbia is holding its own, and some fine stock is coming in. Francis Scott Key is bringing good prices. Orchids have been of excellent quality and are cleaned up right along. Carnations, violets and sweet peas are in strong demand, but can only be had in limited quantity. The plant stock is looking very good, and there will be some excellent cyclamens and Melior and Lorraine begonias. Altogether, the outlook for good stock and general business is very encouraging.

NOTES.

E. P. Neiman, of The Park Floral Co., who recently returned from an extended tour of the east, expresses himself as greatly pleased with the encouraging condition of the trade generally. Mrs. Neiman, who has been in ill health, is greatly improved.

The banquet tendered the visiting florists at the Hotel Metropole, by the Colorado Horticultural Society, flower show week, was a very enjoyable affair.

Sam Lundy, of the Boldt & Lundy Flower Shop, is recovering slowly from his recent operation, being again at his desk, as genial as ever.

Wm. Rose, formerly with the Miller Floral Co., at Farmington, Utah, is now with Conrad Lengenfelder, of this city.

The Alpha Floral Co. recently had a fine autumn window display, in which the features were chrysanthemums and oak leaves.

The Mauff Floral Co. is showing some fine Columbia roses and Ward carnations.

The Boldt & Lundy Flower Shop is sporting a brand new delivery truck.

Ben Boldt is showing some fine cyclamens and begonias.

THANKSGIVING GALA EVENT.

The trade in this city is on the qui vive for Thanksgiving day, the business being accelerated by the annual football game between Vanderbilt and Suwanee colleges, and chrysanthemums, especially white and yellow, have been held back for this occasion. This event, from a florist standpoint, ranks of almost equal importance to the holiday season. The call for table decorations is also excellent, though of minor consideration. The day brings many visitors from surrounding towns, and nearly every local home has a guest, for whom there is dinner. Chrysanthemum prices are high, ranging from $6 to $12 per dozen. Those at the lower price are rather small. Carnations are beginning to come in nicely, and will soon be offered in profusion, taking the place of the chrysanthemums. Cyclamen plants and primroses are coming in. The supply of flowers in general is good, and the demand is all that could be expected.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Co. had a fine cut of yellow chrysanthemums for the Thanksgiving trade, as well as excellent offerings in plants. The roses are now in fine condition, and the cut is plentiful. This firm's branch at Chattanooga is growing rapidly and is generously supplied from the range in this city.

The McIntyre Floral Co. had a large assortment of chrysanthemums, both cut blooms and in pots, and were well prepared for the rush. They are also bringing a fine supply of cut flowers to the market daily. Roses and carnations at their range are doing well.

L. H. Haury & Sons have a large stock of chrysanthemum plants carrying fine flowers, and these were used to splendid advantage in a very attractive window display.

Louis Haury is bringing to market each day a nice assortment of peppers. Lorraine begonias, fern dishes and geraniums.

Geny Bros. were well supplied for Thanksgiving with an abundance of chrysanthemums, both cut stock and plants.

M. C. D.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Business here is not so brisk, when compared with that of 1918, but is much better than that of 1917, at this time. The trade generally is hopeful of early improvement.

GALENA, ILL.—The fall opening of the down town flower store of B. F. Vandervate in the Coatsworth building, November 13 attracted many visitors to the fine display of pot chrysanthemums and cut flowers.

COLLINGSWOOD, N. J.—E. H. Michel, of the Henry A. Dreer Riverton Farm, delivered an interesting address on "Success With Exhibition Dahlias" at the November meeting of the Collingswood Horticultural Society.

PIQUA, O.—The Miami County Horticultural Society has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: R. Moore, Piqua, president; Geo. Cress, West Milton, vice-president; Mrs. Walter C. Pierce, Troy, secretary; Darius Ross, Tippecanoe City, treasurer.

Personal.

N. E. Hansen, professor of horticulture at the South Dakota State College of Agriculture, Brookings, was in Chicago last week, returning from the east, where he has been visiting various institutions to properly record the botanical data collected on his recent Alaskan trip. Professor Hansen is widely known for his work among hardy fruits of northern regions. On his recent trip, the northern limit of the grape was extended, and he now believes he has obtained some hybrids of hardy single roses, which will interest florists and nurserymen.

Patrick O'Mara is said to be gaining in health, which will be good news to many anxious friends.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

President Wm. W. Vert announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year as follows:

Boston, Mass.—William Nicholson (chairman), James Wheeler, Alex Montgomery. Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston, manager, Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop square and Otis street, Boston, Mass.

New York — Eugene Dailledouze (chairman), Wm. H. Duckham, A. Harrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55-57 West 26th street, New York, care of chairman.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge (chairman), John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Cincinnati, Ohio — R. Witterstaetter (chairman), James Allen, J. C. Murphy. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago—N. J. Wietor (chairman), E. A. Kanst, Thomas W. Head. Ship flowers to chairman, 162 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character—not less than six blooms of each variety to be shown. Special attention is called to the rule that sports to receive a certificate must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during November, the dates of which will be November 22, 29.

MARKET MAINTAINS FIRM TONE.

Business is keeping up in fine shape. Social affairs are making strong demand upon the trade for stock of all kinds. What promises to be the liveliest social season for many years is now in full swing, and large quantities of stock are being used for decorative work. The chrysanthemum is beginning to show the effect of the long season and the stock being received now is not as good as formerly offered. The shipping demand continues heavy, and the market cleans up early every morning. Bonnaffon is the leading variety now offered, but the quality is not up to the high standard which this market demands. Jennie Nonin and White Chieftain are the only large whites. Some very good pinks are to be had. There is an unusually heavy cut of pompons coming in. Bronze and pink seem to sell best. They are in much demand for decorations. Quite a variety of singles may also be had. The rose market is in very good shape. Most of the offerings are of fairly good quality. The out-of-town demand for roses is brisk and steady. Russell is now very good. The flowers are large and the stems long. Shawyer, Columbia, Ophelia and Hadley are to be had in any grade. Cecile Brunner is practically done for. A fine lot of Irish Elegance is bringing fancy prices ,and is in great demand for basket work. Carnations are showing much improvement, and some good stock is being sent in. Light colors, such as the Enchantress family, Matchless and others, sell readily. There is a lot of inferior stock being handled, also, much of which is sold on the street. Violets are very plentiful, but seem to lack substance. We are much in need of rain and when it comes, the quality of the violets will improve greatly. Shipping trade is disposing of a large part of the daily arrivals of violets. Orchids continue to be very scarce. There is no abatement in the inquiries for this item. Available stock is retailing at $1.50 a flower. There are enough gardenias to supply all demands. Statice is enjoying a steady call. Longstemmed gaillardias are in good supply, and are popular. Small chrysanthemums from the Chinese growers are bringing fine prices this season. The demand for them for funeral work cleans up the arrivals daily. Cut cyclamens are largely sought for corsage and wedding bouquets. In flowering plants, chief interest centers in azaleas, the first of the season, which came in this week. They are a splendid addition, and are receiving much attention from the buying public. Primula obconica is fine and sells readily. Cyclamens are now very good. The red and salmon shades are the best sellers. All other pot plants, such as Bostons, are meeting with a steady sale. Ferns are not in over supply. There is just about enough asparagus to go around.

NOTES.

The Lynch Nursery Company is in with a fine lot of carnations from their range at Menlo Park. They are growing only the newest and best varieties. Their crop of chrysanthemums from out of doors is nearly over for this season. They have several houses grown to winter flowering snapdragons, with which they are very successful. Their nursery department is busy with a brisk demand for ornamental trees of all kinds. They will start cutting smilax about December 1. They will have over 25,000 strings this season, nearly all of which is used in their shipping trade.

The annual chrysanthemum show, held at Lindsay, was a great success in every way, and a new record was made for attendance. The quality of the flowers on exhibition was of a high standard of excellence, and many of the latest novelties were shown. W. S. Cairus was the leading winner, prizes in three classes going to him, as well as the award of the special trophy cup. The show will be repeated again next fall.

Ferrari Bros.' greenhouses are sending in a heavy cut of roses to J. A. Axell, on Bush street. They are in with a fine cut of Russell, which sells on sight. The orchid and gardenia houses promise a heavy cut later on. Victor Ferrari, the manager, is much pleased over the new arrangement, whereby all his stock is shipped to the wholesale market, instead of being delivered at the different retail stores around the city.

The green goods dealers are receiving large shipments of the California red berry. It is of very good quality this season and is in much demand. It is a little early for the berries to be of good color, but at that, it is bringing good prices. As yet, no holly has been received. Most of this stock is sent in from Oregon, Washington and British Columbia.

The wholesale house of J. A. Axell, on Bush street, is a very busy place these days. Local trade is very brisk and this week, the shipping trade keeps the large force busy all day. Mr. Axell says the orchid shortage is quite severe, but he expects that Cattleya trianae will be in shortly and relieve the situation.

The Misses Lacey, of Oakland, are sending in a splendid lot of Irish Elegance roses to the market. They are being eagerly sought for, owing to the fine quality of the stock. These growers have made much of a success in the handling of this rose, for which they report a steady demand.

The MacRorie-McLaren Company is showing a fine lot of pot grown azaleas at their Powell street store this week. This stock is finely grown and finished for so early in the season. They say plant trade in all their departments is showing much activity this year.

The chrysanthemum show held at Fresno, November 13, was a particularly fine one. Many of the local growers exhibited, and quite a lot of stock was sent from this city and vicinity. The exhibition was well attended, and was a great financial success.

Podesta & Baldocchi have been making beautiful displays of chrysanthemums. Nearly every color was represented. Decorative work has been quite heavy here all week, and large quantities of seasonable stock were used to fill their large orders.

Many of the trade received visits from the nurserymen who were in attendance at the annual meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen at Chico last week. Before returning to their homes, nearly all of them visited this city.

CLUB MEETING AND EXHIBITION.

The club meeting, November 18, was a pronounced success. There was a large, representative attendance, including the ladies of the club's auxiliary, many private gardeners and three prominent visitors and an exhibition of flowers. A. Miller, Chicago, gave an interesting and instructive address on Japan, where he had visited the past summer. He described in detail the customs of the people in that country, in both their domestic and business life, and as he traveled over most of the country, he was well qualified by his close observations while there, to convey to his audience the result of his experiences. He gave a minute and complete account of the lily industry, which produced last year, a crop of about 7,000,000 bulbs, which was a great shortage by many million of the annual yield of former years. The lily disease, he said, is being eradicated by the careful growers, and before long it is reasonably sure that this trouble will not be annually encountered by growers and importers. Added interest was given the address by the inspection of about 50 photos taken throughout Japan, and which included lily fields and cultural methods of them.

Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich., followed with an address on chrysanthemums, their culture, and methods of the production of new varieties. He exemplified by sample blooms at hand, his efforts to produce by careful selection of parent bloom, the shades of colors desired, but which he is only rarely successful in producing. The growers present made many inquiries bearing on the cultivation of chrysanthemums, which were ably answered by the "chrysanthemum king."

O. E. Steinkamp, of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., who was present with an exhibit of the firm's new carnation, Ruth Baur, spoke on carnations, and the work of the State Florists' Association of Indiana.

The display of chrysanthemums was inspiring to the growers and retailers present, who were prompted by the exhibit, to lay plans for a big show next fall. The exhibits included Rose Madame Butterfly, by the Jos. H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; the new rose, Frank W. Dunlop, by J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; Carnation Ruth Baur, by Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.; Cyclamen Glory of Wandsbek, by the George Wittbold Co., Chicago; Pompon Sunshine, by J. B. Goetz & Co., Saginaw, Mich.; Dimple and Golden Chadwick, by W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Chrysanthemums Chadwick, Enguehardt, Charles Razer and Patty, by Thomas Browne; vase of chrysanthemums in variety by T. P. Connon, gardener for H. N. Torrey; anemone varieties by A. Jackson, gardener for J. B. Schlotman; anemones, 10 varieties, by R. Lillie, gardener for E. L. Lord. A committee composed of A. J. Stahelin, Herman, Knape and Robert Lillie, inspected the stock shown and highly commended the excellence of all of the entries, the exhibits by private gardeners calling for the highest praise.

J. F. S.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., November 12, President Adler in the chair, Five applications for active membership were received. In the special classes for table decorations, for assistant gardeners only, there were six entries in competition and the judges, John F. Johnson, James McCarthy and P. W. Popp, made the following awards: T. McDougall, assistant to J. W. Everitt, first; Arnold Gatacre, assistant to Peter Smith, second; Alex. Marshall, assistant to George Ferguson, third.

The president presented the Mrs. F. B. Pratt silver cup for the best collection of hardy chrysanthemums to John W. Everitt, the Hutchings silver cup for the best four varieties of chrysanthemums, three of each, to Peter Smith, and the Mrs. H. L. Pratt silver cup for the best table decoration to George Ferguson.

The next session will be the annual meeting and election of officers and will be held December 10. A large meeting is desired and it is hoped all members will attend. Competition, one pot or pan of Paper White narcissus, three heads of celery and 25 Brussels sprouts.

NEW SONG HIT

"Say it with Flowers"

Has the official endorsement of the S. A. F. & O. H., because of its merit and popular approval.

The song is being introduced in a very refined way, thru the singing of it in high class theatres thruout the country by leading headliners, such as

FRANCES KENNEDY
GRACE LA RUE
VERNON STEILS
and many others.

Through our enormous organization and extensive channels of distribution we will place this song in the homes of hundreds of thousands.

It is unnecessary for Florists to buy this song for free distribution—We will sell it to the public at regular prices, thus maintaining high standard and quality.

DECEMBER FLOWERS

When the days are short and there is very little sun is the time when the supremacy of Home Grown Flowers show their greatest advantage. They are fresh cut, not 24 to 48 hours old on arrival in this market, and their attractive appearance and keeping qualities at once draw the attention of the buyer. Our stock is all grown in our own greenhouses and brought to our store three and four times per day. We guarantee their quality and freshness.

We are rose specialists and are now cutting roses from 245,000 rose plants all in one big range of glass.

BRISK THANKSGIVING TRADE.

The Thanksgiving trade is brisk, and from present indications, stock in all lines will clean up nicely, notwithstanding the large supply that is offered at this writing, Tuesday, November 25. The shipping trade is particularly heavy, and the city demand is very good. New York violets are exceedingly scarce, but the home-grown single offerings are commanding high prices. Orchids are on the short side, with fancy cattleyas bringing $18 to $24 per dozen. Lily of the valley is holding firm at $20 per 100, and choice sweet peas have brought as high as $4 per 100. Calendulas are having a good call, and so are snapdragons. White and yellow narcissi are moving nicely, and stevia is cleaning up right along. Chrysanthemums and pompons are in strong demand, and there is no doubt but what fancy stock in both these items will clean up early. Some particularly fine Bonnaffon, Nagoya and Chadwick were included in the chrysanthemum offerings, together with some choice stock in the other late varieties. American Beauty roses are good property, and the very best have sold for as high as $7 to $9 per dozen. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier and Columbia are having a brisk call and should clean up completely. Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Shawyer, Milady, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Champ Weiland, Thayer and Maryland are also in good demand. Killarney is arriving in particularly fine shape and in quantity at a few of the houses. Greens are selling well, with ferns advancing to $3.50 per 1,000 at some of the dealers. Boxwood is in strong demand and red winter berries are selling briskly. Wild smilax is having a strong call. The retail florists are all making a strong bid for the Thanks-establishment that successfully grows 40 to 50 varieties of plants to cut from? Yet that is just what the CHICAGO MARKET offers every day, IN and OUT of SEASON, to fill orders for the retail florists in Chicago and in other cities.

The QUANTITY and QUALITY of the stock is beyond comparison.

The EXPRESS SERVICE from CHICAGO is the BEST.

It is because of our large supply of cut flowers with that of the larger supply in the market as a whole that thousands of retail florists operate a Retail Store without the investment and expense of operating a greenhouse of their own.

CHICAGO rightfully claims the distinction as THE GREAT CENTRAL MARKET.

giving trade by making a magnificent showing of all seasonable cut flowers and plants. In plants, the principal offerings are chrysanthemums, cyclamens and begonias. Prices in the wholesale market, in some intsances, are not as high as last season, and in others are considerably above. Everyone appears to be quite well satisfied with the outlook for Thanksgiving week at this writing, and have no complaint whatever to make so far.

NOTES.

Miss L. A. Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, returned home from Baconton, Ga., where her pecan groves are located, November 24, with a supply sufficient to furnish all her old customers, as well as many new ones. Olga Tonner, Mrs. Thos. Fogarty and Mrs. H. C. Wullbrandt also have groves there as well as James Novak, who is now with Rolf Zetlitz at Lima, O. Mrs. Wullbrandt returned from Baconton, November 21.

The florists' club will meet at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday evening, December 4, at 8 o'clock, when the election of officers for the ensuing year will be held. The following were nominated at the last meeting: Paul Klingsporn and Otto Amling, president; T. E. Waters, vice-president; Paul Weiss, treasurer; Fred Lautenschlager, secretary, and W. J. Keimel, trustee.

N. J. Wietor is more than satisfied with Wietor Bros.' Thanksgiving trade so far, which is already ahead of that of last year. This house certainly had a splendid supply of stock this week and managed to dispose of it as fast as it arrived from the greenhouse.

Allie Zech says that trade for Thanksgiving at Zech & Mann's store to date has been exceptionally heavy, with stock of all kinds in good demand. Stevia made its appearance at this establishment this week.

"Say it With Flowers," at the Majestic theatre this week is proving to be a big hit. Miss Frances Kennedy, well-known musical comedienne, in a feature act, sings William Von Tilzer's already famous composition, "Say it With Flowers," full particulars of which appeared in our last issue, page 910. Tuesday, November 25, was "florists' night" at the theatre, the trade being well represented, having purchased over 250 tickets. This act, being featured as a headliner during holiday week, was of great advertising value to the trade, and all those who assisted in making it so successful have the most sincere thanks of the local florists.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, believes in making a great window showing at all times, and manages to keep the crowds entertained with artistic arrangements of the choicest cut flowers. The ducks are an added attraction.

Peter Reinberg has no complaint to make in regard to the Thanksgiving demand, which was very good up to the time of this writing. Herbert Hansen says that many of the firm's old customers were heard from this week.

George Wienhoeber had a beautiful showing of stock for Thanksgiving in both cut flowers and plants. In one plant group were noted some splendidly grown chrysanthemums.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having a heavy call for baskets, with a particularly strong demand for one line finished with a beautiful fire-gold on black. Even "Bo" liked it.

The A. L. Randall Co. is doing a fine Thanksgiving business, which is keeping Eric Johnson and his crew busy as bees. Stevia is seen at this house in quantity.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association had a large quantity of Woodwardi ferns to offer for Thanksgiving, in addition to its usual line of green goods.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. report a heavy call for stock for Thanksgiving, especially chrysanthemums. Boxwood is a leader in the green goods department at this house.

At Bassett & Washburn's store, the Thanksgiving demand, up to the time of going to press, was very active, and everything pointed to a grand cleanup.

The Weiss-Spandikow Co. has placed an order with the Lord & Burnham Co. for four new greenhouses, 70x400 feet.

The John Kruchten Co. moved a large quantity of chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving, especially Bonnaffon, which appeared to be its long suit.

Erne & Company had their share of the Thanksgiving trade, which was very good this year. The out-of-town demand was fine at this house.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is pleased with the demand for magnolia leaves and wild smilax, which is very active this week.

Percy Jones, Inc., had a splendid business for Thanksgiving, with a heavy call for chrysanthemums and pompons.

The Joseph Foerster Co. had a splendid Thanksgiving trade, which exceeded all expectations.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is moving a large quantity of adiantum.

Visitors: E. H. Mazey, Minneapolis, Minn.; Chas. F. Edgar, representing the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. Nellie Zeigler, Bellevue, O.; A. Goodman, of Kemble & Goodman, Mason City, Ia.

Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago.

The November meeting of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago was held at the Randolph hotel, November 20. Hans Jepsen read an interesting paper on chrysanthemums, and also sent a beautiful exhibit of pompons.

Five new applicants were elected to membership. Since many growers are unable to leave their places at night, it was considered advisable to meet during the day time in the future, and a trial will be made of the next meeting, which will be held at the Randolph hotel, December 11, at 2 p. m.

In order to stimulate the demand, and thereby get better average returns for flowers, the growers are considering publicity. This will be the special subject for discussion at the next meeting.

PLENTIFUL SUPPLY WITH GOOD SALES.

Business is brisk with a plentiful supply of stock, especially in chrysanthemums, many of the larger blooms bringing high prices. Pot chrysanthemums are also in good supply and move readily. There is an ample stock of Ophelia, Russell and Columbia roses, but with chrysanthemums numerous, prices are not up to standard. Carnations are more plentiful and of improved quality. Stevia and narcissi help to fill in. The wholesale houses are well stocked for Thanksgiving and are preparing as well for a large business throughout the season. The retail stores also expect to handle the largest trade in their history for this holiday.

NOTE.

Effective December 1, there will be no burials in cemeteries in this city on Sunday. The new arrangement is a step in the direction toward Sunday closing of the flower shops that will be appreciated by many in the trade.

PRICES WELL MAINTAINED; GOOD SUPPLY.

Local growers have been offering heavily of late and their lines have been good enough in most instances to give them the greater part of the business. Popularity seems to be favoring chrysanthemums, roses, carnations and violets in the cut flower list and cyclamens and pompons in pot plants. The Chadwick, white and yellow Turner and Bonnaffon chrysanthemums have been the big sellers, and one greenhouse is offering fancy stock in maple and bronze to the trade. The prices are being well maintained on local stock, but trouble with express delivery in some cases brings forced sacrifices to move California lots. Occasional complaints as to poor packing also are heard, but not enough to be a serious trade factor. The cut of carnations is not coming up to expectations, and in most cases the trade finds it difficult to keep a full supply on hand. The pink carnations are not showing the keeping qualities usually looked for. Ward roses are plentiful. Ophelia and Columbia are numerous, with Cecile Brunner, Sunburst, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Bride also seen. There were a few lots of American Beauties in during the early part of the week, but not nearly enough to keep up with the retail demand. Violets are still good sellers, and the Shasta daisies arriving, also clean up early. Some snapdragon has been offered, and a good crop of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati is coming from one range. The practical passing of outdoor flowers has given a brisker "standing order" business and the whole volume of trading is larger. Fine pot cyclamens have been shown by the different stores, and these are justly popular, and the pot palms under three or four feet in height are also good retail sellers. Funeral business is also better.

NOTES.

The most elaborate decoration, in a floral way, ever attempted in this city was arranged November 14 by the Hollywood Gardens. This was for the first of the winter balls, formal occasions discontinued during the war. The main dining room of the New Hotel Washington was the scene. In each window was placed a large silver basket of pompon chrysanthemums, pampas grass and salsal, while in each corner of the room, stood a silver candelabra of seven branches, six feet high. The walls were festooned with salsal ropes and from the balcony a large Oriental rug hung. The lights were veiled with tarltan strips of soft tones, caught under each cluster with an inverted bunch of yellow pompons. In the lobby, spruce trees were used to screen off the entrance of the dance floor. A white trellis covered with Southern smilax and salsal created a garden atmosphere here, and in the center was a round stand, circled with pompons and salsal and with a huge, hollowed-out chunk of ice used as a punch bowl. All details were handled by this firm, and reflected great credit on the development of the industry here.

A novel means of showing carnations, from the standpoint of giving the buyer some idea as to what can be done with these flowers, was seen in the windows of the Wodlawn Flower Shop. A tall glass vase such as is generally used for American Beauties, and a bunch of carnations was arranged to give the effect of a large ball at the top.

M. Schreiber, for a number of years in the nursery business at Everett, has opened a retail florist's shop at Bremerton, the Puget Sound station of the Pacific fleet. The large number of officers' families brought there by the fleet orders, insured a steady trade, and Mr. Schreiber has already been forced to take on an assistant.

A window that attracted considerable comment was shown by L. W. McCoy. Pine cones, Ophelia roses and imitation roses were scattered on the floor of the window with the natural flowers. Arguments as to whether they were real or not, proved common.

Rosaia Bros. report that their cut of orchids is holding up well, and that roses are better than for the last several years. This firm has some exceptional examples of cyclamens and have found that featuring pot plants brings big sales.

It is announced that the Orpheum Floral Company will shortly change its name to the Woodland Park Floral Company, the title formerly used when the Woodland Park greenhouses controlled the business.

Rochester, N. Y.

COLDER WEATHER STRENGTHENS DEMAND

Trade during the past two weeks has been dull, with very little funeral work and few weddings, but the killing frosts November 14, which put an end to outdoor flowers did much to improve business. Roses of all kinds are plentiful and of excellent quality, especially Columbia, Ward and Ophelia. Carnations, while not abundant show good form and prices hold firm. Pompons are plentiful and are much in demand for Thanksgiving decorations. Eaton, in yellow and white, Bonnaffon, Enguehardt and Turner are all plentiful. Violets and orchids meet with a good call for corsage work. In flowering plants, begonias, cyclamens, primroses and pompons sell well.

NOTES.

The florists' association will hold its meeting at the Osborne House, December 14. This will be in the nature of a smoker with special features by professional talent.

The Rochester Floral Co. is fast getting its basket features in red and green ready for the holiday trade.

H. E. Wilson is now cutting excellent Eaton and pompon chrysanthemums.

SHORTENED SUPPLY; INCREASED SALES.

There has been a noticeable shortage in roses of all grades and varieties, with considerable increase in demand. With outdoor offerings a thing of the past, nearly everything in the cut flower line moves to excellent advantage. Pompons are in good supply. Large chrysanthemums are a little below requirements, particularly the good yellow varieties. Sweet peas, swainsonas and violets are plentiful, but the call cleans them up at satisfactory figures. Carnations are good property and are disposed of easily as the supply is limited. There are good sales of pompons in pots for Thanksgiving day. Present indications point to a shortage of stock for that occasion. Greens seem equal to all needs.

NOTES.

Karl Witthuhn, son of Fred Witthuhn, the well known florist, has opened a retail store at 4236 Pearl road, having purchased the stock and fixtures of Mrs. G. Lorenze and remodeled the establishment. In his advertising in the daily press he calls attention to the fact that he is "Saying it With Flowers." Karl Witthuhn was formerly employed by the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and is well known to the trade, who wish him success.

The Rocky River Greenhouse Co. won a suit started in 1918 against the light and power company, of that place, for $10,504. The defendant shut off the water supply without notice, making it necessary to draw the fires at the greenhouses, causing the entire range to freeze up.

James McLaughlin, of the J. M. Gasser Co.'s staff, has been on the sick list for several days.

C. F. B.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

At 1 p. m., November 20, the first order of the day was a trip to Strasburg, stopping first at the houses of Amos Rohrer, who grows carnations as a main crop, but has snapdragons, sweet peas and calendulas as a side issue. Everything looked well, especially the carnations of which he grows Mrs. C. W. Ward, Matchless and Supreme in quantity, and one bench of White Wonder that still continues to give good satisfaction. He also has a bed of Albert Roper, which he says is a bit shy through the winter, but makes up for lost time in the spring, and holds its color remarkably well in the hot months. Mr. Rohrer grows an assortment of pot plants for his local trade.

Charles B. Herr entertained us for an hour at his place, and in addition to Ward, Supreme, Belle Washburn and his big house of Matchless, he has a bed of Crystal White that looks very promising as a commercial sort. To keep himself out of mischief, he has some fine fancy pigeons.

J. Wade Galey, half a mile out, has once again the banner houses of carnations for Lancaster county. The two first named places were fine, but his are superfine. He grows Mrs. Ward, Supreme, Matchless, Beacon and Alice. His cut last season was Mrs. Ward, 19; Matchless, 23, and Beacon and Alice, 25 to the plant; not to one or two plants, but to every plant on the place, and this season promises just as good, or better.

On the way back to Lancaster, a stop was made at the range of Carl Brackbill. Here we found the old arch enemy of carnations, stem rot, superinduced by the plants being under water part of the time, just before housing them.

The last place visited was the H. D. Rohrer establishment, where the carnations are below par, owing to the continued rains and a leaky roof, but the better weather of the past week has helped and most of them will make a crop. House after house, filled with Bonnaffon chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving, and one house of extra fine Seidewitz, are going to bring some revenue to this place. H. K. and A. K. Rohrer, who are now conducting the place, have developed into growers of plants as well as cut flowers and have their famous strain of primula by the 100,000 in various sizes. They also have a house of cyclamens that measure up to the high standard set for this flower. A fine lot of Paris Daisies, in pots, completes the plant end, but they have calendulas, myosotis and callas as additional cut flower stock.

On the trip we had with us Arthur Niessen, Dennis Connor and T. J. Nolan.

The evening meeting was an innovation, the place being the men's parlors of the Y. M. C. A., and was preceeded by a very fine supper, served by the ladies of the Y. M. C. A., under the supervision of Mrs. A. M. Herr, their president.

Cut flowers were on exhibition, including a fine display of pompons from President Elmer Weaver, the large flowered chrysanthemums from H. K. Rohrer and Lemon Landis, and the new white sweet pea, Mrs. Rudolph Nagle, from Rudolph Nagle. This sweet pea is making friends with every one who sees it, and Mr. Nagle is to be congratulated on having introduced it. The tables were decorated by the B. F. Barr Co.

The paper of the evening was by Arthur Niessen of Philadelphia, Pa., on "The Prospects for the Coming Winter," and was listened to with much attention. Unexpectedly, we had with us W. F. Therkildson and Mr. Prentice of the N. W. Ayer advertising agency, and the former outlined the publicity work of the S. A. F. and for local clubs in his own inimitable style. Both Mr. Niessen and Mr. Therkildson answered many questions, and the meeting went on record as endorsing the movement of the Philadelphia club of raising funds, by the percentage plan, for publicity purposes.

T. J. Nolan was presented with a huge birthday cake, on which was erected a boiler house and stack, and Mrs. A. M. Herr, in making the presentation speech, said it was up to him to build the greenhouse. He thanked the members for their remembrance, and after the meeting adjourned, cut the cake and gave each lady and gentleman a slice to either eat or to take home and dream on.

PLENTIFUL SUPPLY MOVES WELL.

The market has been quite active during the past week. A fairly plentiful supply has been coming in, and the demand has been steady, permitting dealers to move stocks readily. The foot-ball game November 22 between the Ohio State University and the University of Illinois was one of the events of the week, and caused a heavy sale of chrysanthemums. All of the local florists laid in a large supply for this event, and were sold out early in the day. Chrysanthemums are of exceptionally good quality and have been retailing from $9 to $14 per dozen, or 75 cents to $1 each. Carnations are also coming in well, and are of excellent quality. They retail at about $1.50 per dozen. The carnations are mostly pink and white. Sweet peas are in good demand, and the supply is sufficient at present. They are in excellent condition. Narcissi are also on the market now, and are selling rapidly. Callas are also in, and of good quality. Every indication points to an extra large sale for Thanksgiving. Plants are becoming better and cyclamens are selling well. There has been considerable party work during the past week, and quite a few social affairs are scheduled for the immediate future. Funeral work has also been fairly active.

DAILY CLEANUP IN MOST STOCKS.

Flowers of all kinds have been on the short side the past week, which condition was rendered more acute by a brisk demand that cleaned up the market every day, there being scarcely anything to go into the box at night. Roses have shortened up until there is not half enough for the demand. The lower grades or short sizes are very scarce, and promise to continue so all winter, as many growers have discarded the Pink Killarney. Many growers pinched off the crop that would have been in now, so as to be in good shape for the holidays. Chrysanthemums sell up quickly. The best are the Chadwicks, Eatons, Bonnaffon and Seidewitz. About one-third of the stock is Bonnaffon, and they are most in demand. There is a good supply of pompons, which command top prices. Some fine singles are quickly grabbed up. Violets are at a premium. Cattleyas are still selling at $1.50 each, and likely to go higher. The first stevia is in, both plain and variagated. It meets with the usual good demand. Callas are in fair supply at high prices. Sweet peas find a ready sale. The quantity is increasing slowly. Paper White narcissus are in fair supply and appears to find buyers. Carnations are coming strong. They were advanced $2.00 per hundred the past week, and will likely see $1.00 a dozen next week. At this writing, it would seem as if all prices would jump forward rapidly as soon as the chrysanthemums are out of the way. An immense amount of greens of all kinds are handled daily.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the club, Tuesday, December 2,, will have several interesting features. The speaker of the evening will be President-Elect A. L. Miller, of the Society of American Florists whose foreword of the work of the society for the coming year should be most interesting. There is to be an exhibition of Christmas plants, many of them decorated as when on sale in the flower shops. There will be other novelties in plants and cut flowers. The committee will also outline its plan of publicity in the local campaign. A dinner, complimentary to President-Elect A. L. Miller, will be given in the roof garden of the Hotel Adelphia, at 6 p. m., two hours before the meeting.

INCREASING THE SUPPLY.

Commenting on the shortage of stock, particularly roses, one of the large commission dealers said that it would be no trouble to get rose growers to add 20 to 25 per cent to their production, which would be of great assistance at times like the present, but they would have to be assured of the co-operation of the retailers in handling the surplus this would throw on the market in the fall and spring. He was quite sure that many more flowers could be sold, particularly at times of overstocked markets, if the retailers would plunge in, and by a little hustling and pushing the stock, work it off profitably to people who would be glad to have it. A prominent grower said that while Killarney had had been as profitable as ever, they had dropped it at the request of customers. There was really only three months in winter, when it had the market to itself, that it was in demand. In fall and spring, it could not stand up against the competition of the Columbia and the Russell. The rose situation, as he saw it, would, after the holidays, be a trying one, in which other flowers would have to take the place of the lower grades.

NOTES.

Mrs. J. Carroll, Darby, Pa., met with a serious loss by fire, November 19, which broke out in the boiler shed adjoining the dwelling at 3:30 a. m. Mrs. Carroll and her daughter were the only persons at home. They were awakened by the noise of the flames and got out of the house safely. The fire consumed the combined store and dwelling, the boiler shed, in which were two automobiles, and three greenhouses filled with stock. There was insurance, but the loss is quite serious. The business is being continued at a greenhouse establishment which Mrs. Carroll purchased recently, this being about a block away. The sympathy of the trade is freely extended to Mrs. Carroll, many calling to offer assistance.

The little black bug is still active in the Hadley house of the Joseph Heacock Co. Every remedy or insecticide known, has been tried, even cyanide, but at the first sign of danger, the insects drop to the surface and enter the ground, coming out with a better appetite when the air is clear. This is a new one that growers should keep a close lookout for.

Arthur A. Niessen was the speaker at the November meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club. His topic was duty first, and then participation in matters outside of personal business. W. F. Therkildson was also present, and gave interesting data relative to local and national floral publicity campaigns.

Robert A. Craig reports an excellent call for everything in the plant line. Poinsettias are in great demand for the holidays; a splendid assortment of ferns is a feature. Two new houses are being added to their 49th street range.

John Berger, of Berger Bros., reports chrysanthemums as having sold very well this fall, particularly for the past two weeks. White and yellow Chadwicks and Mrs. Seidewitz were noteworthy varieties here.

Robert Bragg, referring to the prices of chrysanthemums, says they have sold too low, bringing only on an average, 25 per cent more than pre-war prices, while it has cost almost double to grow them.

Choice white and yellow Chadwick are the cream of the chrysanthemum stock of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. Manager Augele will have fine Jennie Nonin for the first week in December.

Robert Halliday, of Baltimore, was in town, November 22. He looked well and is now able to resume his duties.

ADVANCE IN PRICES INDICATED.

Business was good during the past week, with advancing prices. Excepting in chrysanthemums, there was a very moderate supply of stock, falling to a shortage in orchids and violets. Before the end of the week, American Beauty roses, specials, wholesaled at the rate of $1.00 each, and there was a stiffening in prices on all good tea roses. Ward carnations sold for $8.00 per 100, and there is a prospect of higher prices in the near future. There was a considerable stock of sweet peas, which were rather slow, and are likely to be until the pompon chrysanthemums are out of the way. Stevia is beginning to arrive in considerable quantities, and is a welcome addition to the visible supply. The various dinners and other entertainments in honor of the Prince of Wales had a quickening effect on the demand for special stock. In lilies, callas, lily of the valley and snapdragons, there was a fair demand. Unless a heavy stock of chrysanthemums is being held back, the Thanksgiving prices will be high, with the prospect of a scarcity later.

NOTES.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held in the Engineering building, 33 West 39th street, on the night of December 8. It will be election night, and though no very spirited contests are expected, the election always brings out a good attendance. The candidates for president are A. M. Henshaw, president of the Henshaw Floral Co., Inc., and I. S. Hendrickson, a well known employe of John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I. Roman J. Irwin seems to have a clear field for vice-president, as John G. Esler has declined to run. John Young, the present secretary, and Edward C. Vick, editor of the garden department of the New York Sun, are the nominees for secretary. William Kather declines to run for treasurer, which leaves the field to W. E. Rickards, Jr., now holding the office. The nominees for trustees are A. T. Bunyard, Emil Schloss, Thomas Booth De Forest and Max Schling, three to be elected.

On November 21, the Prince of Wales visited Oyster Bay, and laid a wreath on the grave of Theodore Roosevelt. He also visited Central Park, and planted a tree on the Mall. At the Hippodrome, little Miss Florence Burnside, daughter of the manager of the house, presented the Prince with a large basket of American Beauty roses in behalf of the 57 members of the Hippodrome staff who are British subjects. It can be truthfully stated that the prince made an excellent impression while here.

The Tribune, November 23, carried a most excellent full page advertisement from the Associated Retail Florists of New York, worded as a "Thanksgiving Proclamation," calling attention to the many blessings we enjoy, and extolling flowers and their use at a time of thanksgiving. Its final words are, "Brighten the day with flowers." It is a happy thought of the retail florists to seek to interest the people in flowers through the medium of a great daily newspaper.

Harry Tryfaros, of the retail firm of Tryfaros Brothers, has returned to the store after 19 months of service in the United States army, most of his service being in France. He saw much fighting, but escaped injury. He believes that the majority of the people of Europe will be glad to settle down, go to work, and be peaceable, if their leaders will show them the way.

The new retail firm of Guido, Inc., arranged a handsome decoration in St. James church for the wedding of Miss Isabel Stettinius to John B. Marsh, on November 19. The bride's father is a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. Many white and pink roses and white chrysanthemums were used.

Anton Schulthies, College Point, has completed a block of new plant houses, six in number. His force is active in delivering pot chrysanthemums of which he has had a great stock. His Christmas supply of heather, poinsettias and many other plants is in fine condition.

The Washington Florist Co., of Newark, N. J., recently purchased 1,000 copies of the song, "Say it With Flowers"—words by Mrs. F. H. Traendly and Mrs. Chas. Schenck—and are handing them to their customers, with the compliments of the company.

Miss Marian Traendly, third daughter of Frank H. Thaendly, of Traendly & Schenck, was selected to represent Erasmus high school at a reception given by the Prince of Wales, November 21, on board his warship, the Renown.

J. H. Small & Son arranged the decorations for the dinner given in honor of the Prince of Wales by Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Davison at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel on the night of November 18.

John N. Champion, of New Haven, Conn., was in the wholesale district November 14, and bought heavily of violets, in anticipation of the football game between Yale and Princeton.

Madison Square Garden was handsomely decorated by H. H. Burns for the horse show, which continued through the past week. New and unique landscape features were noteworthy.

At the store of J. S. Fenrich, we have recently noted fine Premier, Columbia, Hadley and Ophelia roses of special grade, also good carnations.

FINE EXHIBITS AT CLUB MEETING.

Exhibits were the chief attraction at the meeting of the florists' club for November, held in the salesroom of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, Inc., 611 Broadway. The business meeting was brief. In the course of it, President William Newport called for the reports of the nominating committees appointed at the October meeting. The committees submitted the following tickets for the annual election in December For president—Edward P. Tracey. For vice president, one to be chosen—Howard Menand, Albert Jenkins. For secretary-treasurer—Robert Davidson. For trustees, three to be chosen—Fred A. Danker, Frederick Henkes, Thomas Tracey and Frederick Goldring. The nominee for secretary-treasurer, Robert Davidson, thanked the committees for their nomination, but said he felt that he should decline a re-nomination again. President Newport then instructed the committees to prepare a new set of nominees to be submitted at the December meeting.

The exhibits included 38 lots of flowers in vases and plants contributed by growers in this and other sections of the country. Many of the exhibits, after the meeting, were put up at auction, the proceeds to go to the club treasury. Perhaps the most notable incident connected with the sale, was when a vase of eight prize winning chrysanthemums were put up at auction. The blooms were grown by Samuel Goldring, a former local florist, now in the employ of George H. Person, of Catskill. The varieties included W. H. Turner, Yellow Turner, Timothy Eaton, Barbara Davis and Chadwick. Bidding began at about $8, and was run up speedily to $15, and then by increases of half a dollar to $18, at which price the vase went to Fred A. Danker. The retailers were unanimous in declaring the exhibit by Mr. Goldring to be the finest lot of chrysanthemums they had seen this season. There were also many other creditable exhibits, such as fine sturdy plants of Jerusalem cherries, covered with berries, cyclamens, chrysanthemums of the pompon varieties, carnations of merit, new and standard roses, and begonias. An unusually fine maiden hair fern was sold to F. A. Danker for $2.75. The sale brought over $117 into the treasury. Wives of the members were present to view the exhibits.

Among those elected to membership of the club is John P. McCarthy, with M. Rice Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, November 25, was $60.

A. SLUIS, of Sluis Seed Store, Chicago, was in Paris, France, November 21.

NORTHERN IDAHO experimenters say good yields of perennial and Italian rye grass seed can be produced there, also brome seed.

VISITED NEW YORK: Eugene Schaettel, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France; C. C. Massie, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—C. C. Morse & Co. are pushing the sale of Dutch bulbs by means of newspaper advertising and report a heavy trade in them.

C. C. MASSIE, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., was elected president of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League at the annual meeting, held at Detroit, Mich., November 19.

VISITED CHICAGO: Adolph Corneli, of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Mr. Boyce, of the Woodruff-Boyce Seed Co., Seattle, Wash.; Einar Knutsson, representing Hjalmar Hartman & Co., Copenhagen, Denmark.

THERE was a full attendance at the executive committee meeting of the American Seed Trade Association, held at Detroit. Mich., November 20, when it was decided to hold the next annual convention at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24. A tentative programme was arranged and preliminary plans made for the meeting.

A. L. ROGERS, of Rogers Bros., Hearst building, Chicago, and Alpena, Mich., has the sympathy of a large circle of seed trade friends in the loss of his daughter, Mrs. Mabel H. Rose, who died at Idaho Falls, Idaho, November 19. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Chaumont, N. Y., with burial at Cape Vincent, N. Y.

CANNERS' MEETINGS.—Coming meetings of canners' associations are scheduled as follows: Michigan Canners' Association, Grand Rapids, December 2; Minnesota Canners' Association, St. Paul, December 3-4; New York Canners' Association, Rochester, December 10-11; Tri-State Packers' Association, Philadelphia, Pa., December 17-18: National Canners' Association, Cleveland, O., January 27-30.

THE sixty-eighth semi-annual meeting of the Western Canners' Association was held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, last week, and was well attended. The seedsmen represented included: Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; David Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa.; D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.; Rogers Bros., Chicago and Alpena, Mich.; Hogg & Lytle, Toronto, Ont.; Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.; N. B. Keeney & Son, LeRoy, N. Y.; J. H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis.; Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., and the W. W. Barnard Co., Everette R. ePacock Co., S. F. Leonard Seed Co. and Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.

Continental Seed Co., Chicago.

A tract of land in the Calumet industrial district at Hammond, Ind., improved with buildings, having an aggregate floor space of 120,000 square feet, has been purchased by the Continental Seed Company, recently organized with $500,000 paid up capital by former employes of the Albert Dickinson Company, 2750 West Thirty-fifth street. Announcement of the Hammond purchase was made November 19. The property has a Grand Calumet river frontage, and is served by the Indiana Harbor Belt railroad and six other lines. There are seven acres of vacant property in the site, which will be improved immediately with a six story elevator and other buildings as they are needed. The company plans to employ 150 men.

C. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn.
President-Elect Wholesale Seedsmen's League.

The president of the new concern is Charles A. Heath, who was connected with the Dickinson company for 37 years, and who disposed of his stock in that concern seven years ago for $180,000. The vice-presidents are A. E. Reynolds, of the Crabb-Reynolds-Taylor Company, Crawfordsville, Ind., field seedsmen and grain merchants, and H. W. Doughten, of New York, president of H. W. Doughten, Inc., wholesale dealers in clover and grass seed. The secretary is Harold A. Abbott, president of the American Feed Manufacturers' Association, with the Dickinson concern for 21 years. The treasurer is Arch C. Johnson, with the Dickinson concern 20 years as a specialist in field seeds. G. W. Hales, of the Hales & Edwards Company, and C. U. Snyder, one of the largest operators in feeds and molasses, are directors.

Grass Seed.

Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, November 25, were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 to $11.25 per 100 pounds; $12.80 bid for March; $12.80 sellers; $12.50 bid for year; $12.50 sellers. Red clover, $40 to $48 per 100 pounds.

At Paris, Ky., November 20, new crop Kentucky blue grass was quoted in car lots, 19-pound test, at $24.65; 17-pound test, $23.20; less than car lots, 35 cents per 100 pounds higher.

Alfalfa new crop seed is reported in strong hands, and the spring price likely to be firm and higher.

Kunderd's Gladioli.

A. E. Kunderd, of Goshen, Indiana, reports the sale of all his surplus gladiolus bulbs for this season, and will not issue a catalogue for 1920. The sale was made to Albert W. Henn, president of The National Acme Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, for $60,000. Mr. Henn is the owner of extensive farms near Painesville, Ohio, where he raises bulbs and seeds. The management of the farm is under the supervision of Ralph E. Huntington, the well-known nurseryman. The quantity of gladiolus bulbs changing hands in this transaction is not stated.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Loui ville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

THE New York Sun says gambling in farms in the west has assumed such proportions that the government is going to investigate the situation. In many sections, a cash payment of five per cent will swing temporarily a $100,000 transaction. Large mortgages, due March, 1920, alarm banking commissioners.

PUYALLUP, WASH.—Market gardeners in this section are planning on increased plantings of lettuce this winter to meet the heavy demand built up for the Puget Sound product. While the northern grown crop takes a month longer to mature, the cooler, wetter climate gives a better keeping quality than the California lettuce.—H. M.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.50 to $5.50; celery, Michigan, square box, $1.25 to $1.75; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 37½ cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 80 cents; tomatoes, per lug, $2.00 to $2.75.

New York, Nov. 24.—Celery, per doz. roots, 10 to 60 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $3.00 to $4.00; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.50 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 18 to 35 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $6.00.

Insect Control in Stored Foods.

Where foods, seeds or other materials are being attacked by insects, they may be treated either with a gas or with heat to destroy the pests, says L. Haseman of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia. Heating in a slow oven is a very simple and practical remedy. Where seeds are treated, care must be taken to prevent injury to germination, but in case of foods, the strength of gas, or the height of the temperature, are no items so long as they are sufficient to kill the pest. Temperatures of from 120 to 140 degrees Fahrenheit will soon kill any of the ordinary pests. This temperature if maintained for only a short time will also not seriously injure most ordinary seeds. Simply spread out the food or other material to be treated in shallow pans or similar containers and place them in an ordinary stove in which the temperature should not go above 140 degrees Fahrenheit. Treat for from 10 to 20 minutes, and both eggs and feeding stages of all common pests will be destroyed. Where large quantities of seeds or other materials are to be treated, small rooms may be heated to the proper temperature, or carbon bisulphide may be used to treat it in tight bins, chests or similar containers. This gas settles down through the product, since it is heavier than air, so the container should be free from cracks in the bottom. For treating an average sized trunk full of foods, grain, furs or clothing, use about two ounces of carbon bi-sulphide and permit it to act for 24 hours. Do not expose the gas to fire as it is explosive.

MARKET CONDITIONS MUCH IMPROVED.

Business conditions are better than at any time this season, and at the close of business, November 22, the wholesale houses were entirely sold out. Of course, the supply has diminished, but the demand is better and the prices are higher. Chrysanthemums are the backbone of the market, and are bringing good returns. The local growers report that they will have a big cut for Thanksgiving. Bonnaffon, Ranger, Dean, and Turner are the favorites. The supply of American Beauties is short, and they clean up daily. Quality and color are extra good. There are not nearly enough roses to supply the demand. Columbia and Mrs. Russell are favorites, with Premier and Ophelia close seconds. The demand is mostly for the shorter and medium grades. Carnations are not in large supply, but the quality is getting better daily. Paper White narcissi are arriving in quantity, but the call is light. The public cannot see them as a high priced flower, but if the grower is going to realize anything on them, the price will have to be held up. The glut in pompons is over, and they are getting back to their own, and to prices somewhere near what they are worth. Orchids are scarce, but the demand is light, as also holds true of lily of the valley. Sweet peas and calendulas are more plentiful, and the quality is better.

FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION MEETING.

The retail florist's association met at luncheon at the Seventh Avenue hotel, November 18 to take up the matter of Sunday closing. The subject was well received by all present. A special meeting has been called for November 25, when they hope to have all the members present, and go more fully into the matter. The prospects are bright that by the first of the year, this city will have fallen in line, and so far as the florist is concerned, be closed up tight on Sunday. The wholesale houses have set the pace, and remain closed all day on the Sabbath. Another subject taken up by the association, was community advertising, and at the next meeting a fund will be started to get it going.

NOTES.

Chas. E. Edgar, the McCallum Co.'s western representative, and wife, are in the city, and will remain here until after the holidays. Mr. Edgar reports a very prosperous season. Henry Blend, another representative, has returned from a trip through northern New York. While on this trip, he was stricken with appendicitis, and had to be operated upon. The operation was successful, and Henry is like his old self again, a little weak, but getting stronger every day.

Nursery Stock in Bond.

The following communication from McHutchison & Co., well known importers of horticultural supplies, New York, to the federal horticultural board, in regard to importations of nursery stock in bond for Canada, coming through United States ports, and a copy of the board's reply, explain themselves:

NOVEMBER 13, 1919.

"The Federal Horticultural Board,
"Washington, D. C.

"Gentlemen:—

"By request of several of our Canadian customers, we have received prices from them upon Holland nursery stock, consisting for the most part of Azalea mollis, rhododendrons, magnolias, boxwood, roses, etc.,—which Canadian laws do not prevent Canadian florists from importing to stimulate their own commerce, as our United States laws do. These nursery stock items are mostly balled, i. e., with earth about the roots, and according to one of your recent letters, you advised that such stock cannot come through United States entry ports when earth is about the roots, even though they are bonded through to Canadian ports. You will see how your regulations work to the disadvantage of American trade, which will mean that such shipments will have to be forwarded via English and Canadian ports, thus driving commerce away from American ports. It will also be a disadvantage to the Canadian importers, as they will get slower service at an increased price. Before issuing our quotations, we suggest, as patriotic Americans, that you reconsider the matter. As these shipments are not unpacked in the United States, there is not the slightest danger of introducing insect pests or plant diseases in the United States through them, and we do not think it is your intention to drive commerce away from the United States without adequate reasons. In quoting to Canadian firms, we must either say that the shipments can come in bond through New York ports, as usual, or that we can book orders only when the importer makes arrangements for shipments to come via English and Canadian ports, so we trust you will give proper consideration to the matter and advise us your final decision as soon as possible. We are receiving almost daily requests from chambers of commerce and other commercial bodies to boost foreign trade, but so far as our business is concerned, your regulations block any efforts we could make.

McHUTCHISON & CO.

FEDERAL HORTICULTURAL BOARD.
NOVEMBER 17, 1919.

"McHutchison & Co.,
"New York,

"Gentlemen:—

"In replying to your letter of November 13, I would say that, although our regulations prohibiting the importation into the United States of plants with sand, soil and earth on their roots, even for transmission in bond, do work some disadvantage to American brokers, they are designed to act to a far greater advantage to the growers of plants in the United States. One of the most important sources of foreign insects, which have come into the United States, and have attacked our nursery crops, farm crops and wild and ornamental trees, has been the balls of earth about the roots of imported plants. Many insects spend their lives buried in the soil, and emerge from this soil to attack our plants. Even though the soil is tied up in sacks, and packed in boxes, these insects may emerge and fly away from a package, thus gaining entry into this country. It is, therefore, one of the very necessary safeguards of this immediate transportation in bond that the plants shall not have sand, soil or earth on their roots, and that bulbs shall not be packed in sand, soil or earth, except such sterilized soil as is provided for in Amendment 1 to Regulations Supplemental to Notice of Quarantine 37, a copy of which I enclose.

R. KENT BEATTIE,
Pathologist in Charge Foreign Plant Quarantines."

McHutchison & Co., in commenting on the board's ruling, say: "We are unable to grasp the reasoning of official or scientific minds—which ignore commerce or national interests. If these men were doctors, they would confine all human ills to their houses, for fear they might contract some disease if allowed to run loose—and common sense shows that we would then soon have no homes or sidewalks, or intercourse with others."

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Lily of the Valley.

It is often remarked that it is surprising more florists do not force lily of the valley for the holidays. While the forcing of this flower throughout the season had much better be left to those who make a specialty of it, for the demand during the winter is not at all steady, and for the smaller grower to attempt to grow his supply would be hazardous and probably result in so much waste that he would lose in the end. But well grown pots of lily of the valley at Christmas will always be disposed of and there is more or less demand for the cut blooms at that time, and a small amount can be grown and a good profit obtained. Well selected cold-storage pips are necessary—it would not pay to attempt to grow the freshly imported stock—and a place in the greenhouse where the pipes can be enclosed and the pots kept dark with a temperature of 80° maintained. It is not necessary to build an enclosure of wood, for bagging or old carpeting may be hung under a bench and shelves provided that will enclose a space large enough to grow what pots may be required. Three weeks with cold storage pips in this kind of an enclosure will bring it in on time, but the inexperienced grower had better take a little longer and if the flowers come too early, as soon as the bells form the pots can be moved into a cool house and they will be much improved; in fact, they should have a few days in the light to give the foliage proper color. When the pips are received the roots should be cut so that they can be placed in the shallow bulb pans, and then planted in clean sand, the tops of the pips being just even with the sand with a dozen pips in a four-inch pan or 25 in a six-inch pan. Water with warm water to settle the sand about the pips, and if they stand above the sand when it settles fill in to the top of the pips, and then place the pans in the warm enclosure. Keep the sand wet and always water at a temperature as warm as the enclosure. When the flowers begin to show, care should be taken not to wet them when watering. As soon as the first bells begin to open place them in a partly shady location in a little cooler temperature and in a day or two they can be placed in full sunlight in a house with a temperature of 60°. They will then harden up nicely and keep longer.

Begonia Rex.

With the advent of steady firing and a warm propagating bench the cuttings of Begonia Rex should be started at once if good plants are desired for spring and summer growing. These plants are very ornamental when well grown and the leaves can be used in much floral work. These plants are raised from either shoot or leaf-cuttings, but where many are propagated the latter method is generally employed. Well matured leaves that are healthy and vigorous are selected and two methods can be adopted. The leaf can be cut several times through the mid-rib and its branches and then placed on the propagating bed and the cuts pegged down to the sand. A wire in the shape of a hair pin will do this. Or the leaf may be cut into triangular pieces, with the rib as the apex, and these cuttings inserted in the sand as other cuttings are with the point down. Another method sometimes adopted is to cut the leaf in two parts lengthwise and the two halves are stood erect in the sand. The cutting bench should be shaded and if covered with glass and kept close the propagation will be more rapid and successful. The small leaves will shortly protrude from the sand and when the roots have attained a length of half an inch or more they can be potted in soil consisting of two parts loam, one part leaf-mold, one part well-rotted manure, and one part sand. They will require a warm temperature, and when watering be careful not to wet the foliage, especially where the sun shines upon them, or holes in the leaves will be the result. They should be shifted into larger pots as required and as the plants grow, coarser soil may be used in the potting. They make much handsomer plants when grown in shady locations rather than in the full sunlight.

Azaleas.

Keep the azaleas well spaced out as they begin to come into flower. The buds should be swelling rapidly and beginning to show color by early December. Never allow the plants to suffer for water, and where any are shipped out or carried into the residences they should be well watered before being taken out of the greenhouse. All plants that are sent away should be safely covered, and with azaleas it must be taken into consideration that they have been grown in a very warm temperature, and they chill easily. Plants that are forced as hard as these are to have them for the holidays, are damaged very quickly if they get chilled, even if they do not get frostbitten. We have known azalea plants to look all right when undone, but the blooms wilted and never came out. Six to eight thicknesses of newspaper with a heavy outside wrapping should always be used in doing up these plants and more if the weather is severe. If the plants are not far enough advanced to have them in for Christmas a little higher temperature will be required, for to have them in at that date is a necessity in order to get the best price. Watering or syringing with warm water will assist some, but we do not like to do this unless absolutely necessary to get them in on time. Plants that are too far advanced can be moved into a cooler house, which will greatly benefit them for house culture.

Cinerarias.

As fast as these plants require it they should be repotted and shifted to larger-sized pots. They are growing rapidly and should receive no check or they will become stunted. Keep them in a cool temperature, that they may be strong and sturdy, and above all things now do not crowd them, but space them out often; when the leaves begin to touch, go over the bench and space them out. These plants are beautiful in early spring if well grown, but if they become crowded and get drawn they are but poor specimens. When the larger plants begin to show their buds, if they are in as large pots as can be easily handled, a watering of liquid manure will help them finish their flowers. They are strong growers and great feeders and where the pots are full of roots will need a little stimulant. Constant watchfulness for aphis is required in growing these plants. Frequent fumigations will be necessary or standing on tobacco stems will keep the insects in check.

Poinsettias.

The plants are now forming their showy bracts and the worries of the grower are nearly at an end, for if they have come through to this time in good condition the disposal of the plants and flowers is all that remains to be done. Until the highly colored leaves have attained their full size, however, the same equal temperature should be maintained and then if found advisable a little drop in the temperature can be allowed, but it is far better to do this gradually and not subject the plants to too sudden a variation. The plants should now be all neatly tied to a stake, and, as before remarked, the neater the stake the better the appearance of the plant. It always has seemed strange to us that a grower will spend time and money in producing a crop and then spoil the appearance or the best sale of the plant by using a cheap, ill-looking auxiliary in attempting to save a penny. These plants can be disposed of at a good remunerative price if properly handled, and nice-looking painted stakes can be afforded. The plants grown for cut blooms should be kept tied erect that they may have straight stems. In the cutting and marketing of these blooms much dissappointment and failure has been experienced by many growers, the bracts wilting very soon after cutting, and where this occurs they never recover. Some growers place the stems on a red hot coal immediately after they are cut and thus seal the end. Others plunge the stems in hot water, and both are said successfully to prevent wilting. Another plan is to wrap the blooms in wet newspapers; similarly to the manner of handling cut adiantums, and then placing the stems in deep jars of water. It will be found necessary to adopt one of these or some other method to prevent the blooms from wilting or many will be lost.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Thanksgiving at Woodlawn Flower Shop.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop, Seattle, Wash., has received numerous favorable comments on its Thanksgiving window as shown in the illustration herewith. The two sides were covered with painted canvas in imitation of a brick wall with a single window on each side. In front of these were arranged small window boxes, pompons being featured in one and violets in the other. These openings appealed to the natural curiosity of passersby, who even in a hurry, almost invariably stopped to get a glimpse of what was within, being rewarded with a view of a typical thanksgiving table arranged with fine china, shining glassware and silver. The place of honor on the table, however, instead of being occupied by a turkey, was taken by a large basket of Ophelia roses, yellow pompons and cyclamens, while on the inside of each of the windows was a basket of yellow and pink chrysanthemums, respectively. As an added touch, a bright colored bird cage was suspended in one corner and the walls were hung with Parrish subjects in the deep blue tones that so splendidly fitted in with the colors of the flowers. A tall vase of fine carnations also occupied a vantage point in the arrangement. H. M.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

There is apt to be a lull the first two weeks in December, when the business appears to be nearly all in the various other branches of trade that feature Christmas goods. People want plants and flowers, but they somehow feel that there is lots of time; that what they would select now, would not keep until Christmas, or they have come to know by experience, that the majority of the trade, do not stock up until the last week, the early December assortment being very meagre, indeed. The dull period should be turned to good account and made the most of in preparatory work to relieve the stress of the rush hours of the final week. All kinds of fancy evergreen work, wreaths, baskets, etc., both for cemetery or house decoration, should now be made up and pushed to the limit. There will be just as much demand as ever. All stock of this character, made now, will, if properly cared for, keep in fine condition for Christmas, and every piece put away saves just that much time for some duty more important when the rush comes. Systematize and plan each day's work ahead; at least one-third more can be accomplished with system than without it. Sit down each night and go over what was accomplished that day, and see where it might have been improved upon.

Keep a close watch on the buying. Cut flowers are inching up each day, and any losses from unsold stock, counts very rapidly. At the same time, there should be a good showing of all the popular flowers, and samples of all kinds of foliage plants, the latter featured to advantage in the latest jardinieres and pedestals, fancy pot covers and plant stands of the Christmas stock. As much in all lines of the holiday goods as it is possible to show, should be displayed to the best advantage so as to come into competition with the many other things that are being considered.

A window decoraion of such stock, with a Christmas slogan, "Gifts that will grow," will put the stock in the running. A neatly printed, small card, extolling its virtues, should be in front of each item. Few retail florists, apparently, see the great benefit of window cards, as they scarcely ever use them, while in most other lines of retailing, they are considered a necessity. Take a walk through the shopping district of any of the large cities or towns of the country, and notice the great use that is made by nearly all the stores of window cards to attract attention to the goods on sale.

Plan the holiday decoration for the outside front of the store. From an advertising point, it is one of the essential things that is bound to bring in splendid returns. Go up and down and across the street, and prepare something that will catch the eye as soon as it comes in sight.

People are out now viewing the shops, and will stop and admire such a decoration and speak of it to others, so that they will also want to come and see it.

Do not fail to have the Chrismas circular out on time. It should tell the story of the store's wonderful stock and readiness to serve, briefly, but so forcefully that it goes on the list of shops certain to be visited.

A good everyday stock, is a few boutonieres in the window with a card, "For your buttonhole;" also, a few of the small colonial bouquets. These are made, for the most part, of scraps or otherwise unsalable flowers, and finished with a small bouquet paper that gives them a very salable appearance. Some of the trade always have these in stock, and find they add to their reputation, as well as the daily receipts.

Always have several well-made corsages on display in the box or window. They have an artistic look, and many are sold because they are ready to put right on.

Feature a few of the small vase or tumbler baskets, filled with Christmas greens, cones, red ruscus, holly berries, etc., and finished with a small bow of red ribbon. A gilt Merry Christmas at the ribbon, stamps it at once as a holiday gift. These are largely used as Christmas cards, quantities being sold by those making them a specialty.

Keep the Florists' Telegraph Delivery service to the front, as a means of sending floral gifts to any city in the land. It is the publicity that makes the business. Ten times the out-of-town trade would be done, were the public aware of the great efficiency of the organization. Hustle for this business. It is the orders you send out that bring, not only a clean profit of 20 per cent, but more business through the new customers secured.

Street Front of the Store.

To be situated on a busy thoroughfare, and not make the most of the passing crowds, means just one lost opportunity after another. Everyone who comes within view of the shop, is a possible customer, and whether they notice the store at all, or are so interested as to stop and take a look in the windows, depends entirely upon their attractive appearance.

Nearly everybody decorates at Christmas, no home being complete without its holly or other wreaths, and its bunch of holly or green wreathing. It is surely good business for people who deal in Christmas greens to use them liberally themselves, to show how advantageous they are in decorative effects. The main feature is, however, to make the store so noticeable that no one passing can fail to be attracted, and impressed with the fact that the holidays are rapidly approaching, and that this particular store is up to date, and making a strong bid for business.

There is a great variety of stock suitable for such work. The entire front of the buiding, from pavement to the roof cornice, should be taken advantage of to get the greatest display. The immediate store front can be framed in green. Boards cut to fit either side from the pavement to the cornice, and across underneath it, can be covered with pine or hemlock boughs, tied on rather thick and yet loose looking, and given color with bunches of red immortelles or wreaths and bells made of red chenille. The shelf over the cornice, can hold a row of medium-sized spruce trees, decorated with tinsel and toys that will stand the weather. If wired with miniature electric lights, these will make a very noticeable feature at night. "Merry Christmas," in large red chenille letters should be a prominent feature.

M. E. BISHOP, RHINEBECK, N. Y., IN OF HIS VIOLET HOUSES.

A pavement box of evergreens or boxwood makes a good finish across the front. Pyramid box or clipped evergreens are also good pavement ornaments, and salable as well.

Violet Supply Shortage Causes.

The violet is one flower whose young buds cannot stand a high temperature. Although 85 degrees will not seriously injure a bud that is developing into bloom, it will invariably blast the younger growths and the results will be apparent four or five weeks later. Three years ago the entire October crop in the Rhinebeck, N. Y., district was destroyed by a hot period in September. Last year, three very warm days the first week in December either destroyed or injured many of the December and Christmas blooms, and this year, the hot weather of October blasted 80 per cent of the November and Thanksgiving crop. During the past three weeks, it has been a wild scramble for violets at any price, football games bringing a heavy demand the first part of the period and then followed the Thanksgiving call. The wires have been kept hot with orders for the event and naturally the florists feel slighted because requirements have not been filled as usual, who do not realize what the loss of his crop means to the grower. In former years, when so many were producing this flower, a short crop was hardly noticeable in the market, but with only a few successful growers now in the business, the situation is much different. The violet industry, however, is coming back to its former status of 25 years ago, when they brought five and six cents per flower for Christmas and the grower had cause for complaint if he did not receive more than $1.50 per 100 during Lent. Lily Bulb Production in United States.

By David Griffiths, Agriculturist, bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Again the stocks of Easter lily are short, exceedingly high priced, and often, entirely absent from the florists' windows. With three successive shortages, two due to embargo, and one to a greater demand than the world's supply can meet, it would seem that the time has come for the American florists and growers to protect their interests against the periodic recurrence of such difficulties, by growing their own bulbs. Last year, an embargo prevented importation. This year, the supply, which is short, goes largely to other countries, and the American grower must put up with what is left.

In previous issues of this publication, others as well as ourselves, have shown that it is possible for the florist to produce his own bulbs of Easter lily from seed, in one year's time, with a minimum expense, under greenhouse conditions. It has also been shown that these stocks are hardy under proper treatment as far north as Washington, and can, consequently, be produced out-of-doors, can be grown on from year to year as a permanent out-of-door crop, and can be set out to "finish off" after the season of blossom has passed if the stems are not cut too short. In other words, those bulbs from which flowers with a minimum of stem have been cut, will recuperate perfectly with one year of out-of-door culture. Those cut at the surface of the pots, behave peculiarly, but we are confident that many of these can be saved. The proper method of handling them is now under investigation and will be discussed later.

This lily is not only the best greenhouse species of the genus, but it is likewise the best species for the open border and bed at least as far north as Washington, D. C. It has gone through both a very severe and a very mild winter in this climate, and two years ago it was overflowed with water from the Potomac river for 48 hours or more. We can, therefore, say with confidence that there is every reason why this lily should become as commonly grown in gardens this far north as the Tiger and the Madonna. When we get to growing our own bulbs, and storing them properly, the plants can be had in blossom all winter from the greenhouse, and all summer from out-of-door plantings.

In previous discussions, we and others have shown how seedlings can be produced in pots in one year's time ready for the florists' use. As our investigations progress, it develops that this lily is much more adaptable than we at first thought. It is not necessary to carry the seedlings in pots through their first flowering at all.

Last winter, we sowed seed in flats January 15, pricked 9,000 seedlings into thumb pots in March, and set the plants in the field, May 1. The first blossoms appeared in late July, and at the present time, (October 22), are continuing to blossom. Some of the plants have as many as eight flowers to the stem now. This is a remarkable showing for seedlings nine months of age, and grown out-of-doors five and one-half months of that time. These will make good forcing stock for next fall's use. Five per cent of them are now large enough to force.

When a batch of seedlings has once been brought to forcing size, which may be looked upon as occupying two years under out-of-door conditions, although it is said that it takes three years from bulblets in Japan, it is a very simple matter to increase one's stock. In two years' time from seed, or one year from bulblets, especially with a manure mulch, which it is advisable to give these bulbs, one can be certain of a natural reproduction of three to 10 stem bulblets, which is sufficient for any ordinary increase of stocks. We are able under our conditions and methods of handling, to count safely on three to four stem bulblets, five to seven centimeters in circumference. When well handled, these will produce good forcing bulbs, which will give three to five flowers after one year of out-of-door culture. In two years out-of-doors, they will make bulbs seven to nine inches in circumference, which is as large, if not larger, than it is profitable to force.

Commercial Chrysanthemum Culture.

Paper by Hans Jepsen, chrysanthemum specialist, read at the meeting of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, November 20.

The chrysanthemum (Greek: Golden Flower) includes many of our perennials, which we will exclude, and deal only with our two favorites, the large chrysanthemum and the pompon. The last 20 years have produced wonders in chrysanthemums, thanks to such men as Mr. Pockett, E. G. Hill, Chas. H. Totty, Elmer Smith, A. Herrington and one in our own locality, C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Chicago. Others, too, have accomplished great work, and are doing it yet, but the above named have put dollars in the pockets of all chrysanthemum growers, regardless of where they live.

Let us begin with the single stem chrysanthemum. Start propagating in February and March from plants cut back the previous fall, which have been growing in flats or on a bench during the winter, in a cool, airy house. Use only good, strong cuttings. I have found it very practical when making cuttings, to dip them into a nicotine solution with a little soap added. If the cuttings are not clean when placed in the sand, it means loss of cuttings, and stunted plants, which are sure to give dissatisfaction the entire season. A good supply of rooted cuttings, means a nice, even crop, all one size, with no "dead heads" on the bench. Keep plenty of stock plants, so that you can get as many cuttings into the sand at one time as you need of each variety. In some fast growing varieties, I take my cuttings when done flowering, and place them in sand at once. In that way I do not have to bother with stock plants. However, I do not believe this to be practical with a "slow grower."

I prefer two and one-half inch pots for my cuttings, instead of flats, as the plants are taken care of for a long time, and when the pots are filled with roots, liquid manure can easily be applied, which proves very beneficial to the young plant.

When Memorial day has passed, get ready to bench out your chrysanthemums. Here several ways are used; some growers plant eight inches apart, some six inches, others seven inches. The latter, in my opinion, is ideal for commercial purposes, as I get fine foliage and fine blooms when they are set this distance apart. At six inches, a strong grower has not much chance. When the young plants are established, stake them at once; when they fall over, they lose a lot of vitality, and, as a rule, these are the first to get red spider and black spot, two things very hard to conquer at the same time.

For spot on chrysanthemums, I believe copper ammonia solution the best; for spider, good water pressure. When aphis make their appearance, I believe fumigating to be the most efficient remedy, as the fumes reach down into the crown, besides, butterflies and millets are also killed by the fumes.

When spraying is used, I like to start about 2 p. m., and lower the vents to about three inches, as it helps to keep the odor in the house. In Denmark, a lot of fish oil soap with nicotine is used for spraying, and is very effective and harmless. Hydrocyanic acid gas is good, but very dangerous. I do not care to recommend it, but use it myself, when necessary.

In summer, I spray my chrysanthemums overhead three or four times daily. Insects cannot live where there is sufficient moisture in the air. We have passed through a dry, hot summer, and my chrysanthemums have had but one fumigating, and are perfectly clean. They have never been syringed, and have no spider. Spraying daily, early in the season, will do away with much labor when the chrysanthemums come into bud. When grasshoppers and leaf rollers make their appearance, I use arsenate of lead. I do not favor paris green—it burns too easily on a hot day. When August arrives, I apply a mulch of either cow or sheep manure; both are very good. Remember the chrysanthemum is a gross feeder. From August on, the plants are very active, and require a lot of food. In Europe, we used a lot of night-soil, and also guano, these two being very cheap years ago.

It takes a strong plant to produce a first-class flower; when the bud is about half-grown, they will need more feed, and when the petals commence to loosen, increase the temperature to 52° at night to give the flowers the right color and size. When matured, cool off a few days before cutting.

Some growers lose out when it comes to the time to take the bud. I have known men to say: "We will take the next bud; we are too busy now." In most cases, the crown bud is the best; in some the terminal bud is used. There is a big difference between the two. A crown bud is the third bud, and the end of a season's growth. A terminal bud is borne on a growth coming from beneath the crown bud when not disbudded. When crown buds are wanted, be on the job, and be very careful, lest in a few days the terminals get the best of it.

I believe you have all read articles about packing in our trade papers. It is brought up every year, and is very important. There are too many flowers coming to the market spoiled in packing. Putting too many in a box is poor policy. Chrysanthemums should be handled less than any other flower, but it seems, get the most abuse.

POMPONS.

Pompons are treated like the large chrysanthemums while young, with the exception, that one must keep on pinching to get as bushy a plant as possible by July. After that let them go, and they will do the rest. When spring comes, my pompons are planted out of doors until July, when I bring them in, and push them along the same as the large plants. Cultivate them freely, give them plenty of moisture overhead, and watch your pompons go ahead. I do not want to go into details about varieties. Each market has its favorites, and very few growers agree on any one variety.

Let us work towards the day when we can truthfully say that we have the chrysanthemum up in line with the rose. There is no reason why it cannot be done. A man devoting his time to growing chrysanthemums, should receive as much for his labor and his investment as a rose grower. But he does not—simply because he is not as careful as the rose grower.

Wind Damage at Detroit.

A violent and destructive windstorm swept over Detroit, Mich., November 29. A velocity of 84 miles per hour was reached at six o'clock that evening. Many persons were seriously injured, and five deaths are reported. The florists were victims of the storm's fury and serious loss of glass and stock is reported.

The smoke stack of Beard Bros., West Fort street, was blown down on the office and service shed, pinning Sidney Beard in the debris, and causing him probably fatal injuries. His spine was injured, skull fractured, and many ribs broken. He was taken to the hospital unconscious, and operated upon, and is in a very serious condition.

Joseph Streit's residence chimney blew down and about 250 lights of glass were broken in his greenhouses. Chas. Plumb had a small loss in broken glass, but his stock escaped. W. B. Browne's large plate glass window at 330 Woodward avenue was destroyed. G. H. Taepke's greenhouses in Elmwood suffered considerable damage. The chimney was blown down upon a section of the houses, which were quickly emptied of stock and a temporary chimney provided promptly that enabled them to operate a boiler.

Krumholz's houses on Connor's Creek road suffered by the loss of glass, but repairs were made before serious injury to the stock. John Breitmeyer's Sons' Mack avenue range suffered the total loss of one house and much broken glass in others. Thomas Browne, Greenfield, had the ends of all his houses broken in, and many ventilators blown off, but the stock suffered but little.

The Indian Village Greenhouses had a considerable loss at their Van Dyke place, and a greater loss by the blowing in of the ends of three rose houses at their Mt. Clemens plant. The Breitmeyer plant at this place also suffered by broken glass. John Warncke, Woodward avenue, lost about 400 lights of glass and none of the other places adjacent escaped without some loss. John Carey's big plate glass window of his Woodward avenue shop was destroyed.

Geraniums.

The geranium is a plant that stands in the same ratio to other bedding plants that the rose does to other cut flowers, and right now deserves some serious consideration on the part of the men who grow them.

There are two distinct classes of growers in the geranium business; the men who buy small plants or rooted cuttings, and grow them into marketable plants, and the men who produce these small plants or cuttings, which leaves two open questions that vitally affect the future of this as an industry. The first is, at what price should a three, four or five-inch (properly grown) geranium plant be sold to give the producer a fair profit and at the same time not curtail the sale and use of them as a popular plant? The second is, at what price should the small plants and the rooted cuttings be supplied to the grower to allow this end of the business a reasonable profit and not add too much to the cost of the finished plant?

As to the first question, and the small plant prices, I am not in a position to even form an opinion, but the rooted cuttings end of the business I have made somewhat of a study, and I know that in this section of Pennsylvania, with climatic conditions, as they have been for the past two months, the prices now received represent a loss for the months of October, November and December.

It is almost impossible to estimate costs under the present ever changing conditions, but in a general estimate of them, I find that a price of $20, $25 and $30 per 1,000 for rooted cuttings, would not be the means of putting the grower of them under excess profit taxation, and would not add materially to the selling of the finished product.

The different range in prices is estimated on production; the S. A. Nutt and Buchner class at $20 because they produce more cuttings per plant; the Poitevine type next at $25, and the Ricard and Viaud at $30, because they produce fewer cuttings and have a soft growth that gives heavier losses in the sand beds.

Last spring, the geranium business was up in the air. Some sold at old prices, which represented a loss; others doubled, and some few trebled the prices, which represented profiteering, and would eventually kill the business. It seems to me, that now is the time to have a little discussion in the trade papers, and endeavor to arrive at, not an absolutely uniform price, as that is bound to vary in different localities, and a service basis to the public.

Can we have your views on the matter?

ALBERT M. HERR.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Reports generally, as regards Thanksgiving day business, are to the effect that it was of record character. Never before was the volume so great. He would be dull indeed who would not give our publicity campaign credit for being a factor in the promotion of this condition. Our magazine advertising was timed just right, and millions of people saw the splendidly illustrated advertisements pertaining to Thanksgiving. The importance of flowers in the general observance of the day was emphasized in the text embodied in the advertisements — "Let flowers express your thankfulness for those friendships you hold dear. Send Thanksgiving day greetings of flowers. Chrysanthemums tokens of prosperity and peace, as this tokens of prosperity and peace as this year. In fact, all flowers seem to anticipate this season's wonderful message."

Flowers were not cheap—they were really much higher than usual at this season—yet the public bought, and liberally.

Just think of it! The 3,000,000 copies of the magazines containing our publicity matter were, it is safe to assume, read by over 10,000,000 of our people—all of the class we so much desire to reach. All who give thought to this publicity, are ready to admit that it is wonderful work we are doing, with equally wonderful success resulting—and their prayer is that we may be able to keep it up.

The approaching holiday season is cared for in the same way, but on a somewhat larger scale. By means of colored pages and display advertisements, the desirability of flowers and plants for Christmas presents is suggested. It is something of a new idea for the public. "Say Merry Xmas With Flowers" the advertisements read. "The Sweetest Gift of All." What a world of peace and good-will to all is expressed in that age-old phrase. Especially, when you say it with flowers. For every heart thrills to the message of radiant blossoms. And their exquisite fragrance lingers as memory's chief charm. No thought so tender, but that flowers will add to its beauty. No gift so rare but that flowers are more appropriate. Every advertisement carries a paragraph to remind readers that deliveries of flowers in distant cities and towns are easily made through the telegraphic delivery system in vogue among florists generally.

Now, is not work of this kind worthy of your support, Mr. Non-subscriber? Cannot you see that the more we accomplish the more you benefit? You may say to yourself, "Well, conditions are better, and the business would have come anyway." Then on sober reflection, you must come to the conclusion that you are merely "kidding" yourself. Our publicity is working for you, and to your great advantage. Then why should you not contribute to the cost? You are not asked to give more than it is known you can afford. If every florist in the country were to contribute but five dollars, we could place our business where it ought to be. That slogan of ours, "Say It With Flowers," is invaluable. What if we were obliged to stop its promulgation? We should have something to mourn over. Your support is most urgently needed now—at this very time. Help us to keep the work going—work from which you are receiving such benefit, but pay for which you are grossly neglecting. What will you do? We are waiting for your reply.

COAL SHORTAGE CURTAILS BUSINESS.

After a big Thanksgiving trade, local florists are devoting a good deal of thought to the coal shortage, which is the leading obstacle now confronting the trade. All of the retail establishments of the city are closing at 4 o'clock in order to conserve coal, and most of the flower stores are following the example of dealers in other lines.

The situation at growing establishments is more serious, at least for those who failed to act the part of good business men by laying in coal during the summer. One local florist said he had 300 tons of excellent coal on hand, and if this were generally true, the trade would have nothing to worry about. Unfortunately, several failed to buy coal ahead, believing that a break in price might come and for these the situation is grave. It is probable, however, that some of the foresighted ones will come to the rescue of their less fortunate brethren, thus preventing any serious damage to growing stocks in the event of a cold wave. The most serious result of the coal strike, therefore, probably will be some loss of business, due to curtailed activities in general. However, with the holidays coming on, the demand has been all that could be wished thus far. Stocks have shown a tendency to soar in price with the passing of Thanksgiving, carnations, for instance, being quoted at $1.75 a dozen, to the public.

NOTES.

Interest centers largely in the annual meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, to take place at the Claypool hotel, January 13. O. E. Steinkamp, secretary of the association, is arranging an unusually interesting programme, having had much experience along this line. Speculation is keen as to the identity of the next president of the society. There are those who favor the re-election of Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, while Herman Junge, of the Smith & Young Company, of Indianapolis, now vice president of the society, has many followers. The election will be one of the exciting features of the meeting.

The annual inventory of the Indianapolis park department showed the value of the city's nursery property to be $253,000. Of this amount, $198,000 is the estimated value of the greenhouses and nursery stock alone, the remainder covering the worth of tools and equipment.

The Sand Point Greenhouse has been incorporated at Fort Wayne, Ind., with a capitalization of $25,000. The directors are Charles H. Hoffman, Minnie M. Hoffman and Carl H. Schweppe.

The annual meeting of the state horticultural society will be held at the English hotel, this city, December 10-11, instead of at the state house as previously planned. M. E. C.

THANKSGIVING BUSINESS REGISTERS DROP.

Trade has been satisfactory. While the 1919 Thanksgiving demand did not measure up to that of former years, it is reported fair. Stock was plentiful and about balanced the call. Chrysanthemums were good sellers, the quality being excellent although the blooms were not large. Pompons were good property, and carnations met with considerable favor. The call for roses was not heavy. Violets moved fast. Pot plants sold well, the offerings including ferns, begonias, cyclamens and cherry trees. There has been a light demand for flower work during the past few weeks, but improvement seems at hand.

BEST THANKSGIVING TRADE ON RECORD.

In spite of dark, rainy weather, Thanksgiving turned out to be the largest in the history of the trade. It rained continuously during Tuesday and Wednesday, and while this hurt business to some extent, everyone seems more than satisfied. With the exception of carnations, stock was plentiful and of very good quality. Medium sized chrysanthemums and pompons were in exceptionally heavy supply, while the receipts of fancy chrysanthemums were small. What little stock the wholesale houses had left, cleaned up nicely later in the week as there were several large funerals Friday and Saturday. If we can judge Christmas by the Thanksgiving business, it will surely be a hummer, and from the preparations the retail stores, both large and small, are making, they will be in good shape to handle it. American Beauties are still in short supply, and what few are coming in, bring good prices. The supply of tea roses is also small, with not near enough to supply the demand. Columbia is the favorite, and from all appearances, it will be a long time before another rose will be found to supplant it. Orchids are scarce and high, as also holds good of lily of the valley. The carnation supply is not nearly large enough to fill the demand, and the quality does not seem to be as good as it should be. Paper white narcissi are now a factor but move slowly, Stevia is more plentiful, and meets with ready sale. Sweet peas are improving every day, and the growers report that they will have a large crop of this popular corsage flower for Christmas. Calendulas and snapdragons are arriving in small quantity. With the exception of a few late varieties, the chrysanthemum season is about over in this locality, and in the abscence of lilies, there is nothing to take their place. Some of the growers will continue cutting pompons for about two weeks yet. The call for southern smilax has far exceeded anything we have had in late years, as all merchants seem to be using it in their Christmas decorations. M.

Baltimore.

SUPPLY OF GOOD STOCK LIMITED.

Market conditions at this time call to mind the shortage of last October, with the passing of all outdoor stock and the end of the chrysanthemum season. For Thanksgiving day it was a matter of dividing up the receipts to take care of the needs of the many. With the best carnations priced at eight cents, good roses 15 and 18 cents and chrysanthemums at $6 per dozen, and few of them, the customer, unless in urgent need of flowers, usually goes without them. During the past two weeks, however, flowers have evidently been needed, as nothing has been thrown away. Lily of the valley is now much in demand for weddings, and in spite of its rather poor quality, finds buyers.

Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, Pa., has accepted an invitation to be present at the January meeting of the florist club, the second Monday in the month. Be sure to keep this date open.

Robert Halliday is now quite a busy man getting started in his new field as local representative of the Henry F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, Pa.

J. Goudy, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., passed through this city last week, on the last leg of a very successful business trip. G., Jr.

THANKSGIVING BUSINESS SHOWS GAIN.

Notwithstanding weather that made shopping almost impossible on the day previous, Thanksgiving business in this city was much better than last year, cold, clear weather on the day helping belated shoppers, the supply of flowers being equal to all requirements at prices that were satisfactory. Pompons were offered at $3 to $6, while the large blooms of chrysanthemums brought $6 to $24 per dozen. Some fine Maude Dean were sold at the last named figure. Carnations returned $2 and $3. Roses were plentiful, but did not move any too freely. There was little call for American Beauty. Orchids, lily of the valley, sweet peas and violets were good sellers. Several weddings during the week also livened up the trade. Wholesale prices were very high, and from these figures, we will doubtless have to be prepared for almost anything at Christmas—pickled stock and trash not excepted.

NOTES.

W. J. Palmer & Son's Delaware avenue store had a very clever Thanksgiving window appropriate for the occasion. Felton's Shop of Flowers, and W. H. Grever also made fine displays.

S. A. Anderson had two very elaborate wedding decorations during the week, chrysanthemums being used in profusion. BISON.

EXCELLENT DEMAND AT GOOD PRICES.

Thanksgiving business was fully up to expectations with prices better than last year. Chrysanthemums took the lead and the quality was better than last season. Cold weather which arrived Thanksgiving morning, with flurries of snow, made deliveries hard. The coal situation in this section is very serious, as in this city, Council Bluffs and Lincoln no coal can be obtained without an order from the fuel administrator and schools, churches, theaters and other places of public gatherings are closed. Office buildings are open from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. and the same hours are prescribed for retail stores. Street railways are taking off one-third of their cars, with weather 20 above zero, in sight and 12 inches of snow. From the florists' point of view things look serious, and the remark is often heard: "I hope I will not freeze out until after Christmas." Many of the growers are bringing in their coal supply from day to day. Grand Island is more fortunate, for like most of the smaller western cities they receive their supply from Wyoming. Lincoln is in bad shape and St. Joseph, Mo., is very low according to latest reports. J. J. H.

The Late Henry J. G. Hilmers.

Henry J. G. Hilmers, well-known retail florist of Chicago, died at his home 1121 East Forty-seventh street, Saturday morning, November 29, after two days' illness, age 65 years. He had suffered from hardening of the arteries. Mr. Hilmers was born in Germany and worked for a time in England. He started in the florist business at Chicago in 1888 at 3911 Cottage Grove avenue and was up to the time of his death operating the store doing business as the Kenwood Floral Co., 1117 East Forty-seventh street. Funeral services were held the following Monday morning at 10 o'clock, after which the body was taken to Milwaukee, Wis., for burial. He is survived by two children, Daphne, 22 years old, of New York, and Paul, 26 years old, of Milwaukee, Wis. The funeral was private, but a number of friends in the trade attended the services, including Frank Oechslin, Carl Cropp, F. W. Martin and Robert Miller.

W. J. COWEE advises, December 1, of an advance in wired tooth pick prices.

NITRATE prices, according to advices of December 3, from Valparaiso, Chili, have been advanced to 10 shillings and 6 pence per ton.

BORROWERS of money are finding bank discount rates from one-fourth to one-half of one per cent higher now, six per cent prevailing.

Personal.

Colonel W. C. Rogers, son-in-law of the late E. V. Hallock, of Queens, N. Y., has retired from the regular army, where he served 31 years after graduating from West Point. Colonel Rogers saw service in the Philippines, Alaska, Cuba and in France. With his wife and five children, his home will be at Highland Park, Ill.

WINTER is upon us and the coal digger has not gone into his burrow.

GOLD FISH, baby turtles and shell fish may be mailed by parcel post.

THE growers who took our frequent adivce and put in their coal supply are reaping the benefit now.

NEW YORK.—Chrysanthemum prices received by growers here in 1919 will average higher than in 1918.

REPORTS from various sections of the country indicate that florists, by early closing and in other ways, have been prompt to join with other trades in the conservation of fuel.

WHETHER the stock market slump forecasts a reverse of the commodity price trend, a slowing down of sales and profits, is something which the winter months may serve to answer.

"Say It With Flowers."

George Asmus, president of the Chicago Retail Florists' Association, says through error the name of the advertiser as the Broadway Music Corp, was given, when it should have been the Art Music, Inc., in Albert Von Tilzer's and Neville Fleeson's new song hit, "Say It With Flowers," announcement which appeared last week.

Embargo on Flowers to Detroit, Mich.

The Chicago wholesalers have not been able to ship flowers, plants and supplies to Detroit, Mich., by express, since November 28. Officials of the Thanksgiving trade, with sales showing a great increase over 1918. The shipping trade called for a large supply of American Railway Express Co. said, December 3, the order was issued to refuse packages for delivery there, owing to congestion on that end, and did not know when the embargo would be lifted. Some dealers are making shipments by parcel post, while others are reaching their customers by expressing the stock to Toledo, O., and other points, and forwarding it from there to Detroit by auto.

Thanksgiving Trade.

Thanksgiving trade, from reports received from nearly every section of the United States, was very satisfactory, both in volume of sales and prices received, which in many instances showed an increase of from 25 to 33 per cent over those of last year. The chrysanthemum supply was generous, large blooms moving freely, and pompons held a strong place in public favor as in former years. In other offerings, including roses, carnations, orchids, sweet peas and violets, quality stock met with good sales. Violets appear to be the short item, but in many cases a generous supply of other corsage flowers met the emergency. In some cities, sales greatly exceeded those of any previous year, and in others, with few exceptions, the volume of business was substantially greater than for the Thanksgiving period of 1918.

Mayor F. R. Pierson.

The illustrated supplement of the New York World, November 30, carried a page of portraits of six mayors of as many well known cities and towns of this state showing them as engaged in their regular vocations, meaning in what they follow for a living, as but few men have ever made any money by being mayor. Among them is F. R. Pierson, mayor of Tarrytown, and it is a first class likeness, which is appropriate as F. R. is a first class man. He is shown standing in one of his rose houses, his coat off and a big bunch of roses in his hands. There are people who think that a gentleman never takes his coat off unless to take a bath or go to bed, but we call attention to this picture as evidence to the contrary. Beneath the picture is this inscription: "In Tarrytown, the mayor is F. R. Pierson, a florist, who grows 10,000,000 roses every year."

Bulb Planting Date.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly inform me regarding the time until which tulips and hyacinths can be planted for successful forcing?

Illinois. B.W.

It is getting late for the planting of these bulbs, but if they are still plump, and have not been laying around so that they have become dried up to any degree, then they are still in good shape for late forcing. But they should be planted without any further delay, and this can be done while the weather remains open, so that the pots or flats can be placed outdoors in frames and covered up against severe freezing, but they should be attended to at once so that the bulbs have a chance to make root growth before very severe weather sets in.

If you have a suitable bulb cellar, where they can be placed and held just above the freezing point, until they have become rooted, so much the better, but they need to be well rooted before being transferred to the greenhouse for forcing.

Express Packing Rules Amended.

Preparations are being made to put new express packing rules into effect, December 10, by the United States railroad administration, which recently approved the new requirements. While they will not affect the heavy movement of perishable farm products by express, as such traffic usually travels in crates and barrels, the new packing requirements will be of much interest and importance to farmers who have other commodities to send to market by express, or goods to return to city merchants. The rules will not permit the use of paper wrapping for packages over 25 pounds, nor of ordinary paper boxes, wrapped or unwrapped, when the weight of the contents is over that limit. For shipments over 25 pounds, wooden containers, or fibreboard, pulpboard or corrugated strawboard containers of specified test strengths, are required.

This standardization of express rules will place the express service on the same basis as freight, so far as the character of the cartons used is concerned. In fact, the new express rules were modelled on those of the railroads and require the same kind of containers, except that in the express service, a wider latitude is permitted in the size of the carton used. The new regulations are embodied in Supplement No. 5, to Express Classification No. 26, copies of which may be secured at any express office.

BOUNTIFUL SUPPLY MOVES TO ADVANTAGE.

The mild autumn weather and absence of killing frosts to any extent, have left a bounteous supply of flowers for the public to draw upon. All the shops are attired in their gayest decorations, and everything points to a great rush of business. The rose market advanced sharply during the week, and from this time forward, we may expect stiff prices. The first American Beauty of the season came in this week, and were bought up eagerly. The stock may be said to be very good. Of course, the demand is far greater than the supply, and it will, in all probability, remain so, as not so many of this rose are grown as formerly. Russell is now excellent, and is in steady demand at all times. Ophelia and Columbia are also in excellent shape. Mrs. Shawyer, Hadley, Milady and Mrs. Ward are also popular. Cecile Brunner is not plentiful, but there is a nice cut of Irish Elegance. The shipping demand for roses is reported to be very heavy. The mild weather has left the market with a fine supply of chrysanthemums. Jennie Nonin and White Chieftain are the best whites offered. Helen Frick is by all means the best pink on the market, and its beautiful color makes it very popular. In yellow, we have Bonnaffon and Col. Appleton, the last named variety being particularly good. There are still a few good bronze sorts left. The pompons are meeting with ready sale, and all colors are to be had. Singles of extra good quality are also noted in the stores. Cattleyas are going to be quite scarce, as very few are arriving. Gardenias are just about equal to the demand. Carnations of good quality are hard to get. The greater part of the arrivals are lacking in length of stem. There is quite a large supply of poor stock coming in, which is mostly used for funeral work. Good reds will be scarce and high. There is a large supply of violets, with no change in prices. We noted some extra fine Marie Louise this week. They were of excellent quality and sold readily. There is a nice supply of snapdragon arriving. It is bringing high prices and moves quickly. Only a limited number of sweet peas are coming in. When good, they command good figures. Cut ericas are seen at most of the stores, and are being largely used for decorative work. Cut cyclamens meet with ready sale. The one surprise of the week is the splendid assortment of flowering plants on display. Begonias in variety may be had, and they are all first class stock. We have never had better stock at this date. Some elegant azaleas are also coming in. They are full of bloom and perfect stock. They have proved very popular, and sell quickly. The cyclamen supply is very good. Some elegant specimens are also noted. All colors are available, and no doubt the large supply will close out quickly. There is a large cut of poinsettias arriving from the southern part of the state. There is a heavy supply of the California red berry, a large part of it is being peddled on the street. English holly can be obtained in limited quanties. It is all of local origin, none of the northern stock having arrived as yet.

NOTES.

Frank R. Mills, of Palo Alto, experienced a heavy trade last week, the occasion being the annual football game between Stanford and California. The demand for yellow and red flowers was greater than he was able to supply. He cleaned up his chrysanthemums at good prices. His carnations are now excellent, and he is shipping his entire cut. He has a nice supply of cattleyas, which he uses in his local trade.

Domoto Bros., of Oakland, are supplying the trade with a grand lot of azaleas. For this date, they are of the finest quality, and are selling quicker than they can supply them. They report the demand for all kinds of stock to be ahead of former years. Their rose houses are producing a heavy crop of high grade stock. Their shipping trade is calling for a large part of the firm's product.

Dr. O. F. Cook, of Washington, D. C., is a visitor this week, having just returned from the Orient. He is connected with the United States bureau of plant introduction, and paid a visit to the government introduction station at Chico during the week. This station now ranks as one of the largest of its kind in the world. He will return to Washington shortly.

F. Litchenberg, of Los Angeles, is spending some time in this city, arranging for his Christmas supply of flowering plants. He believes in being on the job early to make his selections. In company of P. Vincent Matraia, of the Art Floral Company, they spent a couple of days quail hunting, and both were fortunate enough to secure the limit.

J. A. Axell has been greatly rushed, trying to take care of the many demands made upon him for holiday stock. He is shipping large quantities of roses and chrysanthemums. The demand for the latter, he reports, has been extra heavy this season, and owing to the absence of heavy frosts, he has had a fine supply to draw on.

H. J. Scherer, manager of the California Nursery Company, at Niles, says there is a very heavy demand for all kinds of stock, and many items are exhausted for the season. Roses have been in great demand. He says they still have a good assortment, but from present indications they, too, will soon be exhausted.

The opennig of Techeau Tavern, on Powell street, during the week, called for one of the most elaborate floral displays seen here in some time. This was shared by several of our leading stores. The Art Floral Company furnished several hundred baskets of chrysanthemums, composed of pompons and singles.

Hayashi Bros. are sending some finely grown cyclamens to this market. Their greenhouses are full of holiday stock, their specialty being cyclamens. A great part of this stock is already sold for delivery for the Christmas trade. Their specimens are especially fine.

Manager Avensino, of the E. W. McLellan Co., on Bush street, shipped a great quantity of violets and roses to the north for Thanksgiving. He could have sold much more if the stock was obtainable, but had to supply his customers here with their requirements.

The MacRorie-McLaren Company arranged a fine Thanksgiving window, featuring English holly in great profusion and chrysanthemums. They are handling a large supply of azaleas and cyclamens for the holidays.

Podesta & Baldocchi have been very busy, according to Victor Podesta. They have been called upon to do a lot of decorative work this week, which required a great deal of high grade stock.

Emil Serveau, on Fillmore street, has his store in fine shape. He is showing a fine lot of flowering plants, and has an excellent variety of chrysanthemums to offer.

BUSINESS IS SATISFACTORY.

In spite of fears of a possible shortage of stock for Thanksgiving, reports indicate the stores well taken care of. Japanese growers, who have been supplying much of the chrysanthemum stock for the local market, found they would not be able to move all of their cuts through the wholesale channels, due to heavy shipments from California, and on the Monday previous opened stalls in the public markets and offered their products to retail buyers at the same prices they had been charging the dealers, which has resulted in some unfavorable comment by the trade. Early poinsettias arrived last week, but as the public hardly seems ready for them as yet they failed to attract much notice as far as sales were concerned. Ophelia roses have been especially plentiful, although some growers seem to be holding back their cuts for a heavier Christmas supply. In carnations, there is an inclination toward oversupply, but this can be traced to poor quality of the offerings more than to excessive receipts. California stock has been unusually plentiful, especially for the expected Thanksgiving rush. Some very fine pot cyclamens, primulas, begonias and pompons are now seen in a number of the shops and are meeting with favor. There is a good call for ferns of the larger varieties, which keeps the supply well cleaned up, but the smaller types are plentiful. Sweet peas from local ranges are arriving in small quantities and swainsona is in sufficient supply for all needs. The increasing number of formal dinners have brought a greater demand for decorations, weddings are more numerous and funeral work is heavier. Some examples of notably fine window decorations have been seen of late and have shown that this class of advertising is most effective, calling for favorable comment from the general public as well as merchants in other lines of trade. Violets have a heavy street sale and the orchid cut augmented by regular shipments from California is hardly equal to requirements. Lily of the valley is very scarce.

NOTES.

Palermo F. Resaia, of Rosaia Bros., reports a splendid early cut of sweet peas and swainsona, the latter being used in bridal bouquets to help meet the continued shortage of lily of the valley, with several hundred bunches gathered daily, and a fair sized cut of orchids. White and red bouvardias, gardenias and cyclamens have been the best sellers, and one of the finest stocks imaginable of the last named flower is on display. The initial shipment of poinsettias for the season was offered here this week.

The Hollywood Gardens report a splendid cut of white and golden Chadwick chrysanthemums, pompons, cyclamens, primulas and Ophelia roses, and some very choice cattelyas from its own greenhouse. Superintendent Myers has cut back the greater share of the Ophelia roses so as to be sure of a plentiful supply for Christmas.

C. W. Clark, of the Holly Flower Company, handled the decorations for the annual dinner of the Seattle Window Decorators' Association at the Pig'n Whistle during the past week, and will also have the work for their annual show, which is to be held December 5.

Anna F. Burns, of the Burns Floral Company, reports a better demand for the large chrysanthemums this year than ever before.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS."

Below is an exact reproduction of an article from the Florist Exchange, of its report of the reception and ball, held in Detroit in August, 1919, and the singing of the original Flower song.

S. A. F. REUNION AND BALL

Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson sends us the following graphic description of the scene of one of the outstanding social features of the S. A. F. Convention, which will probably awake pleasant recollections in the minds of those who were present, and somewhat envious regrets, perhaps, in the minds of those who were not so fortunate:

"The decorations of the Hotel Statler ballroom, in which the President's reception was held on Tuesday evening, were superb. The best decorators of Detroit had been on the job and had done 'some work' as the writer can testify. What the Detroit florists call Loretta was fastened together in the form of long vines like Southern Smilax, that were festooned over the doorways and panels. Wall baskets filled with Gladioli hung in the center of the panels and tall standards, 8 feet high, surmounted by Cybotium ferns and Gladioli, were placed about the room.

"But the focus for all eyes was the arrangement opposite the entrance. This showed the rising sun of Publicity casting its rays upon the emblem of the S. A. F. and O. H. A bank of ferns and Dracaenas filled in the background to the floor line.

"The big feature of the evening, in which all the 1500 guests took part, was the singing of "Say It With Flowers"—a song of which the words were written by Mrs. F. H. Traendly and Mrs. C. Schenck and the music by Ed. Nelson and Harry Pease. This was rendered with a vigor and enthusiasm which suggested that the song will be accepted as THE song of the Society. Congratulations and thanks are due the ladies who are responsible for it."

There are a number of colorable imitations of this song on the market. This is the Original Flower Song.

BUSINESS UP TO EXPECTATIONS.

The first white Thanksgiving in 15 years, is the report for the past holiday. While the snow just about gave all outdoors a thin coat, still, with moderate temperature, it was an ideal day. Advance orders were numerous, and with a good demand to the last minute, business proved to be up to expectations. The supply, with the exception of sweet peas, violets and white roses was adequate, and prices reasonable. Both in roses and good large chrysanthemums, the demand equalled the receipts. There were many bunch chrysanthemums, but they were freely used. No orders for carnations had to be cut and the same can be said of stevia. Paper Whites were not scarce. While there have been many weddings since September 1, still the pace in this line of work was rushing for the Thanksgiving time. Where white roses were rather plentiful a fortnight ago, the demand last week simply kept them out of sight. After November 23, quite a few chrysanthemums came in, which should have been cut sooner, and will not net the grower the cost of production. Will some of the growers never learn.

NOTES.

Novmber 25, Baumgarten (Inc.) held a formal opening of their new store at 93 Wisconsin street, which now ranks as the most spacious and up-to-date flower store in Milwaukee. It is finished all in white, with an exceptionally high ceiling and good depth which gives it a most inviting appearance. The display was elaborate and greatly admired by the large attendance. It is all the result of hard work and good service, for well do we remember their first little store at Third and State streets some 20 or more years ago.

We greatly regret to announce the serious illness of Mrs. Seaman, of Anderton & Seaman, who has been ill with pneumonia since November 22. While she had not been in good health since the opening of their new store in the Wells building, still she stuck to the job to the aforenamed date. Late reports state she is getting along nicely.

Since Nov. 24, we have had all the varieties of weather possible, namely, rain, snow, a 50-mile an hour gale and a drop in temperature to 15 above zero. And with the winter before us, the local press announced curtailment of soft coal to all non-essentials, interesting at this stage of the game.

Archie McDonald, who has charge of the Gimbel Bros. cut flower department, was in Chicago, December 1, on a business trip.

While Hugo Locker & Sons are not cutting great quantities of sweet peas, the quality is A1.

Julius Neubeck is again in the employ of the M. A. McKenney Co.

Visitors: Mr. Schaefer representing Scruggs, Vander Vort & Barney, St. Louis, Mo.; E. H. Mazey, Minneapolis, Minn.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHORTAGE NOTICEABLE.

Thanksgiving business was very satisfactory, with the exception of a shortage in good chrysanthemums. In the small and medium grades there was a fairly good supply, which cleaned up well. Pompons were very plentiful, but Wednesday evening saw the market rather bare. Roses of all kinds moved especially well, but the supply was limited. Rain, which had continued most of the week, did not seem to interfere with the buying, all retailers reporting good sales. Carnations, sweet peas, violets and other corsage flowers were in excellent demand, but the supply was none too generous. Stevia and Paper White narcissus were fairly plentiful.

THANKSGIVING TRADE VERY GOOD.

The Thanksgiving trade was very good this year with the total sales showing a great increase over those of 1918 and in many instances a substantial gain over 1917. The shipping trade was brisk and the city demand was surprisingly good. American Beauty roses cleaned up freely at high prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier moved quickly and the supply of Sunburst, Ophelia, Richmond, Milady, Ward, Shawyer, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Champ Weiland, Montrose and all the other varieties grown for this market cleaned up early at very satisfactory prices considering the general market conditions. Chrysanthemums were in heavy demand, especially fancy stock and there was no great surplus to speak of when the rush was over. Pompons were in exceedingly heavy supply and were sold in large lots in some instances at bargain prices. Judging from the heavy shipments of pompons to this market there are too many being grown, as the returns for the past week will show. Carnations moved quickly at the advertied quotations. Violets were exingly scarce as were gardenias, orchids and lily of the valley. Sweet peas were in brisk demand at high prices. Calendulas, snapdragons, daisies, narcissi, stevia and other miscellaneous stock was disposed of. There was a heavy call for wedding and funeral flowers all Thanksgiving week and it is a question whether there was ever so much stock in general handled for Thanksgiving as last week. The demand since Thanksgiving has been very good and the out-of-town florists have all evidently enjoyed a heavy trade, judging from the reports received. The cold weather has cut down the supply considerably but at that there is plenty of stock to expected before the week is over. Some of the growers are well fixed for coal for the winter but others have only a few weeks' supply on hand. Some of them have had coal seized while in transit and if this practice continues will be up against it in a short time. The retailers are all busy with their preparations for Christmas and in nearly every instance report an increase in sales last month over November of last year.

HOLLY AND GREEN.

The supply of bouquet green in bulk is the scarcest known here for many years. While the demand for this stock the past two years has been limited, yet the supply provided for Christmas trade has dropped to less than 20 per cent of the former normal output. The latest wholesale price this week is $20 per 100 pounds.

Flooded river bottoms in holly sections is delaying early carload shipments. Holly shippers are nervous over possibility of freight embargo for lack of coal.

EMBARGO ON FLOWERS TO DETROIT, MICH.

The local wholesalers have not been able to ship flowers, plants and supplies to Detroit, Mich., by express, since November 28. Officials of the American Railway Express Co. said, December 3, the order was issued to refuse packages for delivery there, owing to congestion on that end, and did not know when the embargo would be lifted. Some dealers are making shipments by parcel post, while others are reaching their customers by expressing the stock to Toledo, O., and other points, and forwarding it from there to Detroit by auto.

THE FUEL SITUATION.

The fuel situation is becoming serious and a few of the larger growers in this vicinity have only enough coal on hand to carry them through a few weeks more. Some of the growers who are running low on their supply have had several cars confiscated while in transit the past week and are alarmed over the situation. The growers are on the non-essential list and will have to depend upon the local fuel administration for assistance the same as during the war, when each case was treated individually. The question was brought up for discussion at the florists' club meeting, held at the Randolph Hotel, December 4.

SAY IT WITH FLOWERS.

The "Say It With Flowers" week at the Majestic theatre was a noteworthy success. Frances Kennedy rendered Albert Von Tilzer's song in her best style. Before the close of the week she had the audience singing it vigorously, and the boys in the gallery whistling it. The wholesalers, retailers, and allied trades, gave their hearty support and cooperation to the movement. The wholesalers and others contributed stock freely, and the Retail Florists' Association spared no effort to make their work in the decoration of the theatre, and the distribution of flowers, in every way worthy of the occasion. The liberal use of flowers and plants in the theatre during the week made a very favorable impression on the public. Next week, the song is scheduled to be sung in grand style at the Marigold Gardens by a chorus of girls in flower costumes.

NOTES.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago will meet Thursday afternoon, December 11, at 2 o'clock at the Hotel Randolph, Wells and Randolph streets. The special subject for discussion will be "Publicity," among the principal speakers being President J. F. Ammann of the Society of American Florists. Several vases of new roses to be introduced in 1920 will be on display.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, had the best Thanksgiving trade on record. November 28, he filled a funeral order for $1,000, consisting of 18 designs, which were delivered to the Dighton funeral at Monticello. Philip Stamatakos accompanied the designs there.

Wietor Bros. are planting young rose stock this week, the work now being well under way. They are through cutting pompons, but are still on deck with a late crop of chrysanthemums. Their Thanksgiving trade was exceptionally good, and much better than last year.

One of the south side florists delivered two bouquets to a grocer at Thanksgiving, amounting to $1.50 each. The grocer weighed them, and when he found a difference of three ounces in one, he kicked like a steer because he thought he was overcharged.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. enjoyed the largest Thanksgiving business in the history of the firm. This house is now in splendid crop with roses, and John Poehlmann takes great pleasure in calling attention to their high quality.

Allie Zech says that Zech & Mann's Thanksgiving sales were much better than last year and that the total business for the month of November also shows a substantial increase over the same period of 1918.

John Michelsen was well pleased with the E. C. Amling Co.'s Thanksgiving business, which was the best ever. This firm's sales show an increase of $1,000 for last month, over November of 1918.

The Ernst Wienhoeber Co. reports that its Thanksgiving business was exceptionally brisk. The sales for the month of November were ahead of the same period of last year.

Al. Barber, and his right-hand assistant, W. H. Everett, of Cleveland, O., were here buying stock for Christmas this week. They report a splendid Thanksgiving business.

Kennicott Bros. Co.'s sales for Thanksgiving show an increase of 40 per cent over 1918, and 10 per cent over 1917. This year's sales establish a new record.

Andrew Chronis was so well pleased with the Alpha Floral Co.'s Thanksgiving sales that he bought a new Hudson touring car besides a new delivery truck.

Ronsley's sales for Thanksgiving were heavy, and a couple of extra trips to the market were necessary to secure enough stock to fill all the late orders.

Lewis & Rocca did much more business than they expected for Thanksgiving, and cleaned up all the available stock they had to offer.

Chairman Asmus, of the S. A. F. publicity finance committee, will address the St. Louis Florists' Club, December 11.

J. E. Pollworth, secretary and manager of Kennicott Bros. Co., made a business trip to Milwaukee, Wis., this week.

Paul Klingsporn reports that the Chicago Flower Growers' Association's 1919 Thanksgiving sales were the largest ever.

Joe Marks of A. Henderson & Co., returned from an out-of-town trip in time to eat Thanksgiving dinner at home.

William Duntemann is hunting ducks in Arkansas.

A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s Thanksgiving sales were 35 per cent better than those of 1918.

The Retail Florists' Association will meet at the Hotel Morrison, next Tuesday evening, December 9, at 8 o'clock. A paper by Herman Knoble, Cleveland, O., will be read, and a representative of the Milwaukee Florists' Club has been invited to be present to speak on the assessment plan of advertising now being conducted in the Wisconsin city. It is possible that J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, will also be present, which means an interesting meeting. Every retailer in this vicinity should be present.

Peter Reinberg had a splendid Thanksgiving business, with the sales running ahead of last year. The shipping trade was good, according to Herbert Hansen, who said that although orders may not have been as numerous as previously, they were much larger.

The grim reaper visited the trade again last week, when Henry J. G. Hilmers, 1117 East Forty-seventh street, was called to the great beyond, November 29, an account of which appears in our obituary column this week.

The Central Floral Co. had a big Thanksgiving trade at its North State street store. This firm always makes a fine showing of stock and the public has become accustomed to its beautiful displays.

At Erne & Co.'s store the Thanksgiving trade was brisk and exceeded all expectations. Roses and chrysanthemums moved fast, as did carnations, which were in short supply.

Percy Jones, Inc., had a fine Thanksgiving trade, with a heavy out-of-town call for stock. Manager H. Van Gelder is on the job again after being on the sick list for a few days.

J. C. Craig, 120 South Wabash avenue, reports a good Thanksgiving business, with the sales greater than last year. This firm started in business in 1874.

Bassett & Washburn's Thanksgiving trade was exceptionally brisk this year and resulted in a grand cleanup of stock. Roses are in large supply here this week.

The Fleischman Floral Co. enjoyed a brisk Thanksgiving trade, with the demand running strong for fancy stock, especially roses and chrysanthemums.

George Wienhoeber cleaned up completely for Thanksgiving in both cut flowers and plants, with the sales for the week much greater than last year.

The John Kruchten Co. moved a large quantity of stock for Thanksgiving, especially Bonnaffon chrysanthemums, which were a leader.

The George Wittbold Co. had a splendid Thanksgiving trade which kept the force on the jump at all times filling orders.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are handling a large quantity of red winter berries, which are good property this winter.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., is back from a business trip to Detroit, Mich.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. had a brisk stock and the local demand was surprisingly good.

E. C. Pruner and wife will celebrate their tenth wedding anniversary, December 8.

Allie Zech will celebrate his thirty-fifth birthday, December 9.

Vaughan's Seed Store moved its first carload of holly this week.

Visitors: Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Julius Dilloff, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York; Paul M. Palez, Little Rock, Ark.; Richard Haentze Fond Du Lac, Wis

THANKSGIVING SALES SHOW INCREASE.

Thanksgiving day was a record breaker for volume of business enjoyed by every retailer, and this not because of high prices, but an increased call for flowers. Chrysanthemums easily led in popularity, and good prices were maintained. Roses, though fine in quality and comparatively moderate in price, could not compete with the popular "Autumn Queen." They were of fine quality, and the offerings covered the full range of seasonable sorts. All the stock of the different varieties of flowers was sold out completely, and some reports of a shortage with some dealers were heard. Some cherries and cyclamens were added to the pot plants of chrysanthemums and many ferns were sold also.

NOTES.

There has been an embargo here against express shipments from all points, since November 28, and there is no relief in sight. Some buyers are evading the embargo by having shipments made to adjacent points.

The Michigan Horticultural Society is holding its annual meeting at the Hotel Statler, this week. J. F. S.

HEAVY CHRYSANTHEMUM MOVEMENT.

The Thanksgiving trade in white and yellow chrysanthemums surprised the hopes of the most sanguine in the business and proved a decided money gatherer. Business opened early and continued until the last bloom had been disposed of, even pompons moving at a premium. The chrysanthemum season now comes to its end with but a few white and some scattering flowers that did not arrive on time for the big day the present offerings. They will not be missed as carnations and roses are already in line to take their place, the flowers of fine quality and the supply increasing daily. M. C. D.

Evansville, Ind.

George Blackman, of the Wm. Blackman Floral Co., says his firm's Thanksgiving trade was the best in the history of the concern. Mrs. Blackman, who has been on the sick list, is improving slowly.

Col. J. D. Carmody's many friends will be pleased to learn that his health has greatly improved. He is now in his eighty-third year.

THANKSGIVING BUSINESS WENT BIG.

Stock the first part of the past week was in only fair supply, especially roses, which seem to be off crop at this time. On Thanksgiving morning the market broke on chrysanthemums and pompons, and quantities could be had at practically buyers' figures. The early part of the week there seemed to be a great demand for white roses and lily of the valley for weddings. The quality of the rose cut has been very good, the best being Russell and Premier. Carnations are coming in better. Sweet peas and violets continue scarce, owing to the dark weather. The cuts of chrysanthemums has been fine, the leader being some very good Chadwick, which everybody seemed to have. Bonnaffon did not have as big a call as usual. Pompons sold very well, and asserted their supremacy as the Thanksgiving table flowers. Other miscellaneous stock has its usual call. Greens are in good supply, but were a bit short for the Thanksgiving demand. In regard to the Thanksgiving business, we can only say that it went big. The greatest demand, after table flowers, seemed to be large chrysanthemums, to be worn. Chadwick, of course, was the leader for this purpose. A canvass of the various retail florists indicates that everybody did a big business; in fact, larger than last year when there was an unusual demand for funeral flowers during the influenza. Plants did not sell quite as well as last year, possibly caused by the abundance of cut flowers. All in all, the Thanksgiving day business was all that could be expected, and everybody seems to be well satisfied.

day. It is a monster, and should save him considerable time by loading it to capacity. It received a thorough test on Thanksgiving, carrying as much on one trip as his old truck did in two to three trips. On the side panels he has the national slogan, "Say It With Flowers," painted, which can be seen for blocks.

With the wholesale houses practically closed on Sunday, a number of the dealers go out every Sunday with their guns to follow the quail and rabbit. So far we have seen rabbits and squirrel but no quail. How about it, Al. Lon, Frank, Will—and others?

The florists bowling league did not meet the past week, but will continue with their schedule next Wednesday. The Carnations and Roses are now tied for first place, with the Sweet Peas and Daisies following in order.

Quite a few of the retailers have been busy the past week with decorations for various large social functions. These have used up quite a bit of stock and have shown a nice profit to the decorators.

RAIN DULLS THANKSGIVING DEMAND.

Thanksgiving trade was not up to standard in the downtown section due to heavy rains, but business in the residential districts is reported as showing a gain over last year. Pompons were the leaders in popularity and Bonaffon and Chieftain chrysanthemums also sold well. Violets were scarce and roses were also in short supply. Plant sales were very good with a good demand for cherry trees, cyclamens, peppers, begonias and Otaheite oranges.

NOTES.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, has a fine looking lot of stock coming along for the Christmas trade. Among the best offerings are cyclamens, principally Salmon Pink, cherry trees and orange and lemon trees.

Frank Edgar supplied the market with 500 dozen Bonaffon chrysanthemums for the Thanksgiving trade in addition to cyclamens, begonias and chrysanthemum plants.

Everett Cummings, of Woburn, is cutting a fine strain of Spencer sweet peas which are easily disposed of at $4 per 100.

B. A. Snyder & Co. reported a heavy Thanksgiving demand with numerous out-of-town orders.

THANKSGIVING TRADE SURPASSES 1918.

Thanksgiving business was better than last year, with chrysanthemums holding their usual lead in popularity with good sales for carnations, roses, violets, orchids and pompons, the latter great favorites. Yellow chrysanthemums were especially scarce but there was no shortage in other colors. The quality of the stock in general was fine. Stevia, mignonette and Paper Whites were good property.

THANKSGIVING SALES BETTER THAN 1918.

The feature of the week's business was, of course, the great Thanksgiving day demand which used up an enormous quantity of chrysanthemums. It was thought for some time previous, that there would not be enough to go around, but there were plenty, and then some, as anyone willing to pay the price had his order filled in any of the popular varieties. Prices, while a shade higher than ever before, were not at all exorbitant, when one considers the advance in cost of production. The highest grade Nonin, Seidewitz and the Chadwicks sold from $5 to $6 per dozen. A few Mistletoe brought $7.50. A very good grade of Bonnaffon and other varieties were moved in large quantities at $4.00 per dozen. Smaller stock sold from $2 to $3. Pompons were plentiful, selling at 50 cents to $1.00 per bunch, according to size, quality and variety. Garza, and others of the singles, were in good demand, as was the little golden yellow button, Baby. Roses were very scarce, all the growers seeming to be more or less off crop. One had to be a good buyer to get anything worth carrying away in the rose line. Prices advanced from 25 to 33 per cent. Carnations were more plentiful, but were in demand, and had to be portioned out, as were the roses. Mrs. Ward appears to be the only bright pink, and there is not half enough. Many a bunch of Matchles sis taken to get the pink. Prices moved up to $8.00 for the best stock. Snapdragons sold well at $2.00 per dozen sprays. Sweet peas were a factor, there being a larger stock than ever before for Thanksgiving. The price was $2.00 to $3.00. Violets were very short of the demand. Cattleyas that were at all salable, brought $1.50 each. Corsages of orchids that were sold at $5 to $7.50, now bring $12 to $15, and as one of the retailers put it, "not much in them at that." Take it all in all, the trade for this holiday was most satisfactory, the volume being greater than last season, and at prices approximately one-third higher.

RESUME OF CHRYSANTHEMUM SEASON.

Now that the chrysanthemums are practically cut out, a resume of the leaders, or most popular varieties, of the season will be found interesting. The first early in September, is still Golden Glow; several weeks later follows Smith's Advance. If well done, both of these varieties find ready sale. Early Snow, Pacific Supreme and Tint of Gold come in with a number of lesser stars in Early October, followed by Maud Dean, Bonnaffon and Razer, one of the best midseason whites. Bonnaffon still holds its own as the best commercial variety. The Chadwicks, white and yellow; Seidewitz, and Jennie Nonin are the best late sorts. Mistletoe is a good late fancy, while Eaton white and yellow, are still done well by many. Marigold is also a good midseason yellow. Western Beauty, Golden Climax, and Souvenir d'Or are choice pompons, with Garza and Buckingham as fine singles. There are many other varieties grown, but the above will be found the leading market favorites.

CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the florists' club December 2, preceded by a dinner at which more than 50 were seated, was most interesting. There was an exhibition of choice Christmas plants, cut chrysanthemums and roses. The feature of the evening was an address by President-elect A. L. Miller, of the Society of American Florists, which was full of optimism as to the great work the organization would accomplish with the co-operation of its members. Frank Traendly, Eugene Dailledouze and E. Asmus, of New York, were welcome visitors. There was an interesting discussion of the fuel question, the conclusion being that oil is the coming factor.

NOTES.

Mrs. A. Esslinger, a sister of Mrs. Swisher, of 52nd and Girard avenue, has opened a flower shop at 29th and Allegheny avenue. This is a good residential district, where flowers should be in demand.

The new store of Frank M. Ross on 52nd street is now, after many delays, about completed. The business here is growing rapidly. He is much pleased with the increasing trade received through his connection with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, particularly in the orders secured in his three stores.

C. U. Liggit has just returned from a successful southern trip, where he received large orders for Christmas plants. The retail trade in Washington, he found especially optimistic regarding the holiday business.

A. M. Campbell had a splendid cut of Souvenir d'Or pompons for Thanksgiving. The roses at his Hatboro greenhouses are coming strong. Premier and Double White Killarneys are exceptionally fine.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., handled exceptionally fine Nonin, Chadwick and Mistletoe chrysanthemums at Thanksgiving. Nothing finer has been seen in this market.

James Heacock is spending the week in the wilds of Pike county, after bears, deer and other wild game.

BIG THANKSGIVING SUPPLY LOWERS PRICES.

As a preliminary, and to put our readers in the proper frame of mind to receive a detailed account of the Thanksgiving business, it is well to repeat what has often been said before, "that you cannot please everybody." There is more or less dissatisfaction in all lines of business. Even from Philadelphia, where the people are supposed to be the most contented in the world, there comes a complaint from a man who makes wooden legs, that business is "falling off," and that what customers he has, are mighty hard ot please. Having thus created an "atmosphere," as the parlor uplifters express it, we will now try to make clear the extent of the Thanksgiving business. The growers and the wholesale dealers had no reason to complain. If some of them were disappointed with results, they cannot lay the blame on anybody else. As has sometimes been mentioned in these columns, previous to other holidays, it is not easy to forecast the quantity of stock that will reach this market for a holiday, as it is drawn from such a wide area. It appeared to be the general impression that for this occasion stock would be scarce, which was an error. On November 25, prices in the wholesale district, particularly on roses, were put up to high figures. Buying was active on that day, as with the foregoing impression abroad, the buyers for the large stores, as a matter of course, did not want to be left in the lurch. Therefore, special American Beauty roses wholesaled at the rate of $1 to $1.50 each, Scott Key, $1; Hadley, $1; Columbia, 40 cents; Premier, 40 to 50 cents, and other roses in proportion, considering quality. Cattleya offerings wholesaled at from $1 to $2.50 each; gardenias, $1 each; possibly a few went higher. Carnation Mrs. Ward was $10 to $12 per 100. Other varieties, $6 to $8. There was but little change in the figures on chrysanthemums from our quotations of November 29, except that $4 to $6 was asked for almost any kind of a sizeable flower. And it was chrysanthemums, so to speak, that broke the back of the camel. There was an abundance of them, and in pompons and singles, there was a surplus, though many were sold, for even at 50 to 75 cents a bunch, they were about the cheapest stock on the market. November 26 was, in weather, a most disagreeable day, with rain, fog and humidity. The buyers for the retail stores, not seeing much of a rush of customers, became very cautious, and it appeared that there was less buying than on the previous day. At any rate, by night there were ice boxes in the wholesale district that were full of both chrysanthemums and carnations. There was but little buying on the morning of Thanksgiving, and what was sold, went at greatly reduced prices. Paper White narcissus wholesaled at 50 and 60 cents per bunch. Sweet peas, $3 to $4 per 100. Violets of good quality sold at $3 per 100. The home demand for violets was not heavy. Some retail stores did not handle them at all, but there was a considerable demand from other cities. The prospect of the army and navy football game at the polo grounds, November 29, tended to boost and keep up the price of violets. The various stocks not considered as leading factors, such as stevia, calendulas, etc., seemed to move well. All the small stores had to have something, and the high prices on leading stocks was to the advantage of the minors, though they were not very cheap. There was a light demand for plants. Although roses had been supposed to be rather scarce, they did not clean up in all the stores, the longer stems being hardest to move at the finish. It is a pity to have to state it, but if this market cannot be supplied with a better quality of carnations than have been arriving lately, the carnation as a factor, will soon be doomed. Some good ones—and a great stock of poor ones that would hardly keep over night—came in for Thanksgiving. In the retail stores there was the usual complaints about high prices, greater if possible, from the numerous small stores, because the prices were prohibitive to many of their customers. But even from the leading stores, there came many complaints. One prominent retailer stated, November 25, that it was hard to sell his stock at a profit over what he had paid for it. It goes without saying that in a large city like this one, there are people who have the money, and who will pay the price for an occasion on which they have set their hearts. What they will do relating to flowers in the intervening time between Thanksgiving and Christmas, is a question that cannot here and now be decided.

December 1—There is necessarily considerable buying this morning, and as the supply is not heavy, prices in general are firm. The best of the chrysanthemums have been cut, and of what are now on the market. Many look old. Violets took a slump on Thanksgiving, and have not recovered. Retailers report a light call for this flower. Dull business may be expected from now till Christmas, but prices are likely to remain firm, particularly on roses and carnations.

THERE'S a growing tendency toward a closer contact—toward a better understanding of man with man in every line of endeavor today, two essentials which make for a sound and lasting prosperity. I want to be on such terms with every florist; I solicit new business on such a basis.

NOTES.

Kottmiller, of 426 Madison avenue, is winning fresh laurels as a decorator. On November 24, he decorated at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, the occasion being the debut of Miss Millicent Rogers, daughter of Henry H. and Mrs. Rogers. The ball throughout was an elaborate affair, 1,200 guests being present. The floral decorations were on an elaborate scale. A combination of many yellow and lavender chrysanthemums, with the foliage of oak trees, created a particularly pleasing effect. The balconies of the foyer, leading to the large ball room, were decorated with Woodwardia ferns, sent here from California for the event. The walls of the ball room were lined with oak trees, chrysanthemums and other plants. In the centre of the orchestra stage there was a basket six feet high, filled with Gold Mine chrysanthemums. The small tables in the dining room, where a continuous supper was served from 11:30 p. m., were decorated with Farleyense fern and orchids.

J. G. Gammage, secretary-treasurer of J. Gammage & Sons, Ltd., of London, Ontario, was in this city, November 25, making calls on the trade. He had visited Philadelphia, and extended his trip to Boston. To the representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, he stated that the florist business of Ontario was prosperous. In speaking of the quality of stock, he highly praised the new rose, Frank W. Dunlop. Its blooms, its length of stem, and above all, its fine keeping qualities, in his opinion, put it in the front rank of pink roses.

Fred A. Theiler, a popular salesman for John Young & Co., and Miss Grace Marion Liddell, were married, November 19, in St. Michael's R. C. church. In beauty, the bride is said to be a double of Pearl White, the celebrated motion-picture actress. Friends remembered the happy couple with a handsome silver service.

Philip Einsmann, a son of the late Philip Einsmann, for many years a grower of Astoria, L. I., has opened a retail store at 761 Forest avenue, in the Ridgewood section of Brooklyn.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE French beet root crop is under the average.

THE price of bags at Chicago, December 3, was $60.

A WHOLESALE dealer, recently, had to buy two carloads of canned peas to get one carload of sugar.

A. L. ROGERS, of Rogers Bros., in Chicago, will make a business and pleasure California trip in January.

A CARLOAD of Chinese narcissus bulbs out of San Francisco in early November, is reported lost, strayed or stolen.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. C. Massie, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are: $2.75 for reds and yellows, and $3.25 for whites, for spot shipment.

HOWARD M. EARL, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., sailed for Europe on the S. S. Adriatic, November 29.

THOMAS M. HUNTER, the well known Chicago specialist in field seeds, has joined the forces of the Continental Seed Co.

NEW YORK—The S. S. Roman, of the Southern France line, bound for Marseilles, was disabled at sea, November 21, and returned to this port.

BOSTON, MASS.—Creditors' petition has been filed in bankruptcy court against the Ames Plow Co. Liabilities are estimated at about $150,000.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — Trading in flaxseed futures began here, November 21, with linseed oil and paint manufacturers everywhere interested.

CINCINNATI, O.—H. B. McCullough, of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., recently in auto accident, was not seriously hurt and is gradually improving.

GARDEN Pea Planting on contract for seed growing has begun in the Sacramento valley, California. December is the month for this work. Crops mature in April and are followed by garden beans for seed.

BILLS pending to reduce the rate of local first-class letter postage to one cent an ounce, have been approved by Postmaster-General Burleson, who says the total postal revenue would not be curtailed more than $14,000,000 thereby.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened steady and December and January unchanged, December 1, with cash offered at $30.60. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.45, December, $5.67½, March, $5.87½, and April $5.87½.

ALL private property of German citizens, seized by the United States, would revert to German ownership, if Congress declares the war with Germany at an end, according to international law experts of the government. The German government in the Versailles treaty renounced right to this property.

Michigan Bean Crop.

There is still some bean threshing in progress, with a total crop outlook of 4,000,000 bushels, an average yield of 12.7 bushels per acre. While the quality is good, the pick was comparatively small.

Onion Seed in California.

A reliable California seed grower states that the acreage of onion seed planted in that state for 1920 will be 20 per cent of the 1919 acreage. Many growers are selling their bulbs, and he predicts that onion seed will be worth $1.50 to $2.00 per pound in November, 1920.

Grass Seed.

Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, December 3, were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 to $11.25 per 100 pounds; $12.10 for March, $12.90 sellers; $12.10 bid for year. Red clover, $40 to $48 per 100 pounds.

At Paris, Ky., December 2, new crop Kentucky blue grass was quoted in carlots, 19-pound test, at $24.65; 17-pound test, $23.20; less than carlots, 35 cents per 100 pounds higher.

Alfalfa new crop seed is reported in strong hands, and the spring price likely to be firm and higher.

Holly and Green.

The supply of bouquet green in bulk is the scarcest known in Chicago for many years. While the demand for this stock the past two years has been limited, yet the supply provided for Christmas trade has dropped to less than 20 per cent of the former normal output. The latest wholesale price this week is $20 per 100 pounds.

Flooded river bottoms in holly sections is delaying early carload shipments. Holly shippers are nervous over possibility of freight embargo for lack of coal.

Future of Japanese Bulbs.

A reliable exporter of Japanese bulbs in Japan writes November 1: "During the war years most Japanese bulb growers gave up their crops entirely and stopped their cultivation because of lack of buyers throughout the world. For this reason during the coming two or three years Japanese lily bulbs will be short, especially of the sizes 8-inch, 9-inch and 10-inch, as lily bulbs in Japan cannot be grown on to these sizes without about three years' cultivation, and no bulb exporter in Japan will be able to offer large quantities at reasonable prices. It would appear now that next season's quotations for 7-9 bulbs will be in advance of former years."

Dutch Bulbs.

A well-informed Dutch grower and exporter writes regarding bulb conditions as follows: "At the close of the season, hyacinths are cleared out and no more good sound bulbs to be had. Many late orders could not be filled with good quality stock. In narcissi, there was a shortage along the whole line, especially Emperor, Empress, Sir Watkin and Von Sion. Tulips were more plentiful than first expected, and the demand, therefore, for this season was satisfied. Stocks of other sorts of bulbs allowed to be exported are rather small considering that the demand is increasing, and it may be expected that there will be no excess of high quality bulbs next year."

Freesia Bulbs.

A California freesia grower claims that the best size of freesia bulbs for florists' work is the grade between ½ and ⅝ inch. He claims the bulbs grading ¾ inch and up are the result of two seasons' growth and are very apt to be in some way crippled in the inside. This result is often shown in the brown discoloration of the outer skin of the bulbs. He further states that freesias are often injured by storing in piles when harvested. Such injury is most plainly indicated by the brown color of the bulbs. Healthy, quickly grown stocks, show plump bulbs with clear white skins. All bulbs should be examined very carefully on receipt.

Congressional Seed Distribution.

During the fiscal year 1919, there were distributed on congressional and miscellaneous requests, 8,072,791 packages of vegetable seed, and 883,136 packages of flower seed, or a total of 8,955,927 packages, each containing five packets of different kinds of seed. There were also distributed 12,122 packages of lawn-grass seed, and 10,368 packages of imported narcissus and tulip bulbs. The seeds and bulbs were purchased on competitive bids, as heretofore. Each lot of seed purchased was thoroughly tested for purity and viability before acceptance by the bureau of plant industry, and tests of each lot of seed were conducted on the trial grounds of the department of agriculture to determine its trueness to type.

New York Seed Trade.

Dennis Kenna, formerly with J. M. Thorburn & Co., is now with Roman J. Irwin. Mr. Irwin, recently operated upon, is about again.

Sweet Potato Plants.

Many persons do big things in rather unusual vocations and professions, and Claude Wagner, a farmer near Bentonville, Ark., comes under that heading with a most odd business venture. As a result of the progressive spirit and ability to produce in large numbers, northwest Arkansas and southwest Missouri should not suffer a dearth of sweet potato plants.

Wagner is arranging to plant 1,000 bushels of sweet potatoes for next season, which, it is estimated, will produce 9,000,000 plants. They will be ready for the market April 20. He also raises tomato plants and already has contracts for furnishing 1,000,000 of these plants to gardeners and others early next spring.

The tomato seeds are planted in hotbeds in February, transplanted to cold frames in March and are ready for the trade in April. Wagner has been at this business for a number of years and the magnitude to which his trade has grown shows with what success he has met. He started by producing a small number of plants in connection with his regular farm work but soon found that the special work paid him the best and he is devoting all of his time to it.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period ending December 1, indicate strong, fairly active conditions, with volume of shipments decreasing to winter level. Haulings have been light in potato producing sections owing to weather conditions, decreasing supplies and a tendency to hold for higher prices. Numerous gains of from five to 15 cents were reported. Consuming markets strengthened moderately with advances in several of the large centers. No. 1 sacked northern white stock advanced five cents, closing at $2.75-$2.80 per 100 pounds f. o. b. Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota shipping points and were steady at $2.85-$3.11 in the middle-west. Minnesota Red River Ohios advanced 10 cents, reaching $3 and were fairly steady in jobbing markets at $3.20-3.40. Colorado and Idaho sacked round whites remained firm. New York sacked round whites recovered five cents to a range of $2.72-$2.77. Maine Green Mountains closed at $2.75-$2.90 in Boston. Cabbage supplies appear to be for the most part out of the growers' hands and prices still tend upward in several markets. New York Danish Seed strengthened to $55-$60 per ton f. o. b. consuming markets. Wisconsin Holland seed was firm at $50-$70. Onion consuming markets showed an upward trend with a wide general range of $4.75-$6 for sacked eastern yellow stock and $5-$6 for middlewestern yellow and California yellow and brown. Red onions ranged $4.55-$5.55 in south central markets. Shipments decreased sharply. Sweet potatoes were fairly steady with Virginia yellow stock at $4.50-$5 per barrel. Maryland yellows sold for $4-$4.25 in Baltimore. New Jersey yellows were steady at $1.75-$2 per hamper.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

CHEHALIS, WASH.—Orders placed with nurserymen here indicate greatly increased acreage devoted to strawberry culture the coming season. Bookings already made cover several million plants of the Marshall variety alone.

H. M.

Tree of Honor for Prince of Wales.

A "Prince of Wales" tree will hereafter stand in Central park, New York, close to those planted by the king of the Belgians and Gen. Pershing. The royal visitor halted at the park on his way to Oyster Bay and with his own hand shoveled in the earth around the tree which will serve as a memorial of his visit to America.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

ORNAMENTAL SEEDLINGS MAY NOT ENTER.

The admission of fruit stocks and certain rose stocks under Regulation No. 3 of Quarantine 37 has led to inquiries as to the possibilities of admission of similar stocks of ornamentals. These inquiries have reference chiefly to seedlings, i. e., lining out stock to be imported and either grown to salable sizes and then sold, or to be used as stocks for budding or grafting, the plants thus produced to be sold. Such importations are entirely distinct from plants imported to furnish buds, scions or other needs of plant propagation and not for the sale of the plants actually imported, provision for the entry of which when not available in the United States has already been made in Regulation 14.

Importers are advised that the importation of ornamental seedlings for the purposes indicated is not permitted under Quarantine 37. It is expected that such ornamentals will be ultimately produced in this country to meet essential needs and provision is made in the quarantine for the entry of seeds of such plants both for direct production and to suply necessary stocks for grafting, etc. This may mean in some instances a delay of a few years before adequate supplies will be made available but in the meantime the essential needs of this country can be met by the substitution of other and American-grown plants. It should be noted that finished fruit trees, namely, grafted or budded plants, and finished rose plants are placed in the same class with ornamentals and are not permitted entry.

One exception may be made to this ruling, namely, if it should become apparent that any ornamental, for which there may be a substantial horticultural need, can not be successfully grown in this country from seed, the board is willing to give special consideration to such cases, and if such condition is demonstrated to the satisfaction of the board and confirmed after experimentation or otherwise by the experts of this department, entry under Regulation 14 of a reasonable quantity of such seedling plants may be authorized.

The provisions for the importation of new varieties and propagating stock not available in this country for reproduction purposes are detailed in a circular letter of this Board (HB-105) and and in the form of application for special permit under Regulation 14 (HB-107). These documents will be supplied on request.

C. L. MARLATT,
Chairman of Board.

Tennessee State Nurserymen's Ass'n.

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The Tennessee State Nurserymen's Association will hold its annual convention in the assembly room of the Hotel Hermitage, Nashville, December 10, an attractive programme having been arranged. Among the topics in the hands of capable speakers are the following: "The Value of Publicity in the Form of Advertising to Nurserymen," by A. L. Niven, Bormingham, Ala.; "What Members of the American Association of Nurserymen Are Doing and Planning to Do," by John Watson, executive secretary, Princeton, N. CHRISTMAS NUMBER

A FIELD OF TRUE TYPE RUBRUM LILIES
Grown Especially for the American Bulb Co.

A few cases of Hardy Lilies planted now will come in very handy, for they will bloom at the time when flowers are scarce. These flowers last longer than any others you can use in a floral piece. They improve the character of the floral design when used with other flowers.

We offer for immediate shipment the following varieties: Rubrnm, Album, Magnificum and Auratum. Sizes: 7-9, 8-9, 9-10, 9-11, 10-11 and 11-12.

The quality of our Lily Bulbs cannot be surpassed. We positively assure you that these bulbs have been properly cultivated to produce the best bulbs for florists' forcing. This type of Lily in Japan grows wild, and during the war very few were cultivated for export purposes; so when our Mr. Miller arrived in Japan, and knowing of the scarcity, he immediately purchased fields that had been cultivated.

To produce a good Hardy Lily, it is necessary to gather ths bulbs in the mountains, where they grow wild, and then cultivate them for a season or two in open land. This method improves the quality and has been long practiced by the Japanese growers. Very few are available this season, so we can expect many uncultivated Lily Bulbs. In trusting us with your order, you assure yourself of the best cultivated bulbs from the Orient.

The Remainder.

When need has taken
All the sour, forsaken Fields that lazy people left
To chicory and asters;
When new, cunning masters,
Peasants, brown, unresting, deft,
Find the little places,
The passed-by spaces,
Where, like treasure, gentians grew,
And secret riches
Hidden in old ditches—
Cardinal flowers—flamed for a few:
When earth is combed, made use of,
Crumbs counted, juice of Desert winds pressed out, nothing shirked,
Nothing wasted, weedy—
Then, the treasure-greedy,
Knowing that their lode is worked,
Will look to this unfailing,
Glowing, piercing, paling
Sky, grape-green behind wry trees;
Or where, to west heading,
A moon-canoe, slow-threading
Floes of cloud, cleaves dusk-blue seas!
—New York Sun.

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS.

The Christmas Spirit.

The greatest holiday of the year is Christmas, when the gift spirit is alive everywhere throughout this broad land. The bright and cheery greeting, "Merry Christmas," appears then to carry more good will than any other couplet in the vocabulary.

While the florists have almost a monopoly of the gift trade at Easter, it is not observed by the whole people, as are the Christmas holidays, when the spirit of giving is entered into heartily by all classes, rich and poor alike, who plan for months their lists of presents for relatives and friends.

The volume of business, and how to stock up so that the supply shall not exceed the demand, is a matter that requires careful planning and buying. Last year's records, with a close scrutiny of the business since that time, enables the retailer to add this percentage of increase to his holiday stocks, to which, if he confines himself, he will be on the safe side and have little if anything left to carry over.

A disturbing element is prices; stock of all kinds costs much more than last year. A number of plants are fully 100 per cent above figures paid for the same size and varieties of last season. The florist trade, however, is not alone in this respect. Every other line, food, clothing, furniture, fuel; in fact, everything, including labor, has advanced in the same ratio until the dollar now appears, from the amount it will buy, to be only worth 50 cents. Overhead charges, or operating expenses, have almost, if not entirely, doubled. With these hard facts before him, the retailer must base his prices accordingly. The evolution has been going on all the year, each month seeing a gradual rise, which, however, has been passed on to the public and paid willingly.

From the advance buying of all classes of Christmas stock by the stores, both from growers and supply dealers, retailers generally are seen to be most optimistic. Their purchases are large; in many cases, more than ever before. All the florists' supply houses report a record breaking business, which at the increased prices, found to be imperative, is remarkable.

Growers report much the same situation. One prominent New York plantsman could have sold three times the amount of stock, and his houses are crowded to the limit.

Christmas greens of all kinds are in great demand. There is, fortunately, a good supply of fine holly, very well berried, which is always a great favorite with the public.

There is no question but the florist who makes a strong bid for business this Christmas, will get all he can do. There is undoubtedly more money now in the hands of the middle classes than ever before, and as the newly rich are proverbial good spenders, it will circulate this year in a way that will break all records.

Christmas Plant Baskets.

There is no more effective or artistic floral creation than the well arranged basket of foliage and flowering plants. With correct color combination in basket, flowers, and the decorative ribbon, the result is one of the best sellers in the shop. The leading stores work up and carry a large stock of these baskets and hampers, making them, next to cut flowers, their specialty. They are popular with the public as gifts, because of their lasting qualities and general decorative effect.

Of the receptacles for filling, there is a great assortment; baskets of all shapes and colors, some with high handles, others with low. They are round or oval, square and rectangular, with handles at each end. Hampers are also used to advantage as all plants show to the front. The various forms are fitted with metal liners so they can be watered without danger of drip.

When baskets for plants were first introduced, they were all filled at the stores, which made a great deal of work for the best employes when their time was much needed in other departments. This resulted in much night work, that by modern methods, has been greatly relieved. It is now the best practice to have the entire stock sent to a grower, where the inside containers are filled the week before the holiday. The stock, in a genial atmosphere, has then time to recover, and is sent in the store as required. The various basket forms should be numbered in duplicate, with their tins, and sent to the greenhouse, so that the filling shall conform with the different shapes. While all fancy foliage looks very well, those containing plants in flower as well, are nearly always the first selections. All kinds of berried or fruited plants are also as effective as the blooming stock.

First selections in foliage plants, best suited for the purpose, are small or medium sized kentias, arecas, cocos, bird's nest ferns, marantas, Dracænas Sanderiana and terminalis, crotons, pandanus, Smithii, Verona, elegantissima, polypodium and the glory fern. Cyclamens, poinsettias, heather, begonias and primulas are the best flowering plants, while the berried or fruited stock consists of Otaheite oranges, peppers, solanums and ardisias. There are a number of other plants that are available for this work. Scottii and Teddy, Jr., ferns can be worked in but they are for the most part, too coarse. Adiantum cuneatum or Croweanum work up well, if the plants are large, cut the ball in several sections from the bottom up to near the top, then pull apart, and the result will be nice bunches of green that are very useful to fill between other plants.

Hampers, and rectangular baskets, with handles at the ends, look very well when filled with all cyclamens and adiantum. A. cuneatum is also a fine edging for low pans of poinsettias. For all choice basket arrangements, the glory fern is the best green. It gives a finish and elegance that is not possible with any other plant. Some of the table ferns, such as Pteris argyrea. P. alba lineata and Mayii, with their white striped fronds, are useful to relieve the dark greens of other foliage.

Much depends on what is called the millinery or ribbon finish. There is no question but a well made bow and streamers of ribbon of the right color, puts many a basket or plant arrangement in the front gift line, that without this artistic touch, would fall to the rear. Bird and figure sticks are also selling points, as are natural or artificial birds' nests. A basket, that for some reason, seems to stand, may be put in the running with a Porto Rico mat of the proper color. This, drawn up around it, and decorated with a band and bow of ribbon of good width, has a newness and finish that soon sends it on its way.

It is very important that every arrangement, when delivered, has been well watered. Frequently these remain the first night in a warm room without any water. If received dry, the chances are good the next day for a phone message to call and replace this "dead basket of plants," in which case, a pint of water would have been worth a ten dollar bill.

Holiday Wreaths.

The wreath has lost none of its effectiveness or popularity as a decorative ornament for the home at the holidays; in fact, it would not seem Christmas without a wreath or two of holly or other evergreen. The wreath is the most simple and graceful of designs, simply a short garland, with the ends brought together. There is an infinate variety in their numerous styles, as they can be made of material of all sorts, which in the hands of the stillful worker, is turned to good account in many artistic creations.

The most popular, for the window, is the holly, with its red bow. These are made on forms of pliable branches or on wire frames. They are best made by specialists in the holly country, who year after year, spend the month before Christmas week in tieing up holly wreaths. These, stored in dark, cool, cellars are, when delivery time comes, carefully packed, and arrive at their destination as fresh as when the holly was gathered. Ground pine, or lycopodium, makes a beautiful feathery, green wreath. This can be made more conspicuous with stars of red immortelles in the center. Bows of red ribbon and large dots of the immortelles, give a good finish.

Hardy pine, hemlock, cedar and laurel, all from the woods, are very effective when artistically decked with cones, natural or whitened, gilt or silvered. These materials may be used separately or combined. The pine wreath, decorated with its own cones, is bold and attractive. The hemlock is soft and graceful. The cedar, with its myriads of berries, is showy, while the all laurel, with its broad, glossy, green foliage, is very rich looking.

Clippings of fancy evergreens of the nursery rows make up into the most classy wreaths; they are decorated with holly berries, red, silvered or gilt ruscus, and the white Italian statice, which resembles heather. Cones are also used. They are made either full round or crescent shaped, full on one side, and tapering almost to a point on the other.

The boxwood is always a staple. Wreaths of box, crescent or full round, decorated with any other holiday material, are always popular. There is nothing prettier than a well made boxwood wreath. Many of the trade prefer to use mossed wire frames, into which the stemmed box sprays are stuck. This makes a full, evenly-formed design, with less material than when the sprays are tied on. All kinds of this hardy evergreen material, if stemmed and kept in a cool place from drafts, will keep fresh for a long time, and is quickly handled when the time comes to put it together.

The cemetery wreaths, made up of prepared magnolia and oak leaves, which were arranged during the summer months, can now be brought out and decorated. Cones, and ruscus in their various colorings and statice will give them their Christmas dressing. Holly berries may be added as they are placed on sale or made ready for delivery.

The all red wreaths are still in demand. Chenille has largely taken the place of the red immortelles, they being so easily and quickly made of this material, and at any time during the year. There is also a call for the white and purple. These can also be given a decorative finish with any of the prepared materials or with fresh evergreen sprays, ground pine and holly.

POINSETTIAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Miniature or auto wreaths, such as were first used to decorate limousines, are, if well made, sure to attract attention and command very good prices. With these, as in fact all classes of holiday goods, while the cost price is always to be considered, so as to be on the safe side, the article should be priced for what it looks to be worth. Many novelties are placed on sale that do not take, while others hit the popular fancy. The artistic ability reflected in every well made wreath, should be counted into the price tag; it is not what it costs, but how much can we get for it. Frequently the higher priced of two almost similar designs is selected because, forsooth, as the price is higher, it must be better. Fancy prices for articles that are selling well, is not profiteering, as it takes all that can be gathered in, to meet the very heavy overhead charges of the holiday business.

Christmas Greens.

Christmas greens are considered by some retail stores a necessary evil, as their handling from the days of arrival until delivery, means a lot of worriment and work, with but very little recompense. Such pessimistic views or experiences are generally the result of inefficient handling and bad mangement, both in buying and selling. All material of this character is useful and in demand just at the holiday season. Later, it has little or no value, so that the first consideration is careful buying, laying in just as much stock as is required or likely to be sold, and no more. As in cut flowers and plants, quality is most important. For example, in holly, fancy well-berried stock is worth 25, yes, even 50 per cent more than good ordinary—there is no waste, every spray is well berried and salable. It is the same with holly wreaths. Give the order well ahead to a responsible woodsman or dealer, and take his first selection in all sizes. These will be found well packed, and everyone salable, down to the bottom layer. The loose holly had better be tied in bundles by the woodsman, so many to a case, according to size. It is then sold without unnecessary handling or sorting, as the sprays, bundled, look very full of berries. It should on arrival, be placed in a cool place, free from drafts.

Holly wreaths should be packed in paper-lined boxes or barrels, to exclude the air, and always kept in a cool shed or cellar. In selling, they should be handled as little as possible, and never allowed to remain long in a warm store room, as the foliage soon dries out and the berries drop off. It is, of course, necessary to display them, but as far as possible, orders should be taken from samples. Mistletoe is another Christmas product that requires the greatest care, as its very fragile stems snap so easily. Quality counts here, poor stock having little demand. It must also be kept from the air, in a cool place. Selected clumps or boughs are the better, if a generous red bow and slender ribbon to hang up by, is added.

Boxwood is a splendid green. When kept in a cool place, it presents a beautiful, glossy appearance, and works up into handsome wreaths. It should also be kept out of drafts. After unpacking, if placed in tubs of water, the leaves and branches fill up, and appear to have much more life to them.

Loose ground pine is the better after good soaking in water before being handled. It then stiffens up and looks 50 per cent fresher. Ground pine wreathing should always be soaked, and then never allowed to get dry. Laurel branches keep well in jars of water or packed down loosely in wooden boxes and kept moist. All other kinds of outdoor greens should be treated in much the same way, kept in a cool place and out of drafts.

Made up wreaths of all kinds of greens should be kept moist and in a cool place until it comes time to sell them, and then as far as possible, orders should be taken from samples. Retailers are fortunate who have a cool greenhouse or cold room that can be given over to their display, as their beauty and sale are then greatly enchanced. Whenever possible, a little section of the store can be given over to these hardy green goods, where with all together, they can be more efficiently handled.

At times, an adjacent store happens to be vacant, and is rented for the week. This can be featured as the Christmas green annex, and with the assortment nicely displayed, including small trees in tubs, a very good business is worked up.

HOLLY WREATH WITH BUNCHES OF BERRIES.

MILFORD, ILL.—F. L. Henry has made extensive improvements at his establishment, including a new heating system and practically rebuilding the entire range.

MUSKEGON, MICH.—Luhman Bros., for several years superintendents of local cemeteries, have opened a range at McCracken avenue and Cleveland street.

EL RENO, OKLA.—Mrs. L. C. Butts will open an uptown flower store in the near future.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

There are but 10 more days until Christmas. While, no doubt, all branches of the trade are more or less prepared for the event, the most intensive use should be made of every working hour until the final sale is made and the last order delivered. The rush period of the last three days, particularly in the retail store, is most trying, nearly all the business of the entire period having to be handled for delivery in this short time. The store that has the work well advanced, that has taken advantage of, and turned dull periods into busy manufacturing hours, can devote almost its entire force to selling and presenting its stock to the best advantage. Where, however, the stock is not fully worked up, much can be accomplished in the next few days by making the best use of time and materials. Each minute of every working hour, used to the best advantage now, greatly relieves the congestion later on.

With the exception of the perishable flowering plants, there should be displayed much of the Christmas stock, including all the fancy pottery, wicker plant stands, flower holders and vases, fern dishes, samples of all kinds of Christmas wreaths, holly, evergreen in tubs and miniature Christmas trees in pots. Also a full line of foliage plants, selected stock, every one of such quality as will make a gift worth having. Choice specimen ferns are very salable and give a decorative appearance to whatever part of the store they are placed in. There should also be a line of filled plant baskets and hampers. With their ribbon finish, they are sure to receive attention, and if not at once considered, sure to be later on.

The outside front of the store, if decorated to the best advantage, will do much to bring the people in, while the well displayed stock and good salesmanship, will do the rest.

All kinds of flowering stock will be found much higher in price this year than last; in many cases, almost double. While some may fear to ask the ratio of profit that has been considered standard, because they think the people will not pay it, they have only to figure out that their dollar, in common with that of their customers', is now only worth 50 cents, or at least will go only half as far as it did two years ago, and that all classes of goods are being handled in the same ratio. There must be a profit, and a good safe margin, so as to be able to cover any loss from unsold or damaged stock at the prevailing high cost. Also, they must remember that every expense in labor, packing and delivery has greatly increased, and selling prices must be based on figures that will cover all these items and assure a safe margin of profit.

A little card or printed instructions as to the care of flowering, foliage or berried plants, should accompany each pot, or at least be attached to one of each lot sent out. They should particularly recommend that each pot is to set in a saucer to catch the drip, and that wherever no water is visible in the saucer more should be given. If the plant should be so dry as to wilt, it should be immersed in water for at least 10 minutes.

The Christmas window should now be in place. The motive should be gifts. Each article, in either plants or baskets, should be perfect in every respect. People are now out selecting gifts, going from store to store, looking the various stocks over, and should find the windows of the flower shops, if anything, more attractive, and containing articles that hold their own with any other line. Do not forget appropriate window cards. They are most essential, and have wonderful pulling power.

Plenty of extra help is important. The colleges in all the large cities have students who are not averse to adding to their income by giving up some of their holiday time to work in the flower shop. They are, for the most part, bright, intelligent and active, and after the first day's experience, are found very helpful.

Get several crates of well berried holly, and clip off the foliage. This will leave branches of loose stems and berries. These can be cut down, packed in boxes, and kept in a cool place, when they will be ready for instant use in decorating or working up in evergreen wreaths, baskets, etc., giving them the necessary Christmas color.

Exploit the country-wide delivery of floral gifts as a strong feature. This through the medium of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, will be found very profitable. Ask for early orders, so as to avoid delays. It will interest new people, who are likely to become regular customers.

JARDINIERE BOX FILLED WITH CELESTIAL PEPPERS.

LINCOLN, ILL.—Gullett & Sons held a chrysanthemum show at their range, November 12-13, which was largely attended and enjoyed by the public.

THE CARNATION.

Winter Care of the Plants.

Now that severe cold is the prevailing condition of the weather, the success of the winter's crop of carnation blooms will depend largely on the general care of the plants. A continued heavy crop of long stem high grade flowers can only be obtained by the close attention to the routine work necessary to the plants' care. Over a wide area of the country, the weather during the last two months has been about as fine as one could expect for the plants' growth, so that, generally speaking, the plants are in the best of condition to enter the mid-winter period. The coming eight or 10 weeks is the critical period for the flowering carnation plants in the greenhouse benches; a let up in their care, or overstepping the bounds of reasonable culture, may cause a failure of the crop for the rest of the season.

The growers' principal attention at this time, is drawn toward the Christmas crop, and every effort should be exercised to make it as satisfactory as possible, but do not resort to any extreme measures for the sake of obtaining a few extra flowers for the holidays. From covered with buds of good size, it will ladened with buds of good size, it will not harm the plants any, to gradually raise the temperature two or three degrees, both night and day, so that houses that have been held 48-50 degrees at night, can be raised to 50-54, and the day temperature of 54-56 on cloudy days up to 56-58, and on bright days, allow the temperature to run up about four degrees higher and guard against a sudden drop when the rays of the sun leave the glass in the afternoon. Be especially careful to allow the temperature in the houses to fall gradually, so that by 5:30 p. m., the thermometers register the night temperature, with enough pipes of steam turned on to hold it steadily, according to the weather conditions, then when the night man assumes the responsibility, it is very easy for him to maintain an even temperature throughout the night.

There are no plants that grow, that will respond more readily when an even temperature is maintained, nor are there any that will suffer more quickly when changing degrees of temperature are allowed than the carnation. This is an important point that should be impressed upon the mind of everyone undertaking the culture of carnations, because a great many times the failure of the plants to respond as they should do, can be traced to carelessness in maintaining the right temperature.

WATERING.

A great deal depends on the careful attention to this part of the work. With the steady use of artificial heat, some parts of the benches, and the lower part of the soil, will dry out quicker than heretofore, when the heat was only being used part of the time. This makes it necessary that the grower should examine the beds every day, and water such parts as they need it. The most important thing to watch out for, is to make sure that the soil is kept as near as is possible in the same degree of moisture throughout the bed. The soil at the roots of carnation plants, should never be allowed to become extremely dry, but should be held at a moderate degree so that the blooms can develop steadily. When the soil is kept continually wet at this time of the year, the plants develop into a forced growth of grass instead of the production of blooms. Under the conditions of careful regulation of the temperature and the airing of the houses, the plants do not need any overhead syringing at this season of the year, and during the period between November 1 and March 1, we do not syringe our carnation plants at all. The insects can be kept in check with the nicotine preparations, either by vaporization from the steam pipes, or by spraying through the fine sprayer, but it should be done regularly, and when this is done, the plants do better without the syringing, especially during very severe weather, when very little ventilation can be used.

DISBUDDING.

This part of the work is often looked upon as not being very important and which can be left to the fireman or temperature man to do when he has time between his duties of caring for the boilers or temperature. This may be all right when he has time to do it, but if you will check up a house of plants that are disbudded regularly as they need it, and another that is disbudded in a haphazard way when time allows, I know the results between the two houses will astonish anyone who takes the trouble to make the comparison. It is also quite interesting to experiment a little as regards the disbudding of carnations, by taking a section of the bench and disbud as soon as the buds are large enough to be removed without damage to the main bud, and in another section, allow the buds to get to a good size before removing them. The difference in the time the flowers are ready to cut in favor of those that were disbudded the earliest will be found to be remarkable, not taking into consideration the better quality of the flowers or stems.

CUTTING AND MARKETING FLOWERS.

The surest means of success in growing carnations for the wholesale cut flower market is to first build up a reputation for fresh high grade carnation blooms, and then make your stock bear up the reputation. When the dealer or retailer can depend on the quality of the stock consigned to him, it is to his interest to make liberal returns for it. So many growers make the mistake of figuring up early in December, the number of flowers they are going to cut for Christmas, and then start in gradually backing up on the cut, and by December 15 the beds make a fine showing of blooms, many of which ought to have been cut before and disposed of profitably at that time. But instead of doing this, they still hold on to them, and then, a few days before Christmas start to ship them to market, but these flowers even though they did not show it on the greenhouse bench, were on the down grade, and after being handled two or three times, go all to pieces and are worthless. Make your cuts daily as ready while the flowers are fresh and of good keeping qualities. Grade them strictly as to quality, then there cannot be any argument for demanding a fair price for the stock.

CHRISTMAS BASKET.
Poinsettias, Heather, Crotons, Glory Fern, Etc.

ATTENTION TO THE SOIL.

Under this heading, we include adding additional nourishment for the plants. There are several details that need regular attention to keep the soil in good shape for the roots to carry on their function. First, keep the beds clean of weeds, then see that none of the roots are washed bare by watering. If a green scum forms on the surface of the soil, remove it, and to keep this in check, a good plan is to scatter on the bed a thin dressing of fine limestone.

Referring to the matter of adding nourishment for the plants, whether they are in need of extra stimulation at this time, depends on the composition of the soil in its present state. If a live, fresh soil, with a liberal amount of good stable manure incorporated in it, was used for benching the plants, they should not be in need of additional nourishment before the first of the year, but this is a matter that must be governed to a great extent by the judgment of the grower. But when carrying out this work, use common sense judgment in doing it. Do not spread a thick plaster of fresh cow manure over the beds, completely excluding the air from the soil, and expect it to benefit the plants. It is more than likely to have the opposite effect. To make a good and safe mulch for carnations, bring in the partially rotted manure in a shed where it will thaw out, then mix it about 50-50 with fine, fresh loam. Allow it to lay about two weeks before putting it on the beds, in the meantime turning it over two or three times to thoroughly mix it.

PROPAGATING.

It is none too early to make preparations for this work by arranging for a good supply of fresh clean sand, attending to any repairing needed on the propagating bench, giving it a good cleaning and lime washing, and filling it up with the sand while the weather is good to carry on the work. If you have room, and can properly care for the cuttings after they are rooted, working them along as they need it into strong healthy plants, then go ahead with the propagating. But if you do not have room to properly care for the young plants, it will be best to put off the propagating for another month.

ORCHID NOTES.

Christmas Orchids.

The unprecedented high figure that cut orchids have been realizing for some months in the wholesale flower market is only a forerunner of what may be expected in the future. The ruling No. 37 of the federal horticultural board, which has so effectually shut out all new importations of tropical orchids, will cause a further shortage of cut orchids for several years to come. In fact, until the thousands of the seedling orchids now being raised by many of our commercial orchid merchants have reached the flowering stage. It is indeed wonderful to notice how the above merchants are gradually becoming aware of the great possibilities of raising orchids from seed for commercial purposes. The present day conditions are quietly changing the opinions of the old time orchid cultivators that have held the sway for a generation or more. Especially now, the prevailing price, or returns, for blooms of a good hybrid orchid is fully 25 cents more than flowers of the ordinary well-known commercial species.

Year in and year out, the same old varieties have appeared with the same regularity for the Christmas trade. The well known Cattleya Trianæ, and C. Percivaliana, with a few lælias, oncidiums and cypripediums, usually selling for the same figure each season, the supply for the most part being kept up by the annual importation from the tropics, until the great war brought out and changed many conditions that were looked upon as unbreakable by orchid merchants (they could not rightly be called orchid growers.) Many of them became alarmed and rather than assume any risk or loss caused by deliveries of imported orchids being delayed, they canceled many orders of imported plants, thus the stocks on hand became very much depleted. This state of affairs, coupled with war-time neglect, and the poor methods of cultivation that had become in vogue for some years, found many of these orchid merchants in much the same condition as the foolish virgins of old, who neglected to get oil for their lamps. They, too, had plenty of empty benches and no means of filling them after June 1, when ruling No. 37 became effective. This about explains the present situation, and high prices that are obtained for orchid flowers today.

Otherwise, the weather has been all that could be desired this fall for ripening up the bulbs of all cattleyas, so good flowers may be looked for in due season without resorting to any undue forcing to get flowers from Cattleya Trianæ for Christmas. Selecting certain plants that look promising to give early flowers, and placing them in warm quarters to force out the blooms, is to be condemned very strongly, as it is both detrimental to the plants and flowers. Forced flowers lack substance and keeping qualities, and give poor satisfaction to all who handle them, and very often those plants that were left in their growing quarters to come along in their own way, are in bloom long before those that have undergone a forced treatment.

Forcing to bring in orchids ahead of their season will gradually become a thing of the past, for here is where the hybridist steps in with his work, as for instance, the hybrid C. veriflora, (C. labiata x C. Trianæ) bridges over the flowering season of the two parents, producing just as fine a flower as was ever produced by nature for commercial use, it being as free to flower as C. labiata and with the size, substance and beauty of C. Trianæ. Without a doubt, in another decade, a wealth of just such hybrids will be available to bridge over all, so-called, off seasons, so they will be a thing of the past. Other Christmas orchids are Cattleya Percivaliana, which, unfortunately, has not a very pleasing odor. Though the flower is pretty enough in itself, few people desire to buy it if others are available. Calanthe Veitchii makes a showy cut flower and can be used to great advantage for light table decorations. C. Harris flowers at the same time; one pink and the others white. They go well together. Dendrobium phalænopsis, with its pink sprays, is still seen in limited quantities, though this valuable flower is at its best in October. All the colored anceps come into flower for the holidays. Unfortunately they do not last long after being cut, but they come in very handy to relieve flat or stiff decorations when cattleyas alone are used. The white Laelia albida comes in useful for this purpose; also L. autumnalis, a bright pink with a goodly number of flowers on a stem is very showy. But L. Gouldiana, when well grown, is king of the laelias for Christmas decoration. Spikes with four to six flowers, all of good size and color, show off to perfection under artificial light. This is supposed to be a natural hybrid. The stems are not quite so hard as the spikes of L. anceps, which enables it to take up water. It will last fully six days in good condition after being cut.

VANDA CŒRULEA.

CATTLEYA TRIANÆ.

A Single Specimen Plant (Not Made Up).

Oncidium splendidum usually can be had in flower for the holidays. This keeps well after cutting. O. Cavendishianum is a good companion, but not nearly as plentiful, and for a yellow orchid, has no equal.

Vanda cœrulea, the blue orchid, mixed with the above oncidiums, is always admired, and it is quite plentiful from now on to February. The cypripediums cannot be overlooked as Christmas orchids, if it was only for their great lasting qualities alone. C. insigne Sanderæ has leaped into great prominence of late. All it lacks to be perfect, is a few more inches of stem. It seems to be crowding the old type of C. insigne pretty fast, although for table decoration with adiantum fern, it will hold its own. C. Leeanum is still one of the best hybrids for the commercial florist, being a lighter built flower, with a good, long, stiff stem, making it a very desirable cut flower, yet all of them make good house plants, as the flowers will keep in good condition on the plants for six weeks or more.

LINCOLN, ILL.—Gullett & Sons are watching the coal situation closely. The ordinary consumption at their large range is 20 tons daily, increased in extremely cold weather to a carload.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The publicity being given to the Von Tilzer song, "Say It With Flowers," is very gratifying to our committees. The song is a pronounced "hit," and besides the presentations of it in the big theatres of our leading cities, arranged for by its publishers, it is being presented in minor cities by artists outside of the "headliner" circle, who quickly take hold of anything which becomes a success in the theatres of the larger circuits. A correspondent who happened to be in Lowell, Mass., last week, writes us that its rendition in a theatre there came as a surprise to the florists, one of whom immediately had flowers sent in to the singer, who used them to advantage. Any assistance the florists can render in the presentation of the song is sure to result to their advantage locally. This week, Buffalo has a presentation of it at Shea's theatre, by Miss Emma Stevens, a well-known vocalist. New Orleans is also to have it featured for several weeks in a "Revue" at one of its leading places of entertainment. It is quite likely that it will be heard in all cities in the country, and, in addition, it is expected that it will shortly be offered in phonograph record form. All this without any expense to our publicity fund—a testimonial to the value of our slogan.

SLOGAN BILLBOARDS.

Paul E. Weiss, of the Weiss-Meyer Co., growers, Maywood, Ill., who is installing four of these signs, or "advertising bulletins," as it has been suggested we should call them, writes: "Every grower of flowers in this country, large or small, can afford and should buy at least one sign. Personally, I believe this idea of billboards to be a great advertising medium, and growers are bound to get good results." The manufacturers of the signs, in Fort Wayne, Ind., are making prompt shipment of all signs ordered. A florist in New Jersey is planning to use four of the signs, and proposes to make an extensive planting of flowering and evergreen shrubs around each, with, perhaps, vines trained around the framework—an excellent idea, and one worthy of adoption generally.

CAMPAIGN FUND.

Our campaign fund is not nearly large enough to enable our committees to carry to completion their plans for general publicity. They find it no small task to arrange campaign plans with simply an expectancy of funds being available to allow of such plans being put into effect. Support in their work cannot be too strong—at present it is not even reasonable. The florists have given liberal support to various drives in the last two or three years, but are sadly neglecting to support their own drive, one which promises so much benefit to them. It is true that a goodly number of our craft are co-operating to provide a working fund, but in number they only represent little more than one-tenth of the trade. If the remaining nine-tenths are not wholly indifferent to the movement, they are very slow to respond to the appeal constantly made to them. Their attitude is almost unbelievable. It was never thought that a florist, usually classed with the best fellows on earth, would withhold assistance to a project which promised so much for him individually, and was calculated to extend his opportunities for doing business. It is still hard to believe that such is the case—it is not, cannot be. It must be sheer forgetfulness. The matter of amount of subscription need worry nobody, it can be raised at any time. If $10 is all that can be contributed, send it. If less, it will be just as welcome. Send something, if only to show appreciation of the work accomplished.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Harvey & Sons, Brandywine Summit, Pa.

Arthur A. Niessen, George and Alfred Burton, and the writer, visited Alvin Harvey & Sons, Brandywine Summit, Pa., December 2, where the rose stock in all the houses was found in excellent condition. There are 45,000 rose plants. A large house, 50x600 feet, planted with Ophelia and Sunburst, had produced a good fall crop, and will be in early in January. This is a place where Hadley is done well. None of the visiting party had ever seen this variety any better anywhere at this time. They are all on own roots. A portion of one house had been planted with grafted stock, which had not fared nearly so well. It is estimated that an average of two long-stemmed flowers to a plant would be taken during December.

Russell is doing extremely well. George Burton, who is an expert Russell grower, claims that many growers cut their Russell too soon. It should never be cut befort it is at least half open, then the flower is larger, with a better color, and will keep just as long. Some growers report it gets a violet tinge if left to open, but he said this was a cultural fault, and would not occur where the plants are healthy. Columbia has done well here, as has Premier. Columbia should be grown in a night temperature of not over 56°.

A range covered with a system of ridge and furrow roofs was filled with a fine lot of Ophelia in full crop, a week too early for the holidays, but selling well. They are all grafted stock, which pays best for this variety. The same ground, covered with a large house of iron construction, will. Mr. Harvey states, cost but little more than the comparatively low structures.

A bed of Prima Donna looked very good. Two beds alongside, planted with Russell, were also fine. This latter variety does very well here. Russell, it was said, was not benefited by heat in its resting season.

There is one house, benched, in which in the center beds are sweet peas. These are planted across the beds so as to admit the sun and makes it easier to cut the flowers. On the tables, they bloom earlier and better in mid-winter. The side benches were planted with mignonette. The remedy here for the green worm was flour and paris green, dusted in with a bellows. It is found very effective. Mignonette thrives best in a temperature of 45 to 48°; the least warmth will make the flower spikes go to seed.

Pinching roses does not gain much, and everything should be let come after the first of the year. Short roses in February bring as much then as long stock in April. Red spider must be kept down at all hazards, and syringing should be done whenever necessary, regardless of weather conditions.

Both Premier and Columbia at this establishment were in fine condition. A new house, 42x250 feet, just completed, is to be planted with these two varieties early in January. An additional new boiler has recently been installed. Three years ago the one in use cost $1,000. Now, the duplicate costs $2,500.

EXCELLENT THANKSGIVING TRADE.

On all sides, one hears nothing but satisfaction over the amount of trade done at Thanksgiving. There was a large supply of all kinds of cut flowers, and a very fair assortment of flowering plants to select from. Prices, in most instances, ruled about the same as last year with the exception of chrysanthemums, which were cheaper, owing to favorable weather and a large supply. Roses advanced sharply a few days before Thanksgiving, and are still held high. There was a fine lot of stock offered, and it cleaned up in good shape. American Beauties sold out early in the day. The supply of Mrs. Russell was another variety that moved quickly. Columbia, Ophelia, Shawyer and Hadley all sold well. There was a scarcity of Cecile Brunner. Quite a nice lot of Irish Elegance were disposed of. In chrysanthemums, pink and yellow were the best sellers. There was a fine supply of Bonnaffon and Appleton. Nonin is the best white on the market at present. Red and bronze varieties, where available, moved very nicely. There was a heavy demand for pompons in every color. The bronze varieties seemed most popular. There was plenty of singles and anemones, but the brisk demand cleaned them up completely. Helen Frick was the best pink on sale, but the quantity was somewhat limited, and it did not last long. There was a very heavy supply of violets. Prices, however, remained as usual. The shipping demand for this flower was strong, and great quantities were sent out of town. Princess of Wales was most in favor here. There was a strong demand for carnations. The bright colors were most in favor. Stock stiffened up before the holiday and brought good prices. Extra fine flowers commanded $4.00 per 100. There was a lot of poor stock offered, but it seemed to move with the rest. Quite a nice lot of winter flowering sweet peas were noted. The quality was very good, and excellent prices were received. Pink, white and lavender were the leading sellers. Orchids were quite scarce, and many more could have been sold. Gardenias sold well. Snapdragon cleaned up early in the day, and brought fine returns. Great quantities of California red berries were thrown on the market. The stores, as a rule, did not handle much of this stock. It was disposed of on the street. English holly was to be had only in limited quantities. There was a nice lot of cut Erica melanthera, and it proved quite a favorite. In flowering plants, the popular demand seemed to run to medium priced stock. Large specimens did not move so quickly as stock in six and eight-inch pots. This was true of every variety offered. Cyclamens moved well in the smaller sized plants. Azaleas were sold out completely. Begonias were very popular, and nearly all good plants found a ready market. Pot grown ericas were in good demand. There were no pot grown poinsettias to be had. The cut stock, however, was very plentiful, but did not seem to meet with much favor. The street peddlers stocked up with it heavily. It all came from the southern part of the state. The greater part of it was rather poor quality. On Thanksgiving eve, this city was visited by a very destructive gale, which greatly hindered the delivery of stock. Great damage was done throughout this vicinity. Chrysanthemum growers, who grew their stock in exposed positions, suffered much loss to their late flowering varieties. The Chinese growers, who have their stock planted in sheltered locations in the hills of the peninsula, escaped with only slight damage.

NOTES.

The MacRorie-McLaren Company, on Powell street, had many fine specimen ericas for their Thanksgiving trade. These were from the firm's greenhouses at San Mateo. Ericas are one of the leading specialties of this firm, and they have a splendid collection at their nurseries. Dan MacRorie, who spends most of his time at the nurseries, says rains are badly needed before much landscape work can be started. Rains are unusually late this year.

After looking through the orchid houses at Ferrari Bros.' establishment, one would not think there was much of a shortage of this flower. The Trianæ are a splendid lot just now, with thousands of sheaths showing buds. These are being grown slightly cooler of late to hold them for the Christmas trade. While they are cutting quite a quantity daily, it is far behind the demand. Their rose houses produced a heavy cut for Thanksgiving.

CRESCENT MAGNOLIA WREATH, CHRYSANTHEMUMS AND SMITHII FERN.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. report an unusually heavy Thanksgiving trade. They were fortunate in being able to secure enough stock to care for their large business. They had some very fine American Beauty and Russell roses, which sold quickly. They also had a good supply of orchids, principally Cattleya Trianæ. They carried a large number of flowering plants, and report the sale of this stock as ahead of last year. Cut ericas were also handled, and were of the best quality.

Almon Wheeler, of the Ruehl, Wheeler Nursery, at San Jose, was a recent visitor, and reports an unprecedented demand for fruit trees of every description. He says grape vines, particularly Thompson's Seedless, are in such demand as to be practically exhausted. The call for roses has been so strong, that they are sold out on many of the best varieties.

The Hillsborough Nurseries are sending in some high grade Russell of late, that have been eagerly sought by leading stores. Manager Henry Maier has made a great success of growing this rose, and is receiving fancy prices for his cut. He has a fine lot of foliage and flowering plants that will be ready for the Christmas trade.

Albert O. Stein, on Sutter street, reported a fine business for Thanksgiving. He carried very large stocks of specimen azaleas, cyclamens and begonias and other flowering plants. He says plant trade was ahead of expectations. Decorative work keeps up steadily here, and the large staff is always busy.

According to J. A. Axell, the shipping trade was much in excess of last year. The supply of chrysanthemums was large and heavy shipments were made. His growers were in with good cuts of roses, most of which were of excellent quality. He also reports a big outside demand for violets.

Eric James, of Elmhurst, supplied this market with begonias and cyclamens of the finest quality. He has many houses filled with these and other seasonable stock for Christmas. A large part of his stock is already sold. He reports a heavy demand from other large cities in the state.

Kenneth S. Murray, of Redwood City, expects to be in with a fine cut of freesias shortly. He will also have plenty of the colored varieties this season. His rose houses are now producing a nice supply of roses. All his stock is shipped to J. A. Axell, of this city, for distribution.

Enomoto Bros. had a large cut of pompons for Thanksgiving. They found these to be in great demand, and shipped large quantities out of town. Their chrysanthemum crop is now about over for the season, which they report to have been a most successful one.

The Francis Floral Company, on Powell street, had a busy Thanksgiving. Their large stock of plants and cut flowers was nearly exhausted before the day was over. Decorative work and funeral orders also has been keeping this firm busy, right along.

Albert O. Stein, on Sutter street, has a beautiful store. It is filled with the finest specimens obtainable of all seasonable flowering stock. The azaleas are particularly fine. He has secured a fine supply of English holly, which he reports is a good seller.

The E. W. McLellan Company was fortunate in having a fine cut of roses at their Burlingame greenhouses. Manager Avensino says his firm could have disposed of more stock if it were procurable. They shipped heavily of asparagus and ferns.

The Chas. C. Navlet stores, both here and in San Jose, say they are greatly pleased over the heavy business transacted for Thanksgiving. Their plant trade is opening up nicely, and they are handling large quantities of seasonable stock.

HEAVY SHIPPING DEMAND WELCOME.

Even though the cold weather curtailed receipts considerably the past week, it caused no hardships or concern, for the local demand was exceedingly quiet, while with the shipping trade it was just the reverse. Sweet peas and violets, both single and double, still remain on the short side. The call for roses was mainly in the medium and shorter grades. Stevia is arriving in quantity and will be in for at least two more months. While this line of cut flower was only grown by a few, until recently, it is now seen at most growers' places. Good greens are none too plentiful, while in carnations, the demand still kept pace with the supply. While most of the out-of-town orders for the Christmas pot plants are filled, the present food for thought is how will our wholesalers fare with the shipping orders of cut flowers from now on. Already, some of the express officials have intimated, that, due to the cutting out of so many trains, it looks dubious if they will be able to take care of all their work with the limited transportation facilities due to the shortage of coal. The shipping trade in flowers out of this city is a big item, and should most of that stock remain on the local market, it would cause considerable loss to all concerned.

CLUB MEETING.

Upon invitation of Henry Welke, the regular meeting, December 4, was held at the store of E. Welke Co., 752 Third street. A large attendance turned out, and it proved to be a lively affair. Hugo Locker, of Wauwatosa, was elected to membership, while on the other hand Fred W. Mueller handed in his resignation. In regard to the coal question, action was taken whereby the officers of the club were empowered to name a committee to confer with the local fuel administrator, should the situation change for the worse, in the near future. Nominations and election of officers for 1920 were on the program. Only in the capacity as vice-president and trustee for three years was there more than one candidate. Election results were as follows: Henry Welke, president; Fred Gutermuth, vice-president; Fred H. Holton, treasurer; Eug. Oestreicher, secretary, re-elected; trustee for three years, Gust Pohl. For the good of the club order, our newly elected president and Mrs. Welke treated those present to a delicious lunch and cigars. Mr. Schuette, of the Milwaukee Pottery Co., was on hand to get the boys interested financially to help increase his plant so that the local trade could be supplied at all times.

NOTES.

Up to December 6, we have not heard of any local grower who did not receive a coal permit if conditions warranted, while all retail stores were permitted to remain open only seven hours after December 7. We must admit that if these conditions last much longer, business in general for the coming holidays will not break any records.

With the exception of a few odds and ends, the large stock of poinsettias, cyclamens, cherries, ericas and who knows what not, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., is all spoken for at this time.

Gust Rusch & Co. report local demand for the past week quiet, but a good out-of-town movement. With them, long and fancy roses have not sold as readily as might be expected.

The C. C. Pollworth Co., who had a large lot of fine poinsettias among its large offering of pot plants, reports all orders up as early as December 6.

John G. Heitman was confined to his home the past week with stomach trouble.

Visitors: Richard Haentze, Fond du Lac, Wis.; Chas McKellar and wife, Chicago; Martin Reukauf, of H. Beyersdorf & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

LIMITED SUPPLY AND FIRM DEMAND.

Business continues good and stock is scarce. For the past week, all the wholesale houses could do, was to divide the stock when it came in and give customers their share. American Beauties are still scarce and bring almost Christmas prices. The supply of roses has increased, but the demand keeps pace with the supply. All roses are a little off color on account of the damp weather. Carnations are poor in quality and short in quantity, and from all reports, the supply for Christmas will be small and prices high. Paper White narcissi are moving better, owing to the carnation shortage. A few chrysanthemums and pompons are still coming, but not enough to mention. Stevia is plentiful and of very good quality. Orchids and lily of the valley are at a premium. Sweet peas, calendulas and snapdragons are arriving in larger quantity and move at sight. The outlook for Christmas is good, and everyone is optimistic and preparing for a big business.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held in the basement of the Carnegie Library N. S. on the night of December 2, with a goodly attendance. The Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., exhibited a vase of Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late Pink, which was very highly commended by all the chrysanthemum growers present for its lateness, color, form and sturdy habit; from remarks passed one could gather the fact that this variety will be seen in the houses of our Pittsburgh growers next year. Wm. Malbranc, of Johnstown, showed a vase of specially good Mrs. Charles Russell roses, also some large well grown Genista canariensis in pots. Roderick Ross, of Dixmont, by request, brought in a long flower spike of Aloe arborescens, together with a small speciman plant of the same. Schenley park staged splendid Lorraine begonias and stocky, well-berried Solanum Capsicastrum, grown from seed, and from among 500 plants, about 12 appeared with large yellow fruits in every way identical with S. Capsicustrum Cleveland, excepting the color of the berry. John W. Jones intends to propogate from the best of these..

NOTES.

The retail florists' association met at the Seventh Avenue hotel December 4, to discuss Sunday closing, advertising, and a "Say it With Flowers" week. Everyone seems to be in favor of all the motions, and at the next meeting, January 7, an attempt will be made to have all the members present and get things started.

Randolph & McClements were rushed with work for the H. C. Frick funeral; in fact, they worked all night to finish up. The same firm has had several large party orders this week, which kept the whole force working overtime.

E. C. Tipton, manager of the cut flower department of the McCallum Company, is in the east on business.

CHRISTMAS PROSPECTS GOOD.

Business during the past week has been fair and a few orders have been booked ahead for Christmas decorations. Chrysanthemums are almost at an end although there are a few good Turner and Maud Dean still offered. Roses and carnations are excellent. Statice is improving and its use is increasing. Laurel roping is selling fast.

NOTES.

The florists' association at its last meeting held at the Osborne house, enjoyed a long and varied programme including boxing bouts, monologues and music. Charles Felton, of Buffalo, was the principal speaker and had for his topic, "Advertising," referring to the successful campaign in his city in the interest of "Say it With Flowers."

Alberts, the Florist, arranged a very attractive window last week, the center feature of which was a large laurel wreath from which hung clusters of grapes and oranges. From the ceiling, baskets of heilchrysums were suspended while baskets of ruscus, statice, etc., occupied the foreground.

H. E. Wilson has a large number of poinsettias which are coming along nicely for the holiday trade. He is still cutting good chrysanthemums.

Chas. Schlegel & Son have received their shipment of Holland bulbs. Business at their establishment is reported good.

Fletcher Steel, of Boston, Mass., addressed the Rochester Garden Club, December 5, his subject being "Green Gardens."

Harry Holmes, of Providence, R. I., has joined the force at George T. Boucher's store.

Collatos Bros. are featuring handsome baskets of plant arrangements.

THANKSGIVING TRADE HITS HIGH MARK.

Thanksgiving business in this city was the best in the history of the trade in the Buckeye capital. Flowers of all kinds sold actively, and stocks, which were larger than usual, were cleaned up; in fact, some were depleted before the day was over and it was impossible to get a further supply. The purchase of flowers by the public is constantly on the increase, and florists are making preparations accordingly. There were quite a few parties and weddings during the week and flowers were sold in large numbers. Funeral business was not as active as in some former weeks. The principal flowers for the Thanksgiving trade were chrysanthemums, carnations, roses, sweet peas, violets and narcissi. Chrysanthemums were only fairly plentiful, and the stock did not last through the day. In fact, the market in chrysanthemums has been cleaned up and none are expected from this time on. Violets were very popular during the week, and were of excellent quality. They sold from $1.75 to $2 per bunch. Sweet peas were also in fair supply and easily moved at 75c a bunch for the common variety and $1.50 for the fancy grades. Carnations were rather scarce, and sold in the neighborhood of $2 per dozen. They were mostly pink, although quite a few white were on the market. Narcissi were rather plentiful. Roses were one of the staple lines and sold from $3 to $8 per dozen. They were principally Sunburst, Ophelia, Premier, Russell and Ward. Indications point to a good supply of plants for the Christmas business. They will include cyclamens, begonias and other varieties, Florists generally are making preparations for the holiday demand, which is expected to be the biggest ever. Trade among florists in the week following Thanksgiving was quite good in many respects. There is considerable party work, and also quite a few funerals. Preparations are being made for a big Christmas business, and many plants will be on sale in the near future for holiday giving. J. W. L.

FLORISTS' CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.

The election of officers for 1920, and the entertainment of the New York State Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs, January next, were the subjects of discussion at the December meeting of the florists' club. The officers for the next year are: Edward P. Tracey, president; Albert Jenkins, vice-president; Louis H. Schaefer, 102 Hudson avenue, secretary-treasurer; trustees for two years, Fred A. Danker, Frederick Henkes, and Thomas F. Tracey. Robert Davidson, who had served nine years as secretary, declined the honor after he was unanimously re-elected. The club then proceeded to ballot on two candidates, Louis H. Schaefer and Samuel Hanson, for the office. Schaefer received a majority of seven votes, and was declared elected. The new officers will be installed at the January meeting. The names of President-elect Edward P. Tracey and Frederick A. Danker were added to the regular entertainment committee to look after the entertainment of the delegates from the state federation who will be in Albany at a date in January next to be announced. After some discussion, the club decided to accept the invitation of the Troy members to hold the next meeting in the "collar city," whose florists will try to outdo themselves in showing what they can accomplish in the line of entertainment. The secretary-treasurer of the local club will be notified by the Trojans of the date set by them for the reception of the members from Albany.

Frederick Gloeckner, of Watervliet, started a discussion on the subject of a new name for the club, to show that its membership is not confined solely to Albany, but includes also florists and growers in Troy, Schenectady and vicinity. Mr. Gloeckner suggested the name Capital District Florists' Club, because Albany is the capital of the state, and the other places are within a radius of 15 miles. At the meeting in Troy in January the subject, it is expected, will be continued. Some of the members are in favor of organizing florists' clubs in Troy and Schenectady, and others again are of the belief that one large and uniform organization is better than three small ones. It can be said truly that Mr. Gloeckner "started something" when he broached the subject he did.

Fred A. Danker, chairman of the special committee in charge, reported that the "Say it With Flowers" week in November was satisfactory. The Troy florists won the cup that was put up by the retailers in Albany, Troy, and Schenectady for the best float typical of the business. Albany and Schenectady had good floats, but when the judges went over to Troy to see the one the florists of that city had turned out—there was only one decision. The Troy retailers succeeded in stirring up a considerable amount of enthusiasm. A large number of the retail stores had vases of flowers, either in their show windows or in some conspicuous part of the store. The vases had attached to them cards bearing the legend, "Say It With Flowers." Choice flowers were sent also to the hospitals and every patient received one at least.

Fred A. Danker gave a report of a visit made by himself and F. R. Pierson, the rose grower at Tarrytown, to Cornell University, December 2, to consult with Dean Mann, Prof. E. A. White and others on the subject of the new and extended courses in floriculture that the university purposes to give. The university authorities sought the advice of a number of practical horticulturists and florists throughout the state, with the result that they heard at first hand some of the reasons why young graduates in horticulture and floriculture often prove unsatisfactory employes in a large commercial establishment. The university authorities took the suggestions and comments in good part. After spending the day at the university, Messrs. Pierson and Danker, in the evening, were guests of one of the college fraternities. The boys, about 30 in number, have one of the finest houses in the city for their college home. They provided a dinner, served by colored waiters, music, and a fine entertainment. Late that night, Mr. Pierson left for Boston and Mr. Danker for Albany.

THANKSGIVING TRADE GOOD.

Reports from local retailers on their business through Thanksgiving week are favorable. The Wednesday before the holiday was rainy, and that night this section was visited by one of the most destructive sleet storms in years. Trees and their limbs were broken, and poles and wires laid low. The florists, however, managed to clean up very well. Chrysanthemums sold best, and were the easiest flower to obtain. There has been a scarcity of high grade stock in this market for three weeks, according to some of the dealers. It is practically impossible, for example, to obtain lily of the valley, and roses at wholesale bring from 15 cents to $1.00 each.

Horticultural Society of New York.

A lecture on "Korea and Its Vegetation" will be delivered by E. H. Wilson, December 17, 8 p. m., at the American Museum of Natural History, 77th street and Central Park west. Mr. Wilson is assistant director of the Arnold Arboretum. He has spent more than 20 years in exploring and collecting the flora of the far east. Of this period, eleven years have been devoted to western and central China, and three to Japan and the outlying parts of that Empire, and to Korea. A part of the results of this work has been the addition to the gardens of America and Europe of nearly 2,000 species, a larger number of introductions than any one else can claim. All are invited to attend.

Rare, interesting, or unusual plants or flowers may be brought to the meeting, and facilities will be supplied for their display. A fund has been placed at the disposal of the exhibition committee for the purpose of awarding prizes to worthy exhibits.

GEORGE V. NASH, Sec'y.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Randolph, December 4, President Zech in the chair. It was thought there would be a large attendance on account of the coal situation, but the brief discussion of this subject, and the comparatively small number present, indicated that the greenhousemen are fairly well supplied for the present, or are too busy wrestling with the problem at home. The principal subject of discussion was the coming conventions of the American Carnation Society, and the Illinois State Florists' Association, to be held at the Hotel La Salle, January 21-22. Chairman Johnson, of the committee in charge of arrangements, outlined plans for the meeting, which include a banquet to trade visitors, ladies as well as gentlemen. It is urged that reservations of rooms be made early, direct to the hotel.

The exhibits included seasonable supplies from the Poehlmann Bros. Co., and the A. L. Randall Co., the latter featuring a holiday wreath with electric light at the base. Robert Newcomb staged some excellent plants of Erica regerminans for the MacRorie-McLaren Co., of San Mateo, Calif., Ernest Oechslin, was given a certificate of merit for Begonia Cincinnati, and Gould Bros. a like award for Primula obconica. George Ball showed a good vase of King of the Plumes chrysanthemums, and Hans Jepsen, Sunshine chrysanthemums.

The election of officers resulted as follows: T. E. Waters, president; A. T. Pyfer, vice president; Paul E. Weiss, treasurer; Fred Lautenschlager, secretary, and W. J. Keimel, trustee.

Wm. Werstler, 2221 West Madison street, was nominated for membership.

Next meeting, January 8.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club met in its rooms in the Engineering building on the night of December 8. An election night always brings out a good attendance and this occasion was no exception to the rule. The officers elected are as follows: A. M. Henshaw, president: Charles Knight, vice-president; John Young, secretary; Wm. C. Rickards, Jr., treasurer; trustees, Arthur Herrington, Emil Schloss and Max Schling.

Excepting for president and trustees, there were no contests, both J. G. Esler and R. J. Irwin declining to run for vice-president. E. C. Vick declined to run for secretary, as did William Kather for treasurer.

PRESIDENT-ELECT HENSHAW.

Archibald M. Henshaw was born in England. At an early age he took to the sea. In time, his voyages brought him to New York, where an uncle lived. He took up the florist business, and about 20 years ago opened a wholesale store. Later, he formed a partnership with Jos. S. Fenrich, which continued for several years. When that was dissolved, he organized the Henshaw Floral Co., which does a thriving wholesale business, and of which he is president. When the United States entered the war, he enlisted in its navy, esrving throughout, and rising to the rank of lieutenant-commander. He is active and alert, and yet in the prime of life.

is a native of England, and served his apprenticeship with B. S. Williams, Victoria Nurseries, London. He was also employed by James Veitch & Son, Kings Road, Chelsea, London. A more extended sketch of his activities may be published later.

The other officers and trustees are well known men in the trade and allied trades.

CLUB NOTES.

C. H. Totty reported for the flower show committee that at the afternoon meeting, the committee had completed arrangements for the spring show, the American Rose Society co-operating. Arthur Herrington spoke in glowing terms of the prospects for the show. Wallace R. Pierson spoke in a happy vein of the intended co-operation of the American Rose Society in the show.

Resolutions of condolence for the families of members that had recently had bereavements were adopted.

The following were elected to membership: F. B. Bourne, 426 Madison avenue; S. H. Skidell, 50 Park place; Henry C. Holpp, 423 Park avenue; Fred von Lum, 504 Tenth avenue; Alphonse Rigo, 810 Madison avenue; Michael Durso, Springfield, N. J.; Joseph Heiman, 272 Main street, Orange, N. J.; Richard T. Broderick, Yonkers, N. Y.

There were a large number of meritorious exhibits, of which later mention will be made.

The appropriation to the Brooklyn florists of $100 for their "Say it With Flowers" week was ratified.

A resolution was adopted that makes affiliation with the S. A. F. a certainty. This was necessary in order for the club to have representation on its board of directors.

An invitation was received for the members of the club to attend lectures at the American Museum of Natural History.

Patrick O'Mara was reported as improved in health. A pleasant letter was read from Wm. Wallace Burnham, once a popular member of the club, who is now in Kentucky.

Several members of the club were active in the sale of Red Cross seals, and a considerable sum was realized.

THE EXHIBITS.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., made a splendid exhibit of the new African evergreen, Juniperus Mandianus, said to be the best Christmas plant for the house. He also exhibited plants of Golden Justicia covered with masses of yellow flowers that it is said will last two months; also Dracæna Rothiana, exceptionally fine specimens of aspidistras, blue spruce for Christmas trees, and wreaths of fancy evergreen.

Traendly & Schenck had an exceptionally fine exhibit of the roses, Premier, Columbia, Mock, Ophelia and Mrs. Aaron Ward, grown at their Rowayton, Conn., greenhouses.

W. D. Howard, Milford, Mass., exhibited a vase of his crimson carnation, Bernice.

C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., staged his light pink chrysanthemums, Hamburg.

Henry Schenseckpeper, Glendale, N. Y., exhibited a light pink sport of E. A. Seidewitz.

Charles Smith's Son, Woodside, N. Y., exhibited pompon, Christmas Gold.

P. F. Kessler, New York, had Snapdragons Ruth Brewster and another seedling.

A. Sauter, Nyack, N. Y., exhibited mignonette.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., staged single chrysanthemum, Margaret Waite.

Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, exhibited vase of calendulas.

OBITUARY.

Sidney Beard.

Sidney Beard, proprietor of the greenhouse establishment of Beard Bros., West Fort street, Detroit, Mich., died December 5, at Harper hospital. His death was the result of injuries received November 30, when the smokestack of the greenhouses was blown down upon the office where Mr. Beard was seated at his desk in the act of telephoning. He was nearly completely covered by the loose bricks of the chimney, and was with difficulty taken out and to the hospital, where it was soon learned his injuries were of a fatal nature. He had two ribs broken, his right arm had two fractures and injuries to the head, and the spinal cord crushed and nearly severed. His youth (only 27 years) and splendid physique enabled him to survive, most of the time conscious, for several days, during which time his mother was hastening to his bedside from California. He passed away only a few minutes before the grief stricken parent arrived.

Mr. Beard is survived by his widow and young child, his mother, and sister, Mrs. Wm. Shenk, and young brother, Herbert, the latter a student of Culver Military Academy. His funeral, which was largely attended, took place December 8 with interment in the family plot in Woodmere cemetery.

The passing of Sidney Beard removes from the trade of Detroit one of the most popular of the younger element, and the numerous floral emblems and the attendance at the funeral of nearly all the florists of the city gave testimony of the high esteem in which he was held. He was most energetic, and gave the closest attention to his business. Of a jovial, happy disposition, he made friends wherever he went, and his loyalty was never questioned. The sadness of his passing is felt keenly by all who knew him, and the deepest sympathy is extended to the members of his bereaved family.

CHRISTMAS PLANTS are reported sold out at many widely separated points.

THE embargo on express shipments to Detroit, Mich., was lifted December 9.

THE American Railway Express Co. says it is aiming to settle all claims within 60 days.

THE newspapers announce the end of the coal strike as we go to press, but the authorities say the shortage is heavy and continued economy of fuel strictly necessary.

FLORISTS generally do not seem to realize how harshly they have been treated by the federal horticultural board in Plant Quarantine No. 37, since they keep asking the dealers for iris, baby gladioli and similar stocks, which have been forbidden of importation. Write your congressman a strong protest every 10 days.

DECLARING the closed shop is a violation of the federal constitution, the republican publicity association advocates drastic laws to curb organized intimidation by labor unions, which, the association says, has set up a tribunal, superior to the government, and is threatening the country with want and even death.

DUTCH BULB demand continues surprisingly good thus far into December, as these bulbs can be brought into bloom with very little artificial heat.

THE federal horticultural board, Washington, D. C., has issued amended instructions with regard to the entry and inspection of plants and bulbs. Ask for circular HB-117.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

REPORTS OF EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

Chicago, December 1.—Sunbeam, yellow Japanese incurved scored 88 points commercial; Frank Wilcox, Jr., golden bronze pompon, scored 92 points; both exhibited by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.

CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Sec'y.

Pots Scarce.

Many eastern growers report they are unable to get pots for their Dutch and lily bulbs. One large grower is planting lilies in flats. Another grower says he will not buy any more bulbs until he can secure pots.

Many potteries are tied up on account of scarcity of coal and help.

Business Outlook.

The outlook for business following the recent stock decline, has not changed materially. Industrial leaders are going forward with their expansion programmes, even building factory extensions in the effort to increase production. The inefficiency of labor is discouraging, but it is not yet serious enough to prevent the volume of trade, as measured by bank clearings, from rising to new heights.

Telegraph Companies Liable for Damages.

Springfield, Ill., December 4.—Telegraph companies are liable in damage suits for loss due to errors in transmission of messages. This was finally decided by the supreme court today in the case of Bowman & Hull of Chicago against the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company when the high court denied the Postal company a rehearing on the case. Judgment was secured by Bowman & Hull in Chicago, and on appeal to the supreme court it was affirmed at the last session of court.

Christmas Prospects.

All indications point to a record breaking business for the holidays. Those who were in doubt, obtained strong assurance from their Thanksgiving trade, that increased prices were no deterrent to business, as there was a greater demand than ever before and at almost Christmas prices. Wholesale dealers in supplies and growers of Christmas plants in all parts of the country, report unusual demand. There is no question but that those who make a determined bid for holiday business will get all they can handle, and wind up their season with the best December in their experience.

Making Illinois First.

Secretary J. F. Ammann has issued the following to members of the Illinois State Florists' Association:

"Whether the enclosed card shows your dues paid up or in arrears, a check for $10.00 will put you in good standing, and make you a life member.

"Better still, if you are not a life member in the S. A. F., fill out both enclosed blanks and send check for $35.00, thereby forgetting all about future dues.

"Remember, you have only until January 1, 1920, to become a life member in the parent society for $25.00. After that date, it will cost $50.00 to become a life member, and the annual dues will be $5.00. So it will pay you to act now.

"We need 100 members in good standing in both societies in order to make our president a member of the executive board of the grand old S. A. F. Won't you help to make Illinois the first state association to do this?

"Our annual state meeting will be held in Chicago, Thursday afternoon, January 29, 1920, in connection with the American Carnation Society meeting and show. You will sure want to be there. So let's settle the dues question now."

"Commercial Rose Culture."

A practical guide to modern methods of growing the rose for market purposes under glass and outdoors, by the well known authority, Eber Holmes, entitled, "Commercial Rose Culture," has been issued in its second edition, handsomely illustrated with many of the commercial roses of today brought closely up to date. Included in the 196 interesting pages are a fitting tribute to John Cook, Baltimore, Md., to whom rosarians of America are greatly indebted for the dissemination of much knowledge concerning the culture of the rose in this country, and 26 chapters under classified index devoted to the principal factors in successful production, such as choosing a location and style of houses, propagation, hybridizing, preparation of the soil, general culture, cropping, insect pests, fungus diseases, insecticides, fungicides, fertilizers, types of roses, cost of equipment and returns, cutting, marketing and exhibiting, steam heating and engineering, hot water heating and growing costs and returns.

Poinsettias for Cutting.

Samuel Pearcee, the well-known Chicago grower, immerses cut ends of his poinsettias in boiling water to prevent bleeding. This treatment preserves the foliage and bracts in good condition a long time. The water is heated by electric current.

Coal Situation in Omaha Critical.

The coal situation in Omaha, Neb., Council Bluffs, Ia., and Lincoln, Neb., is serious, florists being allowed but half of their requirements. Many of the growers are making every effort possible to pull through until Christmas in order to dispose of their pot plants. It is believed, that unless conditions are improved by January 1 at least 50 per cent of the glass in that section will have to be shut down.

THANKSGIVING TRADE GENERALLY GOOD.

Thanksgiving for the local trade was all that could have been desired, when general business conditions were considered. The only offering on which there was even a hint of an oversupply of stock was chrysanthemums. The California shipments of this flower have since dropped off to practically nothing, with the result that the local ranges are supplying the trade nicely. There was a good general demand in all lines for the holiday. For corsage work, the football contest with both universities listing gold among their colors, proclaimed yellow chrysanthemums as the leaders, and for general use practically every item in the list sold well. One firm brought in a plentiful supply of lily of the valley, and placed orchids and this flower with several large formal affairs on Thanksgiving eye. General decoration work was heavier than ever before, according to most dealers. The growing interest in pot plants as holiday gifts was commented on freely by members of the trade. The general situation for the present shows plenty of Turner, Bonnaffon, Eaton and Chadwick chrysanthemums in stock, with a well-handled cut coming in daily, a good supply of roses, not so plentiful a stock of carnations, and a nice cut of orchids. Most of the growers have been handling their roses so as to try and insure a plentiful supply for the Christmas trade, but dealers will have to order considerable stock from California. Sweet peas, violets, asparagus, American Beauty roses and general lines are being brought here daily from California,although the trade has been complaining that the violets do not hold up well this season. Irish Elegance roses have been featured by several of the shops to good advantage, along with Ophelia, Ward, Cecile Brunner, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Shawyer and Bridesmaid. The use of cut cyclamens with roses is steadily increasing, and this has also helped move up the plentiful offerings of the former. Pot cyclamens are in as good demand as ever, and the local stocks are still of a grade to excite favorable comment from out-of-town dealers. Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, azaleas and pompons are other lines that sell well, and ferns ranging small to medium in size, have been favorites. The possibilities for Christmas business are more than good, and several of the firms are already commencing to get their retail trade lined up for this holiday.

NOTES.

For the past two weeks, the daily advertisements for the Hollywood Gardens have featured two things—the fact that Christmas was near and that flowers, either cut or in pots, make ideal gifts, and the warning that the holiday supply may be short, so that the placing of orders now means much to the buyer. The usual Florists' Telegraph Delivery notice was also carried. Mr. Holmes reports this firm's greenhouse supplies as coming along in splendid style, especially in pot pompons and Ophelia roses, while Begonia Glory of Cincinnati has been a heavy seller. The cut of carnations has increased some.

Rosaia Bros. have handled a number of big decoration orders lately, including the ball by The Lighthouse For the Blind, a local charity organization. Twelve huge baskets, featuring yellow chrysanthemums and Ophelia roses, were the features in the ball room, while these roses and bronze chrysanthemums were used in the supper room. The cut of orchids is holding up well, but is still short of the demand.

Fred H. Rowe, of L. W. McCoy's, reports some improvement in the cut of carnations for this firm, especially as to keeping quality, but the stock is still short of the demand. The way the trade was able to maintain prices on chrysanthemums, despite the tendency toward an oversupply, was especially gratifying.

H. A. Crouch, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, has lately introduced a new catch phrase in all of his advertisements. At the bottom, in bold type, is the following line: "'Seattle's Flowerphone,' Main 663," and he states it has brought in considerable business that can be directly traced to its use.

Felix Rosaia used nothing but pompons in his two large windows part of the past week, and found the red shades to be especially good sellers. He also moved large amounts of California sweet peas and violets.

Louis A. Goodfriend, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, has been calling on the trade here this week.

Henry Day, for a time connected with the trade in San Francisco, is now in this city with Rosaia Bros. H. M.

THANKSGIVING BUSINESS GOOD.

If the business enjoyed by local florists on Thanksgiving, despite rather discouraging conditions, is any criterion for Christmas, holiday trade this year ought to prove "a hummer." Florists are making preparations accordingly. As the entire country knows by this time, this city has been without street cars for some weeks, and although the buses handled the patronage splendidly, no city with 300,000 inhabitants, and a big suburban trade, can afford to be without street cars. Naturally, the business of some downtown florists suffered. The weather turned cold Wednesday, which made deliveries rather difficult, yet the trade is unanimous in saying that business made a substantial increase over the corresponding period last year. Stock was just about plentiful enough to go around. There are several large growers of chrysanthemums in this city, and they sent in a large supply of choice flowers. The demand for these was equal to the supply. Most of the chrysanthemums sold here brought from $2.50 to $8 per dozen at retail. There was a fine supply of excellent roses, which cleaned up well. Russells brought from $3 to $5, retail; Milady, $3, $4 and $5; Killarneys, from $1.50 to $3. Pompons were great favorites with the public, and sold for $1 and $1.50 per bunch. Orchids sold for $3 per bloom ,and violets for 75 cents per bunch. There were numerous pretty chrysanthemum plants to be seen in the flower shops, for which there was a ready sale. Other plants that brought good prices were begonias, primroses, peppers and cherry plants. A goodly number of Florists' Telegraph Delivery orders were received.

NOTES.

Max Spanner believes in being prepared, and his Madison street shop already has the holiday look. He is displaying a fine variety of made up Christmas wreaths, and is booking many advance orders. He reports Thanksgiving trade better than ever. Max is loyally sticking to the Sunday closing rule, working till 3 a. m. one Sunday morning to avoid conflicting with this agreement.

Schramm Brothers advertised heavily for "Turkey Day," and made a fine increase. They mailed out 1,200 neat folders to all F. T. D. members, and report many telegraph orders. Last Christmas, this firm was forced to close because all members of the organization had the influenza, so they are making big plans to make up this Christmas.

John Koelker is daily increasing his reputation for the excellence of the flowers he grows in his modern West Toledo range. This fall, he has been cutting many William Turner chrysanthemums that were great favorites with the patrons of retail shops. He cleaned up for Thanksgiving.

Metz & Bateman have changed the interior arrangement of their store in order to make it more convenient for buyers of flowers. They report a fine trade for Thanksgiving, and received numerous telegraph orders. Funeral work has been heavy here during the past week.

George Bayer & Son certainly had a tremendous crop of excellent Bonnaffons for Thanksgiving. They supplied most of the local florists, as well as sending a shipment of over 6,000 to to Detroit, where their chrysanthemums were in great demand.

The regular meeting of the florists' club was held at Helmer's Flower Shop instead of at S. N. Peck's. The evening was devoted to a debate on the Sunday closing agreement, the result of which was a determination to stick to the plan.

Weddings have never been so numerous as they have this fall and winter, and Mrs. J. B. Freeman is getting a goodly share of this business. Her window display this week is beautiful, and is attracting much favorable comment.

William Krueger had a fine supply of pompons, and had no difficulty in selling out. He will have some of these for Christmas, the first time these have been on the market at that date.

Florists, in common with the businessmen of the city, rejoiced greatly when street car service was resumed, December 5, at 3:30, just in time to take care of shoppers.

HOLIDAY TRADE PROSPECTS ENCOURAGING.

The outlook in this city for the holidays is very flattering, and every one interested in the production of flowers is well prepared to meet the demand of the season. It is a little too early yet for orders to be coming in, but the trade is very good day by day, and there is no let up in the buying. In addition to the constantly recurring weddings, which are of daily occurrence, there is now a good deal of business doing in parties when many fair buds are being ushered into society, making good the call for flowers. The supply of stock is very good and everything one could desire for either festive or mourning occasions may be had, only limited by the price itself. For the price continues to soar aloft, and as labor and the coal situation continue so unsatisfactory, there is every prospect of the price remaining at the top notch. There will be a slight advance in price for the holidays, somewhat higher than last year. Roses will hold at $8, $10 and $12, while carnations, which will not be so plentiful, will bring $3 and $4. There will be some violets, very few lily of the valley, their price making them nearly prohibitive, some sweet peas, and calendulas, which the florists have decided is profitable to force. Pretty combinations are made with other flowers. Narcissi will feature, too, in the sales from this time on. Chrysanthemums are about done, although a few sporadic ones of great beauty in white and pink are still noted. The plant situation is fine and promising. Already the cyclamens are in and on sale, much in demand. The poinsettias, too, will be fine, while Lorraine begonias, solanums, pretty pepper plants and pot narcissi are coming in for their share of popularity.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Company will be richly primed for the holidays. It will have an abundance of roses of all seasonable varieties, but carnations will be somewhat short. There will be a fine and full line of lovely plants, cyclamens and really wonderful poinsettias, with begonias and narcissi in abundance. It also has a good supply of fine prepared wreaths and a wonderful stock of bskets and holiday novelties, for which there is always a fine demand. Their Chattanooga branch is doing a most marvelous business.

The McIntyre Floral Company, with their usual good foresight and ability, have a magnificent stock for the Christmas trade, both in cut flowers and in plants of which they have a superabundance.

L. H. Haury & Sons still have a very pretty lot of chrysanthemums, but these will doubtless all be gone in a few days. Their preparedness for the holidays is most excellent.

Geny Bros. have some of the finest roses cut this season. Their Columbia are large fine buds with very long stems and easily bring $10 and $12 per dozen.

North Shore Hort. Society Show.

The second annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held in Durand art institute, Lake Forest, Ill., November 5, and was considered by all in attendance to be the best show in the history of the society. The effective placing of the groups, 16 in all, which added greatly to the attractiveness of the exhibition, was due to the able management of J. Newbore. F. Kuehne, A. Nielsen and others, to whom great credit is due. Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., staged a fine display of new and standard varieties of chrysanthemums and a fine exhibit of roses came from Joseph Kohout, of Libertyville. In the trade exhibits, not for competition, Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York, showed fine bush plants of chrysanthemums. The judging was in the capable hands of A. Martini and A. Johnson, of Lake Geneva, Wis., and J. Livingston, of Milwaukee. Seven silver cups and numerous other prizes were donated by the ladies of Lake Forest and by the trade, which were thankfully received by the society.

COAL SHORTAGE AFFECTS BUSINESS.

Business was affected to a large extent the past week by the coal shortage which resulted in a complete shutdown in some lines of industry and a restriction in others. The majority of the business houses were only allowed to operate their places from 11 o'clock to 5:30 o'clock and 9 o'clock Saturday evening up to December 8, when the hours were changed from 12 noon until 6 o'clock. Some of the dealers remained open after the specified time by using gasoline and kerosene lights which, according to some of the fuel administration members, is not living up to the spirit of the orders, while others declared they saw no harm in the merchants doing all the business possible after the regular hours as long as they conform with the main rulings in regard to the heat and electric light question. Another angle presented itself on December 7, when some of the dealers who had arranged to use gasoline or kerosene lights were notified that if they did so their insurance would be cancelled as well as that on the entire building. While the wholesalers and retailers are having their share of trouble the grower is wondering where he is going to come off at. Some have a couple of weeks' supply of coal on hand, while others have enough for a little over a month and a few almost enough for the entire season. Some coal was confiscated on the track from a few of the growers, which is leaving them facing a serious condition. The local fuel administration received an order from the central coal committee at Washington December 8, to the effect that enough coal could be released to prevent greenhouse stock from freezing but that they will not be allowed to operate under normal conditions. Just how the present existing conditions will affect the Christmas demand and supply is a hard problem to answer, but one thing is advisable and that is for everyone to place their orders for cut flowers and plants immediately so as to protect themselves against a probable last minute shortage. Another point to be taken into consideration is to have the stock leave the wholesale houses as early as possible for the express service is not as good as it might be and the buyer is foolish to take any chances on late deliveries when it is not absolutely necessary. Prices may appear high for Christmas at first glance, but they are not when the quality is taken into consideration, and, judging from the present conditions, it will be a question of getting stock for the buyer and not how much he is going to pay unless the most favorable weather prevails from now until then. It is possible that conditions might be better for the holidays as far as the ruling on the number of hours one may operate may be concerned, for it does not stand to reason that anyone would curtail business to any extent unless it is absolutely necessary. Notwithstanding the obstacles one is confronting at present everyone is making preparations for a big holiday business greens are scarce. Plants are practically all disposed of in this vicinity and demand for supplies is exceedingly heavy. The early buyer will derive the benefit this Christmas and it may not be out of order to advise everyone again to place their orders as early as possible. Do it now.

Holly receipts have been held back by flooded river bottom lands, where growing in the south. The price for good stock is $10 per case and none to be had at that. Next week may furnish relief.

Bouquet green in bulk sold at $22 per 100 pounds last week in the commission district.

NOTES.

The Retail Florists' Association held a meeting at the Hotel Morrison, Tuesday evening, December 9, at 8 p. m., when the principal topic of discussion was publicity. H. Seal, secretary of the Milwaukee Florists' Advertising Club, gave an interesting talk on the Wisconsin city percentage plan of advertising and was ably supported by William Zimmermann of that city, who presented the retailer's side of the question. Both knew what they were talking about and after they finished with the subject everyone present was in favor of adopting the plan. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, president of the Society of American Florists, also spoke on publicity and while the meeting was not very largely attended owing to the extreme cold weather, it was very interesting and much good was accomplished.

C. Cutler, who sold his retail business on the north side recently, has been in Wisconsin for a couple of weeks cutting Christmas trees and has several thousand to offer to the trade. He can be reached at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store.

Herbert Hansen, manager of Peter Reinberg's store, visited the firm's greenhouses, December 7, to get a line on stock for Christmas. Everything points to a big crop of Killarney Brilliant roses, which Peter Showsboe, Reinberg's able foreman, has in the pink of condition. The other varieties are doing nicely, but will not be in any oversupply for the holidays.

C. Kellen of Morton Grove is one of the growers in this vicinity who has a good supply of coal on hand which he figures will carry him through until the situation relieves itself so that he can operate his place again under normal conditions. He is cutting a splendid supply of carnations which are being handled by Kennicott Bros. Co.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are anticipating an early cleanup in carnations for Christmas at the advertised quotations and are advising their customers to place their orders immediately. Boxwood will be a leader in the green goods department at this establishment for the holidays.

H. Van Gelder, president and manager of Percy Jones, Inc., who has been on the sick list more or less for the past month, is back on the job greatly improved in health and all ready to handle the Christmas rush.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. have received many inquiries for Christmas stock the past week, which means that some buyers are making preparations to protect their supply against a possible last minute shortage.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has made arrangements to handle a large quantity of California holly for the holidays in addition to its regular Christmas offerings.

Miss Mary Gorey, of the J. A. Budlong Co.'s office staff, and John Mescal were quietly married December 3.

J. A. Budlong Co. had a pleasant visit from E. P. Anderson, of the Anderson Flower Shop, Hancock, Mich., December 9, who was here buying stock for his Christmas trade. He reports business as good, with the outlook very encouraging for Christmas.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has had a strong demand for plants for Christmas and will clean up completely in what they have to offer for the holidays. The cut flower department is featuring a fine line of roses and the supply department is busy as can be.

Zech & Mann are offering a good stock of heather in the smaller sizes for Christmas in addition to a complete line of cut flowers and greens. The heather is in brisk demand owing to the general scarcity of holiday plants in this vicinity.

Wietor Bros. are cutting splendid roses and carnations and will be in good crop for Christmas as in former years, but expect to clean up completely in all lines at an early hour.

The E. C. Amling Co.'s total sales for November were $11,000 better than for the same month of last year instead of $1,000 as mentioned in these columns last week.

The A. L. Randall Co. is busy filling Christmas orders and is well pleased with the amount of business done. Some fine stevia is included in the cut flower offerings at this establishment.

The John Kruchten Co. is one of the few houses in this vicinity that features the carnation, Aviator, regularly. It is the best paying variety at the Kruchten greenhouses.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is receiving many inquiries regarding Christmas stock and has already booked many nice orders.

E. Heffren, of the Heights Floral Co., Cleveland, O., was here on a Christmas shopping tour last week. He reports a very satisfactory season.

The Tribune of December 5 has the following: "Hundreds of acres of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and potted and other plants, valued at millions of dollars, are in danger of destruction, unless sufficient coal is procured by the florists to tide them over the present emergency according to Peter Reinberg, county board president, who has 25 acres under glass."

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., was an eye-witness to the bomb outrage Friday evening, December 5, on Hyde Park boulevard, when someone attempted to blow up one of the buildings in that section. Mr. Miller says that it was a wonder no one was hurt, as a couple was about to enter the building when the explosion occurred.

John Michelsen visited the trade at Cleveland, O., last week and the growers at Richmond, Ind., December 5, where he met W. J. Keimel and Paul Weiss, who joined him on a tour of inspection of the establishments there on that day.

There was no pick-up service, December 10, by the American Railway Express Co., owing to the cold weather, so the dealers were obliged to take their packages to the train.

Wm. E. Fischer, who has been superintendent of the McCormick estate, at Lake Forest, for the past three years, returned east last week.

The embargo to express shipments to Detroit, Mich., was lifted, Tuesday, December 9.

NOVEMBER BUSINESS SHOWS GOOD RECORD.

Local florists have had a very satisfactory business for November, the volume probably equalling that of November, 1918, which, owing to the influenza epidemic, was unusually heavy. Stocks have been generally adequate and of good quality. Chrysanthemums, of course, lead in demand, and are still in good supply. Thanksgiving day trade showed a good increase over last year, although the weather was very unfavorable, both Wednesday and Thursday.

NOTES.

Chas. P. Mueller is equipping to burn oil in part of his heating plant, thus providing against a possible fuel shortage, should the coal situation show no improvement. He is now a Shriner, having taken that degree during the recent Masonic reunion here.

Frank Cluff is adding a new greenhouse, and also doing some rebuilding, which will greatly improve his place.

Visitors: —— —— Cheeseman, representing Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York; —— —— Lambert, of Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind.; Rush Alexander of Lindley Box Co., Marion, Ind.

LIMITED DEMAND AND SCANT SUPPLY.

There did not appear to be much business the past week, but with a scant supply in all lines, except chrysanthemums, there was no accumulation, and everybody appeared satisfied. Chrysanthemum growers, with the exception of a few who had early varieties, seem to have gauged the market quite well, as week after week passed without any surplus, and all sold at prices that were for the most part satisfactory. Roses are not equal to the demand. Double White Killarney and Ophelia are the most plentiful. Premier, Russell and Columbia are all in the running, with flowers getting better every day. Every week, Premier shows up to better advantage. Growers who went heavily into this variety, are satisfied that they are going to get a "run for their money." How it will behave after the Christmas crop is off, will be the test. Carnations are becoming more plentiful, but all the colored sorts are quickly taken. All good stock brings eight cents, with fancy, a couple of notches higher. Sweet peas are a factor. There are some very choice sprays, such as are not generally seen until January or February. They sell well. Snapdragon is good stock, as is mignonette. Violets are scarce. Calendulas are increasing; there are too many singles, but the quality, it is said, will improve with the cold weather. A good many callas are seen, but they sell up at prices that should make them a profitable stock. Cattleyas are a little more plentiful, but nothing as yet below $1.00 each, with good stock bringing $1.50 to $2.00. Yellow and white daisies, a little heliotrope and bouvardia are among the small flowers, while there is plenty of fine stevia. Yellow and white narcissi are seen in all the stocks, and appear to find a market. White lilac is in, and there is a little lily of the valley almost every day.

December 8.—The bad weather of the past few days has shortened crops considerably, shipments this morning being very light. There is not much demand, but prices are firm, with an upward tendency.

CHRISTMAS PLANT STOCKS.

In looking over the choice plants for the holiday sales, it is evident that this market is not up to that of former years. The only plentiful items are poinsettias and a good line of ferns in all sizes. Cyclamens are far below the demand, and some of the stocks are not any too well in flower. There are but very few ardisias, a very little heather and scarcely any dwarf oranges. Solanums of the Cleveland type are in fair supply and there are a few good celestial peppers. The Robert Craig Co. has several large houses of poinsettias in pots and made-up pans. These are in splendid shape, as fine as they have ever grown. Two houses planted out for cutting also look well. Their next quantity stock is cyclamens, now almost all sold. Much of the stock is well flowered. A block of ardisias, well berried, are all sold. House after house of brilliantly colored crotons are going fast. They are in all sizes from 3-inch pots up, to splendid stock in made-up pans. Pandanus Veitchii and dracænas in variety, together with Areca lutescens are all splendid for making up plant baskets. Stock for this purpose is marked off in blocks in all the houses. There is a wonderful line of ferns. Boston, Teddy, Jr., Scottii, Smithii and Norwood are seen at their best. There are wonderful specimens of the first three in large sizes. W. K. Harris has, as a novelty, a block of azaleas, which will be in good shape. Pandanus Veitchii and a lot of made up combinations of foliage plants are a feature. A house of cyclamens look well, as does another of poinsettias. Bird's nest fern, a specialty here, fills two houses. It is in splendid condition. There are several houses of Harrisii, Teddy, Jr., and Scottii in various sizes, all splendidly grown. Primula Townsendii is another quantity stock, some of which will be in for the holidays. H. I. Foust, of Merion, has a superb lot of cyclamens. They are fine plants, well flowered, and all sold. There are two houses, 200 feet in length, very nearly all of which will be full of flowers by December 18. His 8-inch stock is wonderfully fine. Poinsettias, in various sizes, fill two houses. They look very well, particularly the made up pans. A good sized block of celestial peppers are covered with fruits and flowers. A very classy lot. His large house of Teddy, Jr., and Scottii ferns is a picture. Most of them are in six to eight-inch pots. Aschmann Brothers have a large stock of ferns, fine bushy plants, poinsettias, begonias, solanums and primulas. They report a great business.

FUEL CONSERVATION.

Alfred M. Campbell has called attention to the coal situation, saying that it was more serious than appeared on the surface, particularly for those who use bituminous, which it is now almost impossible to get, and that even cars enroute were being taken on orders of the fuel commission. Oil as fuel is being used in a number of industrial establishments with success, the quality being a low grade crude oil, which with the aid of an electric blower or fan, was mixed with air and forced into the ash pit of any construction of boiler, where it made an intense and continuous heat. The burner takes the place of the ash pit doors. The grates are removed, and when the gas is lighted, the flame projects the length and width of the coal fire space. With crude oil at 5 cents a gallon, it is said not to cost more than coal, and provides, according as the oil is fed, any degree of heat continuously without attention. The oil is kept in tanks, and fed to the fire by gravity. So much interest is taken in the subject, that it will be made a feature of the January meeting of the florists' club, when all the data on oil burning devices will be presented by experts. Water grates for burning culm and coal dirt will also be considered. Growers should make it a point to be present, and get all the information they can on this matter, so vital to their business.

LOCAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The collections for the advertising campaign are now in force, and it is expected that a goodly sum will soon be at the disposal of the committee. So far, the number signed up includes 62 growers and 22 retailers. Among them are prominent men in their lines. A number who object, for one reason or another, to the percentage plan, have announced they would contribute a lump sum equivalent to their percentage of sales. A number of the plant growers have also signified their desire to come in on the same basis. Various advertising ideas are being considered, mostly through the columns of the daily press, which will be ready to be launched when the probable monthly income is ascertained. It is expected that accessions to the ranks of the supporters will continue until at least 90 per cent of the trade is in line.

CLUB MEETING.

The December meeting of the florists' club was most interesting. President-Elect A. L. Miller, of the society of American Florists, made a most optimistic address in connection with the future of the society, stating that over 600 members had become life members the past year. There were exhibits of well grown Christmas plants by Wm. K. Harris and Harry I. Faust, a vase of Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late Pink from the Wm. F. Kastings Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and a vase of a new cerise seedling rose from Edward Towill. Eight new members were elected, and five proposed.

NOTES.

J. Otto Thilow spent a day in Honolulu with H. C. Geiger two weeks ago. He is now on his way to Australia.

The Robert Craig Co. has sold its property at 49th and Market streets, to be used as a recreation center for the Catholic high schools, one of which was built on the 49th and Chestnut street corner. The property consists of a half block running from 49th to 50th on Market, extending back to Ludlow. Possession will be given immediately after the Easter season of 1920. Mr. Craig was very well pleased with the price obtained.

H. H. Battles and Pennock Bros., both sent special messengers with flowers for an important coming out tea in Pittsburgh last week.

Frank Traendly, E. Dailledouze and E. Asmus, New York, spent several days the past week visiting the rose growers of this vicinity. W. P. Ford, New York, was also a visitor. Ernst Ashley, Allentown, Pa.; and W. F. Gude and E. Mayberry, of Washington, D. C., spent a couple of days buying Christmas plants.

TRADE DULL BETWEEN HOLIDAYS.

Business was quiet during the past week. With one holiday just over, and a greater one near at hand, the people now seem to be practicing conservation of cash. The supply of stock was moderate, but there was quite enough to supply the demand. A considerable quantity of chrysanthemums continue to arrive, but the quality of but a few is good. On orchids, there has been an increase in supply, the C. Trianæ being now on the market in considerable quantities. Lily of the valley continues in light supply, and the best is wholesaling at $40 per 100. There is a marked increase, both in the quantity and quality of sweet peas, long stems being now frequently seen. Of the tea roses, Premier, Columbia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Russell and Ophelia are all showing fine blooms. In carnations, Mrs. C. W. Ward continues to hold the championship, considering all features. Laddie is conceded to be a fine carnation, but is, as yet, only appearing in small lots. The area planted with it that ships to this market may be small, otherwise it must be a slow producer, as it is now time for a carnation to be showing "pep." There is a light supply of violets, but plenty to supply the call, at moderate prices, singles seeming to be preferred.

December 8.—Business is quiet, but on account of a light supply, prices are firm.

NOTES.

The wholesale district was severely shocked on the night of December 5, and though it was after business hours, in a way the after effects will be felt for some time. The trouble began in front of an Edison company sub-station, 54-56 West 27th street, when a short circuit, it is said, ignited gas in the sewers. Manhole covers flew in the air all along the street, and the disturbance extended to Broadway and south to 26th street. Leaking gas mains fed the fire, which followed. An immense quantity of underground wiring of the Edison company was burned out. As a result, florists and everyone else in the district, are now using candles, which is particularly annoying to the wholesale florists. Twenty-seventh street, between Broadway and 6th avenue, is closed to both vehicles and pedestrians, excepting as to the latter, residents of the block.

Frank H. Traendly, Eugene Dailledouze and Edward Asmus visited Philadelphia, December 2-3. E. J. Fancourt took them on an auto trip to visit leading rose growers. Among the ranges visited were those of the Joseph Heacock Co., at Roelofs; A. Farenwald, Victor Groshens and Edward Towill, at Roslyn. They also attended the meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' club. President-elect, A. L. Miller, of the Society of American Florists, was also a visitor at the club meeting.

Henry Hart, of 1000 Madison avenue, arranged an artistic decoration in St. Bartholomew's church, December 3, for the wedding of Miss Priscilla Thorne Taylor to Lieut. Berwick Bruce Lanier, U. S. N. The chancel was beautifully decorated with tall palms, cibotiums and a fine arrangement of many pink chrysanthemums, the latter being also used to mark the pews. The walls, balconies and chandeliers were handsomely decked with smilax.

Although it appears that the florists, having past experience in mind, are generally well supplied with coal, drastic measures are being taken by the railroads, municipalities and manufacturing concerns to conserve it. The New York Centrl R. R. has given notice that the famous Twentieth Century Limited to Chicago, which has had a daily run for over 20 years—bad snowstorms excepted—will be discontinued December 10.

Meyer Cohen, president of the Meyer Cohen Music Publishing Co., publishers of the song, "Say It With Flowers," which appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of December 6, died in the Misericordia hospital, December 3, as a result of blood poisoning. He had been popular in theatrical and musical circles, and his funeral, December 5, was largely attended by the members.

The basement of the Coogan building, Sixth avenue and 26th street—once a bowling alley and booze resort—which was vacant for many months, has been thoroughly rejuvenated and will be occupied by several wholesale florists.

There is much comment in the wholesale district on the fine quality of roses that Traendly & Schenck are receiving from the Rowayton, Conn., greenhouses. It is all good, but the Premiers and Mrs. Aaron Wards are exceptionally fine.

Richard Wenham, long connected with the trade of this city, arranged a fine decoration for a reception at the home of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, December 5. Yellow chrysanthemums were the leading features.

John T. Shore, a highly respected private gardener of Harrison, N. Y., and well known in this city, died at his home in Harrison, November 12. A more extended notice will be found in the obituary column.

J. Spiro, well known in the trade as a buyer, has given up the project of opening a store at Fifth avenue and 47th street, and has resumed his former position as buyer for Charles Abrams, of Brooklyn.

Max Schling was kept busy during the past week with both wedding and funeral work. A large number of expensive funeral designs of lilies and orchids were noticed in his store.

John Weir, well known in the trade, has returned to a position with James Weir, Inc., Brooklyn.

W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, N. Y., was looking over the wholesale district, December 8.

Guido, Inc., had a large funeral order for Wachington, Conn., December 3.

A Christmas Message to Florists

Dear Friends:

Do not worry about the people that are spending tens of thousands of dollars for fine clothes and jewelry. They have the right to spend their money as they please, and if they can afford expensive clothes and jewelry, they Can Afford Flowers, so Think Flowers, Talk Flowers, Advertise Flowers, keep good ones and you will sell them; that is Our Creed. And if you wish to have your Christmas Orders for New York and Vicinity carefully filled, send them to us.

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, December 10, was $60.

LIBERAL consignments of raffia to New York brokers are enroute.

FERTILIZER makers are classed as nonessentials and their use of coal limited.

VISITED CHICAGO: Emil Hertz, Copenhagen, Denmark; A. T. Ferrell and wife, Saginaw, Mich.

ALBANY, N. Y.—It is reported that Arthur Cowee has sold his gladiolus stock to a New York city concern.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Hunter announce the arrival of Fred Hathaway Hunter, November 12.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—Rogers Bros., of Chicago and Alpena, Mich., will contract for 2,000 acres of their crops in this vicinity this season.

THE Hotel Pfister, Milwaukee, Wis., has been selected as the meeting place of the American Seed Trade Association during its annual convention, June 22-24, 1920.

ONION SEED acreage in the United States for 1919 was 6,730 acres, as compared with 7,260 in 1918; production in 1919 (estimated), 2,618,000 pounds, in 1918, 1,685,258 pounds.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened steady and December and January unchanged, December 6, with cash offered at $30.50. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.40, December $5.60, March $5.85, and April $5.85.

LILY of the valley pips, sand packed, are being held up at New York by the federal horticultural board. It is not known what the final outcome will be, but the importers who have complied with the law feel they should be protected against those who have not done so.

THE Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., has issued Bulletin No. 797 on "Commercial Dutch Bulb Culture in the United States," in which it says, this country uses about $2,000,000 worth of thees bulbs yearly in normal times, and has produced hardly $25,000 worth in any one year.

No particular problems were discussed at the get-together meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association, held at Kansas City, Mo., November 29. The association went strongly on record as favoring a general campaign of advertising by seedsmen to promote more extensive gardening throughout the country.

CINCINNATI, O.—H. B. McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., recently injured in an auto accident, has not as yet returned to his desk, and may not be able to do so for some time, owing to shock to his nervous system. B. W. Dulaney, with the J. Chas. McCullough Seed Co., is attending to business as usual.

F. G. CUTHBERTSON, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., sailed for England on the S. S. Adriatic, November 29.

Grass Seed.

Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, December 10, were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 to $11.25 per 100 pounds; March $12.75 sold; $12.50 bid for year; $12.50 sellers. Red clover, $40 to $48 per 100 pounds.

At Paris, Ky., December 10, new crop Kentucky blue grass was quoted in car lots, 19-pound test, at $24.65; 17-pound test, $23.20; less than car lots, 35 cents per 100 pounds higher.

Holly and Green.

Holly receipts have been held back by flooded river bottom lands, where growing in the south. The price for good stock is $10 per case, and none to be had at that. Next week may furnish relief, or higher prices if stock must come by express.

Bouquet green is a scarce article. Twenty cents per pound is taken in Chicago and in small lots, 30 cents in New York. In the Chicago commission district last week, bulk green sold at $22 per 100 pounds.

Onion Sets.

Onion set business in the Chicago district is rather slow at the present time, with some sales reported at $3.00 for yellows and $3.50 for whites. Reds are somewhat higher than the yellows on account of the limited supply. These prices are for prompt shipment. Some recent sales are reported from Atlantic points at $4.50 for colors and $5.00 for whites, March shipment. Chicago growers are seeking an advance on 1920 contracts.

The government report of December 4, gives acreage and commercial production figures as follows, the production in pounds:

Acreage	3,708	3,818
Production	21,900,000 (Est)	46,068,711

Vegetable Seed Production in 1919.

The acreage and production of dwarf snap beans, carrot, watermelon, pepper and spinach, in the United States, were much smaller in 1919 than in 1918, according to the government seed reporting service. Also, because of the abnormally low yield, the production of onion sets was considerably less than usual, and the production of garden pole beans was 15 per cent less than in 1918. The total production of cabbage seed this year was doubtless the largest in the history of this country. There was also a marked increase in the production of mangel beet, cucumber, onion, parsley, radish, salsify, summer and winter squash and English and Swede turnip over that of 1918 because of the higher yields obtained. The figures are given in the following table:

Kind of Seed	Commercial Acreage Planted 1919 Acrs.	1918 Acrs.	Commercial Production 1919 Est. Pounds	1918 Pounds

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Loui ville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

THE Cape Cod cranberry crop totals 340,000 barrels this year, nearly double last year's crop.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.00 to $5.25; celery, Michigan, square box, $1.25 to $1.50; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 40 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, $1.00; tomatoes, per lug, $2.00 to $2.50.

New York, Dec. 8.—Celery, per doz. roots, 15 to 75 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $4.00 to $7.00; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.50 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound 15 to 45 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $4.00.

Wisconsin Seed Potatoes.

Inspection of potatoes for seed in Wisconsin was begun six years ago by the state association of potato growers and includes a field inspection in which the plants are culled out on the basis of rejection for degenerate vine diseases, unsatisfactory stand and cultural conditions, varietal mixtures, and other minor causes. The second or bin inspection rejects the crop that shows coarse, misshapen stock, common scab, late blight, rhizoctonia, and general undesirable conditions caused by frost injury and rough handling.

Wisconsin Cucumbers.

Wisconsin, according to the bureau of crop estimates, grew 7,604 acres of cucumbers in 1919, so 78 of the 88 factories operating in the state reported. The yield averaged 63 bushels to the acre. The total estimated production was 479,052 bushels, 22 per cent of the total production of the United States, 2,162,039 bushels. Although in 1918, the number of factories operating in Wisconsin was less, the total acreage contracted for was larger, 10,790 acres, and the average yield was 100 bushels. The production all over the country was higher that year, and Wisconsin contributed only 16 per cent of the total supply.

Tomatoes Under Glass.

December is a favorite month with many growers to start their tomato seeds for the spring tomato crop under glass. This early start is necessary where no warm house is available. Coming along with lettuce in 50° or less, tomatoes are very slow. Personally, we would prefer a later start with more heat, but we must be governed by circumstances. We have always held that of all the crops that we grow, we should never starve tomatoes intended for forcing. Therefore, use a fairly rich soil from the start, and regulate growth by controlling the water supply.

As soon as up, water very sparingly—by that we mean infrequently making the intervals as long as possible. This will force them to produce roots. Next, never crowd the plants—a check is something they never forget. It used to be a favorite method to pot-grow the plants. However, this is losing ground. While there is no direct objection to pot-grown plants, there is the constant danger of the plants becoming pot bound which means a check to their further development. There is no question whatever that the sooner the young plants can go into permanent beds, the better the chances for a crop. To this end, the practice of getting among lettuce in February or March is good practice.

MARKETMAN.

Providence, R. I.

BAD WEATHER BOOSTS PRICES.

The demand during the past week was very good despite the fact that prices are soaring at present due to unfavorable weather conditions, cloudy and cold. Paper Whites are arriving better and the call for this flower has improved. Roses are good, but meet with little demand and the same is true of carnations, the price having advanced as high as $10 per 100 for first quality stock during the week. Violets are short but sweet peas will soon be making their appearance in larger numbers.

NOTES.

The stores are dressing up for the Christmas trade and the brilliant red is beginning to attract attention. While there will be nothing out of the ordinary offered this year, a very good trade is anticipated.

T. O'Connor has added a Dodge truck to his delivery service, one of the finest vehicles seen in this city.

Albert Holscher has one large house of sweet peas which will soon be ready for cutting.

H. A. T.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—The Pioneer Floral Co. has added two new houses to its range at a cost of $8,000, increasing capacity 25 per cent. The establishment now comprises 14 houses.

MANETTI stocks are arriving.

ALBERT LEA, MINN.—Clarence Wedge, of the Wedge Nursery, is wintering at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

FRESNO, CALIF.—Light frosts in the San Joaquin valley, are reported to have resulted in some damage to late Emperor shipping grapes.

AT Painesville, Ohio, where the well-known Storrs & Harrison Co., is located, there are some 17,000 acres of land, devoted to nursery stock by various firms.

THE 1919 apple crop in Missouri is reported but 48 per cent of a full yield and only 70 per cent in quality, according to a bulletin of the state department of agriculture.

TOPPENISH, WASH.—The Toppenish Nursery Co. is sending out the largest force of road salesmen in its history and is well supplied with stock to meet the expected increase in business.—H. M. ,

THE American Association of Nurserymen is compiling a list of surplus nursery stocks for the use of members. For full particulars, address Executive Secretary John Watson, 400 Nassau street, Princeton, N. J.

CINCINNATI, O.—It is feared that the bore, a pest that attacks trees under the bark and causes their death within a year, will exterminate practically every birch in this city. The state department of agriculture has been unable to find a remedy.

"PLUM Pollination" is the title of Bulletin No. 310 recently issued by the College of Agriculture, Berkeley, Calif., covering experiments with plums and prunes that have been carried on by the division of pomology at the university farm during the past five years.

WITH a view to meeting the needs of apple growers who have not placed their business on the most profitable basis, the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture has just published Farmers' Bulletin No. 1080, "Preparation of Barreled Apples for the Market."

STOCKTON, CALIF. — An organization similar to the California Raisin Growers' Association is to be organized, which will have for its object the marketing of wine and table grapes as second grade raisins. Syrup, grape juice and other products will also furnish a market for the growers.

Wood Water Main Endures 130 Years.

About 50 feet of wooden water main, installed in Boston in 1789, and used continually as part of the system for bringing water to the city until 1840, have been dug up, and while the outside surface is rotted, the wood is still hard and apparently as good as ever. The wood, at first claimed to be cedar, is, according to the foreman in charge of the work, pitch pine.

New Stocks for American Fruit Growers.

Dr. Wm. A. Taylor in his report as chief of the bureau of plant industry, has the following:

One of the big problems of American fruit growing is that of stocks resistant to diseases and insects and suitable for our wide range of soil and climate. Promising new stocks of pear, apple, peach, cherry, and plum have been assembled from foreign countries, chiefly the Orient. Nearly 150 pounds of seed from pear trees supposed to be resistant to fire-blight have been secured through exploration in China. Seedling stocks are being grown at widely separated places, and distributions are being made to nurserymen and others in order to determine their disease resistance, congeniality, and adaptability to varying soils and climates. About 75,000 new pear stocks have been distributed.

BLIGHT-RESISTANT CHESTNUT TREES.

The Chinese chestnut (Castanea mollissima) has been found one of the most promising trees to combat disease. This chestnut was found in China, where for years the trees had to struggle against blight. Several thousands of these young trees are now being grown, also several thousand hybrid chestnuts, with the object of testing them for disease resistance and nut production.

J. A. PETERSON & SONS

Westwood, Cincinnati, Ohio

Pueblo, Colo.

Business in the "Pittsburgh of the West" was fairly good for Thanksgiving day notwithstanding the fact that there is much unemployment due to strikes. Cold weather and a good covering of fresh snow seemed to stimulate late sales. Chrysanthemums sold freely and with pompons were the standard flowers for baskets and table decorations.

NOTES.

We read with much interest the account of the fine show staged by the Denver Society of Ornamental Horticulturists in that city. Colorado Springs was on hand with excellent displays. Why was not Pueblo on the list also? Concerted action should be taken to bring our business forcibly before the public. What better way than in these splendid exhibitions which attract thousands of visitors?

Jacob Pistorius, gardener at the state hospital for the insane, is now enjoying a well-earned winter vacation. He is making plans to enter the florist business for himself in either this state or California, if a suitable opportunity presents itself.

The rose range of G. Fleischer & Son is now in full bloom but the demand is not up to standard and does not compare with the corresponding period of 1918, influenced by the influenza.

The local chapter of the Red Cross realized several hundred dollars on the sale of chrysanthemums grown by George Lane in the city greenhouses in Mineral Palace park.

Fire which started in an overheated stove in the residence recently resulted in the complete destruction of the range of Oscar Tweed.

John Stuckwisch, father of Charles Stuckwisch, florist at the state hospital, is now with the Bolt Floral Co.

Repair that Leaky or Cracked Boiler Without Shutting Off the Heat.

EVERY greenhouse man who has ever had a leaky or cracked boiler knows what a lot of time, trouble and money that means.

Yet all the fuss and worry attendant upon the old-fashioned method of repairing is now entirely unnecessary.

"X"—the wonderful Boiler Liquid—will do $200 worth of repair work for $10, and do it in about half an hour.

"X" is a Scientific Process of Repairing Without Dismantling or Welding.

"X" is an absolute Liquid. It is simply poured into the boiler and instantly combines itself with the water. In sizzling out through the leak or crack the "X" is changed by the atmospheric oxygen into a metal-like solid, making a permanent repair. This repair is gradually hardened by the heat in the boiler, so that it stands a pressure of over one-quarter of a ton.

The surplus "X" that remains in the water automatically stops all new Leaks due to expansion or other causes. In this way "X" Liquid makes the boiler (and in a hot water system, the entire system) absolutely Leakproof.

Makes Boilers Rust-proof and Scale-proof. Saves Coal.

The chemical composition of "X" Liquid is such that it absorbs all free oxygen in the water. This prevents the metal from Rusting. "X" also prevents the lime and other scale-forming elements in the water from depositing layers of Scale on the walls. "X" keeps the boiler Rust-proof and Scale-proof.

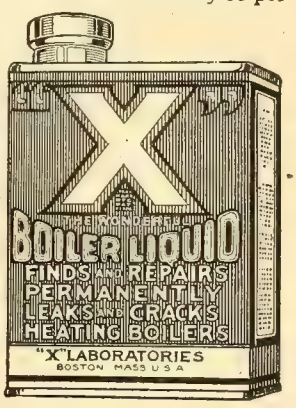
"X" does not evaporate or lose its strength with age. When new water is added it combines itself with this water and performs its functions again and again.

"X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious ingredients. It cannot clog the air valves; in fact, it makes frequent repacking of valves unnecessary.

A Strong Guarantee!

You take no chance in using "X" Liquid. It is unconditionally guaranteed to make good. If it fails, you get a new can—or your money back.

But your greatest guarantee of the value of "X" is the fact that it is used, sold and recommended by 99 per cent of the manufacturers of boilers and radiators. It is used by the U. S. Government.



If your boiler cracks or leaks this Winter, you don't have to worry about your greenery—if you keep a can of "X" Liquid handy. Just get a can of "X" and do the repair job yourself.

Get "X" Liquid from your steam-fitter, or we will ship, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

CARNATION STEM ROT.

By P. A. Lehenbauer, Plant Physiologist and Pathologist, Division of Floriculture, University of Illinois, Urbana.

Cause of Great Loss to Growers.

Carnation stem rot causes a loss to growers of from one-tenth to twenty per cent, an average of over two per cent in the glass house, and an average of over three per cent in the field. These data are given by Dr. George Peltier in a recent bulletin of the Illinois floriculture experiment station. Dr. Peltier made a careful study over a period of several years and his bulletin, No. 223, contains some valuable suggestions along the line of control of the disease.

Carnation stem rot often is called a soil disease by pathologists. This does not imply that the soil, as such, is at fault, either in chemical composition or in physical structure, but it means that the causal organism of the disease, lives normally in the soil. The direct cause of the disease is a fungus. Practically all soils are inhabited by this fungus, a point which must be kept in mind in any consideration of methods of control.

In attempting to control the destructive work of the fungus of stem rot, two methods naturally suggest themselves. One consists in spraying the plants with a fungicide in order to destroy the fungus; the other, in treating the soil with a disinfectant or some other agent, which will either eliminate the fungus from the soil or inhibit its growth. Neither of these methods is practical or effective. The reasons are evident when we fully appreciate the life habits of the fungus.

We must keep in mind, as said above, that so far as is known, all soils harbor the fungus. Soil treatment, therefore, is very difficult, if not even useless. Dr. Peltier has shown by experiment that the fungus may be destroyed in soil by steam sterilization prior to filling the benches. What effect this steam sterilization may have on the properties of the soil is not yet clear. We know, of course, that certain other organisms, primarily bacteria, are essential in soil for the continuous growth of plants. However, be it as it may, steam sterilization of soil cannot be entirely effective in eradicating the stem rot fungus, for whenever carnation plants are benched, the introduction of the fungus into the bench cannot be avoided. Small quantities of soil, clinging to the roots, may and, in all probability, do contain the fungus. Very small quantities of soil introduced from the field into clean soil of the benches will reinoculate the latter. But there is still another point in this connection. The fungus enters the bark of the stem at or just below the surface of the soil, while the plant is growing in the field. Such a plant need not necessarily show any symptoms of the disease. When such an infected plant, apparently clean from soil, is placed in clean sterile soil of the bench, the latter is very readily reinoculated.

Disinfectants Ineffective.

Applying disinfectants to the soil at this time does little good. Small quantities of a disinfectant, although deadly to the fungus, when growing in the test tube, are not so in the soil. This is probably because of the adsorptive and absorptive properties of soil. Larger quantities of the disinfectant, though the fungus may be destroyed, are injurious to the plant, and may do more harm than the fungus itself.

The second suggested method of control, that of spraying the plants, is equally ineffective. The fungus enters the bark of the stem at a point just above and just below the surface of the soil. After entering the stem, other conditions being favorable, the fungus penetrates more deeply into the tissues, eventually girdling the stem. Fungicides do not penetrate the bark sufficiently to kill the fungus within the tissues. Spraying at this time cannot, therefore, be effective.

Methods of control must be directed along other lines. Let us turn over the whole situation and look at it from the other side. It has often been said that "prevention is better than cure"; this is a good thought to keep in mind when we try to control fungus diseases. Medical men tell us that pathogenic bacteria of man are cosmopolitan and are nearly always about us. Many of us have the diphtheria organism in our mouth or throat, yet we are well. Some of us have the typhoid bacillus in our bodies, yet we do not have typhoid fever. How do we explain this? Why are we not sick when these germs are present in our body? Because our body is resistant, or in other words, not susceptible to the attack of the germ. We keep our body in condition, as it is often expressed.

Plants are very similar to animals in many respects. Plants also are living beings, in many cases as sensitive as animals, and possibly even more responsive to the conditions of the environment in which they live. They are attacked by germs and disease producing organisms as well, and respond in a somewhat similar way. Let us, therefore, look at the situation from the standpoint of the plant, and try to determine what the factors and conditions are which enable the plant to ward off the attacks of the fungus and make it resistant to the disease.

Disease Governed by Temperature.

Dr. Peltier has shown by data, that the extent of disease follows closely upon the temperature conditions. He also has found that the fungus, although it lives and can thrive over a wide range of temperature, is very active at only a relatively high degree of temperature. He tells us that the optimum temperature, that is the best temperature for growth, is from 86 to 88 degrees Fahrenheit. We know, of course, that the best temperature for growing carnations is approximately from 50 to 53 degrees at night, and from 60 to 62 degrees during the day. Here we have a key to the situation which opens up a method of attack. When the temperature is relatively low, the fungus is not very strong and active; it cannot do much harm. The carnation plant, on the other hand, is strong and active and, consequently, in good condition. When the temperature is high, the fungus is strong and active, while the plant is not strong, but is in poor condition. When, therefore, the latter prevails, infection takes place, and the plant, consequently, becomes diseased.

Carnation stem rot is most prevalent a short time after benching. This is to be expected, because at this time, the plant is somewhat upset and not quite normal. In other words, its resisting powers are somewhat low. However, the important fact is that stem rot is most prevalent when benching is followed by a period of high temperature. At high temperature, not only is the carnation plant "out of condition," but the fungus is at its maximum vigor.

Mr. Doran of the New Hampshire station, experimenting with various kinds of fungi spores, has recently found that the optimum temperature for the germination of the spores of carnation rust is about 57 degrees F. This happens to be about the day temperature for the carnation. It is, however, higher than is the night temperature of the carnation house. He also found that the optimum temperature for the germination of the spore of snapdragon rust is 50 degrees. This is about the night temperature for growing snapdragons. These data indicate that snapdragon rust has a better chance to grow in our glass houses than does carnation rust, and it is probably one reason why snapdragon rust is a more serious disease than is carnation rust.

Our method of control, then, consists in a careful consideration of the temperature requirements of both fungus and plant. If we keep the carnation plants at a relatively low temperature, the optimum for that plant, we should have no stem rot. The high outdoor temperatures in July and August, when the carnations are benched, of course, makes control of temperature under glass difficult. Benching later in the season will often enable us to avoid this difficulty. Other conditions of the growing house should be watched carefully. One of these is water, not only the amount in the soil, but also that in the air. Dr. Peltier gives us also some interesting suggestions on this point, but space does not permit a discussion at this time. The bulletin may be had free by writing the Illinois station at Urbana. In closing, we want again to put emphasis on this point: in order to prevent loss of plants from carnation stem rot, keep the environment at the optimum for the plant. Keep the plant in a vigorous condition at all times, and it will not be susceptible to disease .

Miniature Pyramid of Cut Boxwood.

A Quick Selling Novelty. The Illustration Does not Show the Red Berries or Ribbon, Which Give It the Christmas Color. Height 12 Inches.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gude Bros. Co., in calling attention to its telegraph delivery department, has issued an attractive circular, 18x22 inches, featuring the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," and reproductions of telegraph orders from a number of cities.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Miniature Christmas Novelties.

There are a number of little novelties that can be made up at this time, which will be found attractive to customers, and can be sold at a very good profit. One of these is a miniature pyramid boxwood, which is made of short, fluffy sprays, tied in pyramid shape, from six to nine inches in height, with a spread of from four to six inches in diameter at the bottom, and is then set firmly into a small, fancy four-inch jardiniere. This had best be filled with small pebbles, covered with moss, the weight of which keeps it from being easily tipped over. A few artificial holly berries, dotted in small clusters, together with a knot of red ribbon, gives it a Christmas coloring and finish that adds much more than its cost. A cone of moss, with a stick in the center to fasten it in the pot, can be filled with stemmed boxwood to make the same effect. Another plan is to tie the branches together so that all stems shall be long enough to reach the water, this, when placed in a fancy pot of water, will then last for weeks. A red ruscus pyramid, the same size as the box, also arranged as if growing from a small fancy jardiniere, is another good seller. The same imitation may also be made from selected ground pine, and touched up with the artificial holly and the miniature red bow.

Miniature gilt and silvered ruscus crescent wreaths, decorated at the full part with small silvered and gilt cones, and tied with narrow red ribbon, will prove a good selling novelty.

A few medium-sized open cones, strung in a tapering cluster, with a sprig or two of prepared ground pine, and a little artificial holly for color, tied with a red bow and narrow ribbon to hang up, will catch the fancy of many customers.

The largest cones obtainable, decorated individually at the stem and with green sea moss, a little ruscus and artificial holly, and tied with a red bow, narrow red cord and tassels, make a pretty little conceit to hang from the chandiliere in front of a mirror or in the window.

Slender red chenille wreaths, tied with a red bow to a selected branch of holly, will be just the thing for a small gift, taking perhaps the place of a Christmas card.

The miniature trellis boxes can be filled with small plants of box made from sprigs of boxwood. Small leaved ivy can cover the trellis, and at one upper end tie a three-inch chenille wreath with narrow red ribbon. This will be called "cute", and moved off at a good price.

Miniature wreaths of all box or red ruscus, or the fine, open flowered statice that is now available for the first time since before the war, will, if featured, be found good sellers. These should be crescent shaped, from four to five inches in diameter over all, and tied with narrow red ribbon, sprigs of red or silvered ruscus or small silvered or gilt cones at the ribbon, are attractive. They can be placed inside, on top of flowers, tied on the box outside, or may also be attached to choice plants or baskets.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The busy days of the holiday season are here at last; the rush is on, but if handled with system, there is little anxiety as to the outcome. The result of the planning and preparatory work of the dull summer months finds those who took advantage of the idle hours, and turned them to account, to have but to add the finishing touches to their wreaths and other designs in chenille and other prepared materials, and display them to the best advantage.

Sunday will, with the store closed, give a day free from interruptions, in which, with the enlarged force, much can be accomplished. Plant baskets should be brought in from greenhouses and receive their finishing touches of ribbon, garden sticks and other decorations. The entire stock of foliage and flowering plants and baskets should be placed to the best advantage; in short, the store must be made to look its very best, and so conveniently arranged, that a few sales do not break up the symmetry.

The stock makes a more conspicuous display and is handled much more economically, if the various classes of plants are grouped together. A mass of poinsettias is gorgeous A group of heather calls attention to them very much more than if they were placed here and there among other plants. Various sizes of ferns in decorative groupings, dividing other plants, will greatly assist to sell one another. Fruited plants can be arranged the same way, and are much more striking. It is the same with cyclamens, which should have table space all to themselves, where they can be featured in baskets, jardinieres, or with pots decorated, all of which adds greatly to their appearance and selling value.

There is a great saving of time in waiting on customers with the group system, as they do not go roaming all over the store to pick out the best of the plants desired. They are nearly all in one place, in view, and a choice is soon made. Good-sized, conspicuous labels on almost every plant, should carry prices. It is a great help, particularly for the extra salespeople. Plant baskets, and in fact, every item in stock, should be plainly marked.

There should be a space set aside for goods sold, but not to be delivered until December 24. Also, a "hold for card" or "will call" shelf, as frequently stock is ordered over the phone to be called for or to see and attach a card. All such orders, in the "will call" space, are at once found, and much time saved by this system.

Tag envelopes are a great help, as with the card inside, the envelope addressed and tied to the plant, the order is ready at once to be sent. When plant orders are taken, but not at once selected, the sheet, with cards to go, should be turned in by the salespeople to the desk, where the clerks put cards in envelopes, address tags, and there is then nothing to do do but select the plants. This is a great help to expert salespeople, who can then wait on many more customers.

As orders for cut flowers come in to the desk, the items desired should be entered on a card under various headings. At the close of the day, it is quickly seen just what stock will be required and it is at once ordered.

Wrapping is important. Whether there is danger of frost or not, each plant should be protected with paper, tied so as to make a neat package. It adds to the expense, but saves more than it costs in safe deliveries.

Never let a plant go out dry. Arriving at its destination late in the afternoon, or at night, it will seldom receive water until the next day, when it presents a sorry appearance.

Cut flowers, which are so expensive at this time, should be handled with the greatest care. The stock for December 24 and Christmas day orders, should not be taken out of the boxes. It keeps much better if not disturbed. One competent person, with an assistant, should pick out the orders, which are given, with tags and cards, to clerks to put in the boxes, and then passed to the wrappers. When orders have been properly prepared for putting up, there is a slip containing the order, priced, with day and hour of delivery, card to go, if any, in an envelope, and an addressed tag. These are fastened together with a wire card and tag goes with them, and the order memo is filed for reference. When the box containing these cards is empty, all orders are up. It is a system that does away with looking up items, cards or addresses, as this has all been done from the original sheets by the clerks in the office as the orders were taken. Nothing can be overlooked. Each order is complete in itself, and is quickly put up if there is stock enough to do it.

When boxes of flowers are arranged and sprinkled, they should be turned over for a moment before the lid is put on to run off any surplus water, which otherwise settles in the bottom and softens the box. All holly, mistletoe and other Christmas greens should be handled by a competent man familiar with quantities and values. To let everyone take what they think about right, is neither fair to the house or its customers.

SPRAY OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS AND CYCAS LEAVES.

The Holiday Telephone.

There is an ever increasing use of the telephone, some dealers declaring at least half their business comes in this way. This is probably somewhat exaggerated, but there is no question that many customers find it a great convenience ,and that it is a most important adjunct to business. From the opening to the closing of the store, it should be the duty of some responsible person to answer the phones. The cashier's desk is a good place to receive the calls, as he or she is generally well acquainted with the customers, familiar with the business, can quote prices, and take orders intelligently. If certain persons are wanted, they are called and thus lose no time answering inquiries not for them.

Careless handling of orders received in this way is a source of loss of both money and business. When the bell rings, it should be answered at once and courteous replies given to questions. In taking orders, important matters are the correct initials, as well as the name, both of the person to whom the order is to be sent, and the charge, as well as the street number and direction, date, hour of delivery and card, if any. To fall down on any one of these seven details, means dissatisfaction, and often loss of the order.

Persons should be spoken to on the phone with the same courtesy as if they were present in the store. When, as sometimes happens, an excited person, with a real or fancied grievance, talks in a somewhat violent manner, it is best not to interrupt, but let them get it out of their system, then ask for, "Just a moment please," and on finding out the reason for the trouble, if any, an apology may be made and an adjustment promised at once.

With such a system in answering calls perfected for the ordinary business day, it will be found most useful at all holiday seasons when the phones are almost continually in service. Everyone's time is conserved, as all trivial questions are at once answered, many orders are taken, and only when necessary is an important salesman or other employe called from their work. Unless some such system is the custom, when the store is full of customers, all wanting to be waited on at once, the phones ring and receive but scant attention, those calling getting, "I cannot get them to answer," or "They are reported busy," from the operator. This, of course, means a loss of business that might have been secured with a better service as much as possible.

Outgoing calls should, at such times, be handled with the greatest expediency, so as to have the phones open for serviceas much as possible.

Many florists make a special point of their phone service, keeping their phone numbers to the front in all their store literature and advertisements. "Boston's Flower Phone," and number, is a sign familiar to the residents of that city. "Our store is as close as the nearest phone," belongs to Cleveland, O., while, "Your telephone opens the front door of our store," is another. Publicity regarding the telephone in connection with your business is splendid advertising, suggesting as it does, immediate service.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Summary of the 1919 Season.

The chrysanthemum season of 1919 is now fast drawing to a close, and while it is fresh in mind, it is a good plan to take a little time and summarize on the season's experiences and results, as well as to lay plans for another year's work, figuring up the requirements of the planting, making provisions accordingly by reserving enough stock stools to produce the required number of plants. The results obtained from the crop of 1919 varies a great deal, according to the different sections of the country. Some growers report a very favorable season, while other results are not so satisfactory, but as a general conclusion, the growers who had good stock are very well satisfied with the season's returns and well paid for the extra effort they put into the care of their plants. Over the eastern section of the country, the weather was extremely wet during a greater part of the summer, consequently the wood did not ripen up as it should do, and the quality of the blooms suffered accordingly, but the growers who by greater effort, produced good stock, report very satisfactory prices for the same. The growers of the middle-western states were favored with a much better growing season, it being clear and dry, and not excessively hot, so that the quality of the crop averaged up well. In the early part of the season, the growers of this section had to compete with California grown stock, which was shipped in large quantities, irrespective of the prevailing conditions of the market, and while the blooms were large, a great number of them looked rather seedy after their long journey, and the foliage was very poor. Notwithstanding these defects, they cut into the sales and kept the price down of the home grown blooms, particularly those of medium size. After the second early varieties began to come, with their increased size, finer petalage and clean, fresh foliage, the California blooms did not cut much of a figure. Another factor that affected the sale of the chrysanthemums in the early part of the season was the very favorable season for outdoor flowers. Owing to the lateness of the first killing frost, the dahlias, cosmos and other late autumn flowers were at their best until late in October, and into every prominent flower market were shipped large quantities of these flowers from all directions. Dahlias never were as fine, or quantity so large, as they were during the first three weeks of October, and it is only one season out of many that are as favorable for the dahlia. This fact should be taken into consideration when figuring up next season's planting.

The reliable standard varieties formed as prominent a part in the plantings as heretofore, and some of those not so well known, were planted in increased numbers. No varieties have appeared to contest the supremacy of the very early varieties, Golden Glow and Smith's Advance, consequently these two had, as usual, the very early market to themselves. Yellow Advance, a sport of Smith's Advance, made its appearance and as it gets to be more widely grown, will prove quite a factor among the very early sorts. The variety, Chrysolora, was, as usual, one of the most popular sorts about October 15; the best quality blooms brought the highest market price, with some of the extra selects going considerably higher. Richmond is another good yellow for early October, easy to grow, and is sure to produce a good average of high grade blooms. Among the very early pink varieties, Early Rose was a very prominent offering this season. It is not as free in producing cuttings as some varieties, and a little hard in growth, but it pays well for any extra attention given it. With the limited trials of the novelties of the 1919 introduction, it is yet too early to give a very definite opinion of their worth for general commercial culture. Looking into the future, we may take as a guide the number of varieties submitted to the C. S. A. examining committees and conclude that the improvement of the chrysanthemum is still claiming the thought of the experts, not only the large flowered blooms, but the pompons, singles and anemones, as well. It is also well to study closely the reports of the committees, because there never was a season when so many varieties scored as high as they have done this year, a few of them getting close to the perfection point. It is also worth while to note the efforts that are being made in the production of the pompons, and as the committees' reports indicate, some very fine varieties are close at hand for dissemination, and it is very pleasing to know that the judges recognize very particularly the good qualities of color and form. The good work the Chrysanthemum Society of America is doing, through the examining committees, is sufficient reason for the obligation every chrysanthemum grower is under to the society, and ought to become a member thereof.

The great deal of trouble growers experience every year to check and eradicate the insect pests, should make them more particular in caring for the stock plants during their resting period, because if closer attention were given the stock during the winter months, by regular fumigating or spraying, it would eliminate a lot of the insect troubles later on. Another very important point in caring for the stock plants is not to allow them to get overwet at the roots, but keep them cool and a little on the dry side; also, do not store them away under the benches, but give them good light quarters, where they will get plenty of air.

National Publicity for Flowers.

As we approach the close of the year the committee looks back upon the work accomplished with a great deal of satisfaction. Our publicity campaign has certainly produced wonderful results in which the whole trade has shared. The movement of flowers and plants has been most active. No gluts have been reported in our markets, and the demand for our products has been greatly increased, in spite of a higher range of prices which has all along existed.

Our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," has gained the popular approval of the people, and is being quoted liberally outside our own field. It is being featured by our literary men and women, and it is being sung by concert artists the country over. Our florists—the progressive ones—are using it at every opportunity, and realize its value to them as a medium for suggestion. Daily, it is growing in use, and bids fair to rival in popularity the best slogan ever devised, and perhaps overshadow it. People who know, say that it is on top of all, and worth millions of dollars to our craft, if we perpetuate it by constant and unflagging publicity.

This condition was foreseen by our publicity committee—and it was realized through the generous support of only part of those most interested. When the committee started to raise a fund of $100,000 for this year's work, they confidently believed this amount would be forthcoming. It was not. Barely more than half has been volunteered. As a consequence, the campaign, as laid out, has seen many departures from its plans. We have only reached half as far as was intended. Those whose subscriptions have made the work possible, are unanimously of the opinion that the money spent has been a most excellent investment—there has been abundant proof to warrant such an opinion.

But, it would be interesting to know what the vast army of non-subscribers think about it all. Do they ever think of the benefit which this great campaign is producing for them? Are they willing, are they desirous that a certain body of generous men of their own craft should provide this benefit for them? Are they content to see their business conditions improve through the expenditures of others, and in which they have for many weary months been invited to join?

We put these questions at this time to all non-subscribers—this glorious Christmastime, when good will is so strongly accentuated, and the better selves of all of us respond to the appeals of conscience. Why not resolve to donate a small percentage of your Christmas profits to the campaign fund—your campaign fund, promoted in your interests, and productive of so much good for you? Thousands of dollars have been spent from the fund to make your Christmas business big. Put a little back—you owe it.

RICHMOND, IND.—The E. G. Hill Co. reports an unusual demand for young roses for spring delivery.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The feature of the meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, December 17, was a presentation in story form of the "Japanese at Home," illustrated with stereopticon views, many of them in exquisite colors. Mrs. Etta Blaisdell McDonald of Boston, was the lecturer.

SHORTAGE OF GOOD STOCK.

Market conditions vary little from last week. Roses in the better grade are about equal to the demand, but short flowers are scarce. Chrysanthemums are about over with. A few Seidewitz are to be had. Mistletoe is about the only good white, and the growers in this vicinity do not consider their cut of this flower will be equal to the demand. Pompoms are being shipped in from northern markets, and seem to be about done. Orchids are scarce, few growers being willing to ship in zero weather. Lily of the valley is not much sought; in fact, retailers do not want it at the exorbitant price asked for inferior stock. Customers are discouraged from buying this flower. Violets have suffered from the warm weather of the early winter, and made too much foliage and no buds, but they should show improvement soon. Calendulas are not up to standard, but bring good prices. Sweet peas are only fair, dark weather causing them to lose their buds.

NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the florists' club was held December 8 at H. W. Sheppard's. Owing to the approaching Christmas holidays, the meeting was not largely attended, but the consensus of opinion of those present was to the effect that local florists were coming into their own with a rush, and that the "good of the club" committee should get busy immediately after the holidays and provide the necesasry entertainment and refreshments to bring out record attendance at future meetings.

C. E. Critchell is prepared to handle the largest Christmas business in the history of the concern and the selling and shipping force is able to take care of the rush, Mr. Critchell being fortunate in having an efficient staff.

F. C. W. Brown, of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., was a caller on the local market. Mr. Brown found it difficult to visit with all his firends in this city, owing to lack of time.

R. Witterstaetter, of Price Hill, will be in line with a fine crop of Mistletoe chyrsanthemums, both in white and yellow. Christmas Gold pompons are also in fine shape here.

C. P. Brunner, Springfield, Ohio, was a recent visitor. Mr. Brunner was a large purchaser of Christmas plants, stocks of which are now all sold out on the market.

Wm. Taylor, of Price Hill, has a wonderful stock of poinsettias, both in the pans suitable for table use, as well as fine stock for cutting.

E. G. Hill dropped in on us on his return from the Indiana State Florists' convention at New Albany.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange is handling large quantities of leucothoe, boxwood and ferns. K.

HOLIDAY PREPARATIONS COMPLETE.

Activities in preparation for the rush of business for holiday week are everywhere in evidence, the windows of the flower shops being attractively dressed with wreaths of every kind with a touch of brightness added by the immortelle arrangements scattered among them. The decorated baskets of flowering plants are handsome and many orders for them have already been booked. The holly men and those who deal in evergreen wreaths have already begun operations. The holly is of fine quality, well berried and is largely used on all occasions where decorations are part of the programme. The fine fall weather has contributed to the development of this item in this section. Another red berry that is coming into prominence is that of the "brick bush" as it is called in this vicinity. An unusually attractive combination recently noted was in a large satsuma jardiniere filled with quantities of this novelty. The effect was both pleasing and had the unusual characteristic of being inexpensive, as the berries are readily available in quantity along the local highways. Roses are fair and improving in quality. Carnations will be more plentiful for the holidays than was anticipated. At a recent wedding, quantities of sweet peas were used, combined with the little white statice, which is now in full flower, presenting a very pleasing effect. M. C. D.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER CURTAILS SUPPLY.

Stock has been far short of the demand the past week, due mainly to the dark weather. Plants are in better supply, but prices generally are averaging much higher than formerly. Carnations are cleaning up daily, and the supply is rather limited. Sweet peas are scarce and the buds are dropping badly. Violets have been in good demand, both single and double. Narcissus and stevia are in good supply. Roses have sold well, and some varieties are scarce, mainly red. Boxwood is all sold up. Smilax is in good demand, as is laurel and ground pine wreathing.

NOTES.

Myer & Samtman, Chestnut Hill, Pa., are cutting heavily on roses and expect an excellent crop for Christmas, including some choice American Beauties. The Cleveland Plant & Flower Co. is handling their shipments here.

M. Wilkinson, of the Penn Square Floral Co., 5304 Euclid avenue, reports a busy season. Besides flowers, he sells canaries and parrots.

J. P. Hauck, Spring road, has a fine lot of evergreens in pots for Christmas, ranging from table size to large trees.

"Billy" Connors, of the Ohio Floral Co., broke his wrist while cranking his Ford car, December 8, and spent several days in the hospital.

Virginia Hahn, daughter of Paul C. Hahn, is visiting friends in Los Angeles, Calif. Mr. Hahn's mother also took the trip.

A. M. Coe, North Olmstead, O., is cutting a fine lot of carnations, including a few choice Laddie.

The Brookline Floral Co. is cutting a few choice pompons and sweet peas. C. F. B.

CHRISTMAS PROSPECTS GOOD.

The ending of the coal strike, and the lifting of the closing ban, should have a good effect on the flower business, and coming as it did just before the holidays, should stimulate buying. In view of the prevailing high prices in other commodities, flowers should be a popular gift this year, and florists should spare no effort in putting their goods before the public. If Thanksgiving can be used as a barometer for Christmas business, the florists should experience a bigger holiday trade than ever before and the higher prices will be no barrier to the buying public. There are still a number of chrysanthemums available, retailing at $5 to $12 per dozen. Roses and carnations are plentiful. Violets have been scarce. Flowering plants are coming in and there are good selections in cyclamens, begonias, solanums, heather and azaleas.

NOTES.

Bertermann Bros. Co. had a number of decorations this week, among them a wedding order for one of the most prominent families in this city. A large quantity of roses, orchids and bouvardia was used.

Mrs. Gray, formerly of this city, who has been in Illinois, is now in Indianapolis with the Florist Supply House. "Welcome home, Mrs. Gray."

Rumors are that Edward McDuff, of Bertermann Bros. Co. is engaged to a Piqua, Ohio, young lady, connected with the trade in that city.

A. Wiegand & Sons Co. has a beautiful house of cyclamens.

The establishment of Hartje & Elder is for sale. O. H. L.

GOOD ADVANCE DEMAND FOR CHRISTMAS.

Trade has been quite active during the past week. This is the report of all of the downtown florists as well as those in the residence sections. Active preparations are being made for the holiday season, and already many orders have been booked for flowers and plants to be delivered during the Christmas period. A large part of this business is outside trade, where the local florist has flowers sent to persons who reside in a distant city, by a florist of the city in which the recipient resides. Trade is running largely toward roses, carnations, sweet peas and chrysanthemums. Some of the latter are being offered, and readily sell at $8 per dozen. They are still of extra good quality. Carnations are rather scarce, and the price has been advanced to $2 per dozen. Offerings of carnations are mostly white, pink and red, with the former predominating. Roses retail from $3 to $6 per dozen, and the supply is fairly good. They are principally Columbias, Russells and Sunbursts. Sweet peas are selling well, and the supply is adequate for the demand. Offerings are mostly of the small variety. Christmas flowers will be rather scarce, according to the belief of the leading florists. Steps taken to remedy the deficiency have not proved succesful up to date. On the other hand, there will be plenty of flowers, such as poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias and primroses. J. W. L.

DAYTON, O.—W. G. Matthews' staff at the Dayton Floral Co. is kept busy and this establishment has a splendid stock to offer for the holidays, including a 100-foot bench of late chrysanthemums which are unusually fine, as well as cyclamens, primroses, poinsettias, roses, carnations, etc.

Toronto, Ont.

HIGH PRICES MAY HURT HOLIDAY TRADE.

Business was never better than at present and the florists in general have plenty to do. The supply is not equal to requirements and consequently prices have taken an upward trend—going so high in some case as to discourage buying by the public. The quality of the offerings is good considering the season, especially roses, American Beauty, Premier, Hoosier Beauty and Ophelia all showing excellent form and from a recent inspection of a number of ranges there will be a heavy cut for Christmas. Carnations are good property but the supply is limited and there will be a shortage at the time they are needed. All other flowers are scarce and the majority of funeral orders that go out are about four-fifths foliage and the balance ribbons and flowers. There seems to be a large number of flowering plants for the holidays but the growers are holding them for higher prices, perhaps thinking they should get the greater part of the advance. The Christmas list for cut stock is now out and it is doubtful if there is another market where quotations are as high as in this city and in too many cases quality is not up to the usual standard. The following includes a few items on the retail list: American Beauty, $15-$35 per dozen; Russell, $9-15; Hoosier Beauty, Richmond and Columbia, $5-$10; Sunburst, Ophelia and White Killarney, $5-$9; carnations, $3-$5; poinsettias, $9-$12; sweet peas, per bunch, $2-$3; violets, per bunch, $1.50-$2.50; baskets of flowering plants, $5-$25. Christmas greens are scarce. Ground pine is offered at $18.50 per case and the supply is limited. Holly at $8.25 per case is of poor quality and what boxwood that has arrived thus far is of inferior grade. Chrysanthemums are scarce and it is doubtful if there will be any seen at the holidays.

NOTES.

The retail florists held an interesting meeting, December 8, at which the high price and inferior quality of violets was discussed at considerable length, with the result that the stores unanimously decided not to handle this flower for the Christmas trade, and cards will be displayed, acquainting customers with the reasons for discontinuing the sale of violets under present conditions. This policy has been in effect one week and a surprisingly large number of customers seem to appreciate the step taken for their protection and readily purchased other flowers.

There have been quite a number of travelers from the various supply houses but with the exchange rate at present as low as 11 cents on the dollar, quite a number of orders booked well ahead, have been cancelled.

H. G. D.

Baltimore.

SUPPLY MEAGER AND HIGH IN PRICE.

Scarcity of everything is noticeable in the local market. If a retailer at this time received an order for 1,000 pink carnations, which is not likely at the present price, he would be compelled to corner the market to fill it. The price of everything has never been higher, but nothing is carried over, for the public is used to the "high cost of loving" beautiful flowers. It is interesting to compare the price list of two years ago with the present one. Every item is twice, and sometimes three times as great. There are a few late chrysanthemums still on the market, but this week will finish them.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the florists' club was held, December 8, at the usual time and place. The attendance was very gratifying, and increased to 42, the best for sometime. Several members who had not been on hand for several months were present. Among the welcome faces were Philip B. Welsh, Wm. F. Keys, Jr., Chas. Cunningham and Wm. Feast. A hand engraved certificate of life membership in the club to be presented to Mayor Broening was exhibited. The membership committee proposed the names of eight for membership, showing the good work of this committee. Joseph Merritt has been especially active on this committee. The entertainment committee met previous to the club meeting, with seven of its 10 members in attendance, and outlined a plan for special features at each meeting for the next six months. The discussion scheduled for this meeting of the club proved to be very interesting. Towards the close of the evening, coffee and sandwiches were served, and the questoin box ended a very fine session.

COLD WEATHER LIMITS SUPPLY.

Everybody is rejoicing since the coal ban has been lifted, and although there are many other obstacles to contend with for the coming holidays, the worst one has been eliminated for the present. We have been experiencing some extremely cold weather the past week, which curtailed daily receipts in all lines about half, but due to the cold and limited working hours, the shortage was not quite so regretable. The prospects in the cut flower line for Christmas are by no means bright. Reports from those who ought to know best, say the average cut will be about half. Unfavorable weather retarded the rose crop, while carnations have been on the short side up to now. Violets will also be very scarce, while the other miscellaneous stock will not come up to expectations. The one plentiful item will be stevia. Holly and mistletoe are scarce, but Christmas trees are very numerous.

NOTES.

Rich Lietz, who injured his back and ribs November 8, when he fell while carrying a case of hyacinths, still visits the doctor daily, although he is coming around alright.

Wm. Rayner, of Oconomowoc, who has been on the sick list for the past four weeks, is again able to be about.

OBITUARY.

Harry M. Altick.

Harry M. Altick, a life member of the Society of American Florists, and who will be remembered by many in the trade as proprietor of the Highland Floral Co., Dayton, O., from which he retired several years ago to enter manufacturing lines, died suddenly in that city, November 14. He had been in apparently good health and was in his usual happy mood but a few hours before when conversing with friends, death evidently being caused by heart failure.

While identified with the florist trade, Mr. Altick took much interest in its advancement and in keeping his city and state well to the front as examples of progressiveness. It was largely through his efforts that Dayton was selected as the place for the twenty-second annual meeting of the national society in 1906, and this accomplished, he renewed his efforts to make the convention a most successful event. To him is also due the credit of placing McKinley day on the florists' callendar, as it was at his suggestion that the red carnation was adopted and its wearing became more or less a feature as a tribute of respect to the memory of the late martyred president.

Mrs. Emma S. Siebrecht.

Mrs. Emma S. Siebrecht, wife of Henry A. Siebrecht, the well known florist of Rose Hill, New Rochelle, N. Y., died at her home in that city, December 9, in the sixty-seventh year of her age. She had been in failing health for a considerable time. She had been a resident of New Rochelle for many years. Previous to her marriage, she was Miss Reid. Mrs. Siebrecht was beloved by her family, and highly esteemed by a large circle of friends. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Stanley Munro, of Brooklyn, N. Y., two sons, Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., of Pasadenia, Calif., and Charles Siebrecht, of New Rochelle, and a number of grandchildren. The funeral was held at the family home, December 12, services being conducted by the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church.

A. F. F.

Timothy McKune.

Timothy McKune, of 2015 Seventh street, Pt. Huron, Mich., well-known to the trade ,died December 3, aged 64 years. He was a pioneer of this city, having been in the employ of the Grand Trunk railroad as express messenger and baggageman upwards of 40 years. He grew shrubs and hardy perennials as side lines. Mrs. Ella McKune, his widow, and two daughters, survive.

Douglas A. Brown.

Douglas A. Brown, for many years the highly efficient official stenographer of the American Seed Trade Association and the Society of American Florists, died at his home in Ft. Thomas, Ky., November 12, after a long illness, age 65 years.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—The New Jersey State Horticultural Society at its meeting in this city has asked the legislature for an appropriation of $30,000 to furnish the proposed horticultural building at New Brunswick.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—The Illinois Horticultural Society is holding its sixty-fourth annual convention here this week, opening December 16. Miss May McAdams of the University of Illinois told how fruit trees could be grown on city lots and other speakers told of the advantage of spraying trees.

WE wish all our patrons a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

WITH the coal diggers back in their holes, Christmas trade may follow the lead of the good Thanksgiving business. More moderate weather will help materially to that end.

WE are in receipt of the schedule of premiums for the 29th annual meeting of the American Carnation Society, to be held at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago, January 21-22. Copies may be had on application to Secretary A. F. J. Baur, Rockwood avenue and 38th street, Indianapolis, Ind.

SENATOR MYERS, of Montana, is authority for the statement that the anti-strike provisions of the Cummings railroad bill afforded the "time and opportunity to make the final test of the issue between the government and organized labor." He said the national railroad strike, continued for two weeks, would cause the death of 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 persons.

HOLIDAY NEXT WEEK.

On account of the holiday next week, advertisers and correspondents would confer a favor by mailing copy one day earlier than usual.

Violets in Short Supply.

Rhinebeck, N. Y.—The demand for the local crop of violets is far in excess of the supply. The plants are carrying a good crop of buds, but many of them will not develop until after the holidays. High prices are being offered for the available stock.

Iris Society to Be Organized.

On January 29, 1920, at 11 a. m., in the Museum building of the New York botanical garden, an iris society will be formed. The organizers are Lee R. Bonnewitz, James Boyd, W. F. Christman, H. A. Gleason, Mrs. Francis King, B. Y. Morrison, Miss Grace Sturtevant and John C. Wister, all persons actively concerned in iris cultivation.

The purpose of the iris society is to promote in every way the culture and development of irises. This may include the study of all known species and varieties, the compiling of a list of horticultural varieties, with their parentage, synonyms, name of originator and date of introduction; the proper classification of these varieties; compilation of a history of iris growing; cultural directions for different climates; a study of iris diseases and pests; the establishment of test gardens and exhibition gardens in various sections of the country; the organization of iris exhibitions, and publicity through articles and bulletins, lantern slides and lectures.

The society hopes to encourage iris breeders everywhere, and at the same time to discourage the introduction of inferior novelties. It also hopes to extend popular interest in the cultivation of the flower in private gardens and public places.

Persons who expect to be present at the organization meeting are invited to correspond with H. A. Gleason at the New York botanical garden in order that proper arrangement for their reception may be made.

The garden is reached by Third Avenue elevated to Bronx Park station, by either subway to 149th street and Third avenue, there transferring to the elevated; or by the Harlem division of the New York Central Railway to botanical garden.

Society of American Florists.

MEMRERSHIPS.

Practically only 10 days remain in which to take out life memberships in the society at the old rate of $25. At the Detroit convention it was unanimously voted to increase the annual dues from $3.00 to $5.00, and the life membership fee, for members in good standing, from $25 to $50, the increases to take effect from January 1, 1920.

The advantage in life membership, at the present rate, is obvious—in five years a member will have paid in annual dues which can now be made in one payment, forever relieving the member from the payment of further dues, besides removing the necessity for keeping track of annual subscriptions and the bother of making remittances. Many members consider it an honor to be on the life membership list, and point with pride to the handsomely framed and most impressive certificate, or diploma, which is issued to each life member.

Look at the matter in the light of an investment, and send me your cheque for $25, if in good standing; if not in good standing, add your dues for 1919, making the cheque $28. New members coming in as life members must pay $30.00, the difference being the amount of initiation and first year's dues.

If you are not already a member, and are not interested in life membership, why not start the new year right, by sending in your cheque at once for $5—this will cover your initiation fee and dues to January 1, 1921.

Life memberships nominally are designed to increase the funds in the hands of the treasurer, to permit of more effective work in the interests of the trade. Almost 700 life membership certificates have been issud this year.

Some of our state vice-presidents, and others, are doing laudable work in the dircetion of increasing our life membership list, notcbly O. J. Olson, St. Paul. Minn., who has sent in 15 applications, and W. J. Pilcher, of St. Louis, Mo. W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., and A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind., have also done good service.

Owing to the large influx of life members, some little delay has been experienced in engrossing, framing and despatching certificates, but we are catching up with the work as fast as possible.

A new supply of life membership buttons has just been received and the same are being furnished at 75 cents each, and mailed on receipt of this amount at the secretary's office.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting and election of officers for the ensuing year of the Connecticut Horticultural Society was held at Hartford, December 12, with President George H. Hollister presiding over the meeting as chairman. The usual method of appointing a nominating committee was omitted, and the officers were elected by nomination from the floor, the secretary having been directed to cast one ballot for each nomination. It was only necessary to vote by ballot for one office, viz., first vice-president, three nominations having been made. The result of the election is as follows: Warren C. Mason, superintendent of the Pope estate, Farmington, president; H. R. Hurd, head gardener at the Vine Hill Farm, Elmwood, first vice-president; Francis Roulier, assistant superintendent of the James J. Goodwin estate, Hartford, second vice-president; O. F. Gritzmacher, an amateur of no mean ability, New Britain, third vice-president; W. W. Hunt, proprietor of the Blue Hills Nurseries, Hartford, treasurer; Samual H. Deming, assistant superintendent of Keney park, Hartford, secretary; William T. Hall, librarian; John C. Willard, of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield, botanist; George H. Hollister, superintendent of Keney park, Hartford, pomologist.

The next regular meeting will be held, January 9, the second meeting of this month being omitted, as it comes so near Christmas.

ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

Freight Embargo.

An embargo has been placed upon non-essential freight by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad and its connections, some 10,000 miles of trackage, to facilitate the movement of coal.

The exemptions are: Government freight and railroad material; foodstuff for human and animal consumption, livestock and perishables, coal, coke, petroleum and its products, newsprint paper and pulp for manufacturers of newsprint papers.

Railroad officials say the embargo is likely to be extended to other western lines.

As is now understood, the embargo will continue until December 26.

PLANT HARDY LILIES NOW

Immediate Delivery -- Stock in Storage

A few cases of Hardy Lilies planted now will come in very handy, for they will bloom at the time when flowers are scarce. These flowers last longer than any others you can use in a floral piece. They improve the character of the floral design when used with other flowers.

We offer for immediate shipment the following varieties: Rubrum, Album, Magnificum and Auratum. Sizes: 7-9, 8-9, 9-10, 9-11, 10-11 and 11-12.

The quality of our Lily Bulbs cannot be surpassed. We positively assure you that these bulbs have been properly cultivated to produce the best bulbs for florists' forcing. This type of Lily in Japan grows wild, and during the war very few were cultivated for export purposes; so when our Mr. Miller arrived in Japan, and knowing of the scarcity, he immediately purchased fields that had been cultivated.

To produce a good Hardy Lily, it is necessary to gather the bulbs in the mountains, where they grow wild, and then cultivate them for a season or two in open land. This method improves the quality and has been long practiced by the Japanese growers. Very few are available this season, so we can expect many uncultivated Lily Bulbs. In trusting us with your order, you assure yourself of the best cultivated bulbs from the Orient.

COAL LID LIFTED HERE.

The fuel lid in this city has been lifted, and the essential and non-essential industries are getting power and coal, and in most cases, are operating normally. The retail and wholesale stores are open at regular hours again, and everywhere the attention of everyone is directed upon the holiday business. The suburban train service has been restored, and the same holds true for service throughout the entire country in almost all cases. Business the past week was rather quiet, but the demand is better now and everything points to a brisk Christmas trade. The early holiday demand for stock from out-of-town points is exceedingly heavy, and in some instances the orders call for 5,000 roses or more, which indicates a general shortage throughout the country. American Beauty roses will be scarce and should clean up early at the advertised quotations, notwithstanding the possibility that some shipments may be received from the east as in former years. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier and Columbia will furnish splendid substitutes for American Beauty roses in the longer stemmed grades, and will be good property around holiday time. A few Richmonds will be included in the shipments, but will clean up as soon as they reach the store. Milady, Richmond, Sunburst, Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Killarney, Hoosier Beauty, Montrose and all the corsage roses will clean up early and the supply of carnations will be quickly exhausted. Violets, lily of the valley, Paper White narcissus, yellow narcissus, pansies, calendulas, daisies, callas, cattleyas, cypripediums, gardenias, poinsettias, pompons and a few late chrysanthemums will be included in the shipments, and everyone is confident that there will be no surplus in any line when the late demand for Christmas is over. Holly and bouquet green are scarce at this writing. Boxwood is in strong demand, and artificial stock is playing a large part in the offerings this year. Plants are sold up almost completely in this vicinity, according to most of the dealers, and all that is necessary to make this Christmas the best ever, is favorable weather. Those who have not yet placed their orders for cut flowers, should do so immediately, for everything points to a complete clean up in all items.

NOTES.

The J. A. Budlong Co. is distributing one of the finest calendars of the season to its many customers in the trade, who have made many complimentary remarks about it. Manager Philip C. Schupp believes in doing things right, so he selected a beautiful woman wearing an orchid corsage, a great advertisement for the trade in addition to being a most welcome gift to the customer.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner report a good demand for red winterberries, which they are handling in quantity for the holidays. Many orders are being filled for pecans at their establishment for members of the trade and others still have time to secure their share if they act quickly.

At A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store early Christmas orders for cut flowers have been arriving all week with no let-up in sight. Miss Charlotte Paradise, who so ably looks after the office, is suffering from a severe cold.

A. E. Turner, of Rosin & Turner, Mosinee, Wis., who supply the market with cut ferns, is at 362 West Madison street with over 3,000 Christmas trees. He is taking mighty good care of the trade.

Robert E. Kuehne, a gardener at Lake Forest, was recently denied naturalization because he admitted he had claimed exemption from the draft on the ground that he was an alien.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association reports that orders are numerous for Christmas, and the early indications are that stock will be as scarce, if not more so, than last year.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, president of the Society of American Florists, expects to organize a national growers' association in this city next January.

Some of the growers have received word from their coal dealers that they may expect delivery this month of the coal they contracted for earlier in the season.

Wietor Bros. are well pleased with the call for stock for Christmas, especially roses and carnations, which it appears will clean up early for this occasion.

Kennicott Bros. Co.'s American Beauty rose grower is in good crop, which should help swell their total Christmas sales considerably.

Bassett & Washburn report a heavy demand for Christmas stock with some of the individual orders calling for 5,000 or more roses.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. will have a few late chrysanthemums and pompons to offer for Christmas, in addition to their regular line.

George Collins, with Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich., was here on a combined business and pleasure trip this week.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., made a business trip to Cleveland, O., this week.

William Hansen, of the E. C| Amling Co., is back from a successful out-of-town business trip.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports a bumper crop of high grade gladiolus bulbs.

J. J. Budlong and wife are spending a few weeks at Ft. Meyers, Fla.

Erne & Co. are moving large quantities of red winterberries.

Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago.

The Commercial Flower Growers' Association of Chicago met at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday afternoon, December 11, at 2 o'clock, President Kohout in the chair. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, president of the Society of American Florists, addressed the meeting on publicity, outlining the various plans now in operation in St. Louis, Buffalo and Milwaukee. His talk was very interesting, and he convinced the growers present that something should be done in regard to publicity, referring often to the advertising done by other lines of industry and the wonderful results achieved. Fred Lautenschlager also spoke on publicity, and supported Mr. Ammann in what he said. Robert Brenton spoke a few minutes on this subject, and Otto Amling, Paul Weiss, A. F. Amling, W. J. Keimel and others joined in the discussion. Those present favored the Milwaukee plan of advertising, and a committee consisting of Paul Weiss, W. J. Keimel and Otto Amling, appointed at the last meeting to study the various plans for soliciting funds for co-operative advertising in this city, had met and agreed that "this plan" is the most practical and equitable, and that growers be asked to contribute one-half of 1 per cent of their sales for the purpose. Quite a number of growers have already pledged themselves in favor of this plan and the committee is preparing to send out return post cards to all shippers to the Chicago market to ascertain how the growers as a whole stand on the proposition. The committee will report on this at the next meeting.

President Kohout called attention to the next annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, to be held in this city, January 21-22, and requested every one of the members to make an exhibit. J. F. Ammann called attention to the meeting of the state florists' associatoin, to be held here at the same time, and asked everyone to become a member so that the society could secure representation on the executive board of the Society of American Florists. The exhibits included a vase each of the two new roses, Pilgrim and Crusader, from A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and Sunshine chrysanthemum by Hans Jepsen, Maywood.

FAIR DEMAND WITH SHORTENED SUPPLY.

General business conditions have been fair the last fortnight. The customary lull before the storm is taking place, and the only unusual activity has been funeral work. Of this, there has been considerable. Stock of all kinds has shortened up materially, and if it were not for late chrysanthemums there would be an absolute shortage. The fact that many growers are running their houses cool, on account of the coal shortage, has curtailed stock considerably; aside from this, the weather has been anything but ideal for forcing the stock. The rose crop will undoubtedly be very short for Christmas, and other flowers will also be limited. Carnations have been coming in very good. Roses have been fair, but show the effect of dark weather. Sweet peas are a negligible quantity. Violets have been good only after a day or two of bright weather. In Chrysanthemums, Yellow Chadwick, Yellow Bonnaffon and Pink Seidewitz are coming in good and promise to hold out until at least Christmas. Other miscellaneous stock, such as calendulas and snapdragons, are coming in freely, but more could be disposed of easily. Southern smilax has been scarce, but promises to be in good supply for Christmas.

NOTES.

The florists' club had a splendid meeting last week at the Planter's hotel, and drew a good attendance. George Asmus, of Chicago, paid us a visit and made a wonderful talk on publicity, which seemed to stimulate interest among those present. Our local publicity agent also gave interesting information on the value of various kinds of advertising, and also showed what he had accomplished since he took charge about a month ago. His report was very pleasing to all. The committee on applications asked for more time to make their final report, which was granted after a debate. After the meeting, a nice lunch was served with the usual cigars.

The florist bowling league will take a two weeks' vacation during the holidays, everybody being so busy during this season. The Roses are now on top, with the Carnations a close second. The Sweet Peas are third, and the Daisies in last place. The match this week, between the Roses and Carnations, should be very interesting, from a competitive standpoint.

A trip to the various plantsmen, showed a fair outlook for Christmas in blooming plants. The only apparent

USUAL LULL BEFORE HOLIDAYS.

There has been somewhat slower business during the past week, but only the usual lull before the Christmas rush. The local cut of flowers has been lessened by the cold weather, so that more California orders are being booked. This is especially true of carnations. The cut of orchids is holding up, and chrysanthemums are still available in large enough quantities to supply all orders. The local growers expect to handle the Christmas trade without difficulty and cut well on into January. The late business in chrysanthemums has seen Bonnaffon, Maud Dean and Chadwick varieties coming to the front, although some splendid white and yellow Turners are also coming in. The bronze and mauve flowers are a little weak as to stem, and will not make the fine general offering that the first named varieties do. Pompons are plentiful at one range, with the remainder of the trade rather counting on this firm to supply them. Cyclamens, Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, poinsettias, primulas and Shasta daisies have been the big sellers among pot offerings, and one dealer featured small berry baskets, painted in bright hues and containing a single violet plant. Yellow and reds were mainly used in the painting of these containers, with the result that the flower was perfectly contrasted. When these were shown, a card suggesting these as "desk cheerers" was placed in the window, and return sales have been general. Another offering, very scarce, that has taken well, is pot fuchsias, a grower having so handled the crop that these are just coming into bloom now. Lily of the valley and Cecile Brunner roses have been hard to get of late, and cyclamens, fuchsias, sweet peas and violets are being substituted in corsages whenever possible. The retailers say that carnations are not all that could be asked on quality. Ophelia and Russell are the leading roses coming to hand, and some stock of Lady Hilton has been brought in to replace the call for the shades where Cecile Brunner has been used. The holly market opened fairly strong, with growers quoting 30 and 35 cents per pound in car lots, and 40 cents on smaller quantities. This came from the Port Townsend district and also from Oregon, with the latter getting the call because it can be used more generally.

NOTES.

The sudden cold snap last week was the cause of considerable discomfort to the Holly Flower Shop, according to F. Hagerman. The heating system failed one night and the next morning found some of the less hardy flowers frozen or badly damaged by cold.

Rosaia Bros. arranged a very effective window recently. A set of curtain rods were put at the back and salmon pink satin draped on each side to form a doorway. In the center of this was placed a huge vase of Ophelia roses.

Anna F. Burns, of the Burns Floral Company, complains of a notable shortage of good ferns at this time. A number of large baskets have been handled lately featuring chrysanthemums, pompons and yellow daisies.

Fred H. Rowe reports a slower cut of carnations from the McCoy greenhouses with prospects that after the first of the year there will be no need to bring in stock from California.

The Woodland Park Floral Company reports a very heavy cut of pompons lately, but the demands of the trade have been such that there has been no difficulty in moving any of the stock.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop handled the theatre decorations for the annual memorial service of the B. P. O. E., and are receiving many compliments on the results secured.

Felix Rosaia reports a splendid business of late, with weddings figuring very prominently in the activities, and violets popular with winter brides this year.

MARKET CLEANS UP AT GOOD FIGURES.

As is usual at this season, the business is light, as is also the supply, the dull, dark days offering very little encouragement to the production of cut flowers. In consequence, everything is scarce, roses, carnations, violets, in fact, there is not a plentiful item in the whole assortment. The market cleans up every day, there being little of anything to carry over. The quality of the stock is good for the season. Premier continues to increase in length of stem and popularity. The Christmas specials of this variety will surely bring good money. As one of the wholesalers put it: "The market should be good for the next six weeks as stock is quite sure to be on the short side." For the Christmas market there will be good crops of stevia, mignonette and calendulas, and more chrysanthemums than ever before. They were generally considered a nuisance as a holiday flower, but are likely, this year, to find a good demand on account of the scarcity of other lines. Paper White narcissus will also be plentiful, and there will be a supply of callas, but no giganteums. The rose market does not look any too promising. Some growers appear as if they will have their usual cut, but others claim to be away below normal for the season. It is said American Beauty specials will bring $1.50 each, and possibly higher. Carnations are now bringing $8 to $12, and will likely see record figures.

December 15.—Shipments this morning were rather meager, and while there was not much, if any, advance in prices, they were held at the highest of those prevailing the week before. It is stated that of the stock most in demand for Christmas, the medium sizes will be scarce. Several large growers believe that their rose crops will be almost one-third less than last year.

CHRISTMAS GREENS.

While all kinds of Christmas greens are in fair demand, such as boxwood, ground pine, etc., the large stock of exceptionally fine holly that is being offered is sure to be a factor. Holly is said to be well berried everywhere, and as labor is so much more plentiful than last season, this market at least, will be better supplied than for the past three years.

IN THE STORES.

Everywhere, the retailers are putting their best foot forward, preparing large stocks of wreaths, both for cemetery and house decoration. The red chenille and red ruscus, whitened, silvered and gilt cones, minerva and other dyed weeds, are much in evidence in the wreath decorations. Some of the good, old-fashioned statice, with large white flowers, is being used, the first since the war began. There is not much in the way of advance orders in the retail shops, but all appear to be looking forward for a good trade.

Growers report that all their good stock is sold, orders being received earlier than ever before. Prices are much higher than last year, but this did not deter buying, as the storekeepers believe they can pass the increase along to the public.

CALIFORNIA FLOWERS.

This is a big country, and it seems quite a distance from coast to coast, but it cannot be such a span after all, as flowers picked in California, are now sold in this city. Roses, violets and chrysanthemums arrive in good condition, the roses being taken as the product of local growers. With good aeroplane service, the local greenhouse men will wonder whether life is worth living.

NOTES.

The London Flower Shop has a very unique window decoration, the feature of which is the new painted weeds, which are introduced this fall for the first time. Wild seed pods, splatterdock leaves, some of the grasses, seed plumes of the common dock weed, thistles, etc., are given a basic coat of paint, and then touched up, some in rainbow hues and others given high lights, with a dash of bronze and aluminium. As arranged, they attracted considerable attention on account of the odd colors. A cluster of cones and artificial holly, tied with red ribbon, is an attractive window piece.

The first of the winter lecture series of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held, December 9, in the New Century drawing room, a more suitable auditorium than that of last season. John C. Wister gave an illustrated talk on visits to French and English gardens since the war, which was very interesting. He has visited also the large collection of irises in France and England, and gave the names of the most recent introductions. There was a very good attendance.

Wm. H. Wyatt, the prominent retailer on 13th street, above Race, rounded out his 40 years, December 8. He still occupies the same store, which has been altered and improved, with greenhouse in the rear. Mr. Wyatt believes in doing business in a conservative way, having a hand himself in nearly everything that goes out. He specializes in funeral flowers, the excellence of which makes his work noticeable at every display.

T. Nelson Geiger is showing a beautiful line of miniature pyramid box trees, dotted with artificial holly berries and red ribbon decorations. These baby boxwood are made so that all the stems reach the water and are set as if growing, in jardiniers of water. They stand from nine to 12 inches in height. They look as if they wouud be most salable and bring good money anywhere.

Frank M. Ross' 52nd street shop has rid itself of the mechanics, who have been rebuilding this store all summer. The interior, which is very light, will now quickly receive its Christmas attire. Manager Gaul says it will be one of the finest stores in town when everything is in place.

Charles H Grakelow has his busy shop crowded to capacity with a wonderful line of wreaths, baskets and other Christmas goods. The greenhouse, in the rear, is also full of choice flowering and foliage plants. He says: "We are ready, and do not care how soon they come."

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had one of the busiest Novembers since they have been in business. Their Ritz-Carleton shop had an elaborate ball decoration at the hotel, December 11. A new marble table, supported on twin lions is a feature of their Bellevue-Stratford shop.

The Subway Flower Shop, 60th and Market street, has put a Dodge car in service. A large "Say It With Flowers" adorns both side panels. The store, with its stock of Christmas wreaths and baskets, is making a strong bid for the Christmas trade.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. expects a good Christmas crop of roses from their Morton greenhouses. They will also be strong on white lilac, which should be in great demand.

Charles Theiss, who recently took charge of Frank M. Ross' 60th street store, is planning for a big Christmas trade. A large stock of Christmas wreaths are under way.

American Beauties will be a feature of the Leo Niessen Co.'s stock, as will special Hadley roses. They will also carry the largest lot of white lilac they have ever offered.

Mrs. Marie Anthony, of New York, has opened a cut flower store at 811 South Broad street.

MODERATE SUPPLY AND PRICES FIRM.

There has been no appreciable change in the condition of the wholesale market since our notes of December 6 were written. A moderate supply of stock continues to arrive and prices remain firm. This condition is likely to prevail—if precedents count for anything—until the Christmas buying begins. The chrysanthemums continue to arrive in greater volume than might be expected, considering that they had such an early start, but as might be expected, most of the stock is of inferior quality. Yet, with high prices on all other stocks, most any kind of a chrysanthemum sells. Exceptionally fine stock of the roses, Premier, Columbia, Mrs. Ward and Ophelia continues to arrive. There is now a demand for carnations, but one does not notice any great improvement in the quality. The cut poinsettias, good ones, too, are now features of the market, and may be seen on display in the windows of retail stores. As yet, they cannot be said to be moving fast, but their time is coming. There seems to be plenty of both cattleyas and cypripediums to supply the demand. Violets, which in the language of the prize ring, were "groggy" for some time after Thanksgiving, seem to have a little more life.

December 15.—After a week of rain, fog and general discomfort, the weather has cleared, followed by a cold wave. The forecast is for continued cold, but it is hoped there will be no zero temperatures. With the present demand, which is not heavy, there is enough stock to go round, but severe freezing would cut down the supply. There is almost a surplus of the small cattleyas on this market, but the larger blooms are scarce. There is little call for lily of the valley. A considerable stock of pompons continues to arrive. The supply of violets is light; so is the demand. Holly sold at $8 per case today. Special Francis Scott Key roses have advanced to $75. Prima Donna to $20, and No. 2 Wards to $8.

FLORIST CLUB AWARDS.

Owing to a long session of the florists' club, December 8, not all of our notes reached the printer in time for publication in the Christmas number. Awards on the exhibits were as follows: W. A. Manda was given a first-class certificate for his evergreen. The comment of the judges was: "Very interesting half-hardy evergreen, which appears to have commercial value." For his display of Dracaena Rothiana, cultural certificate; display of aspidistras, cultural certificate; display of wreaths, vote of thanks. Philip F. Kessler, for display of Chrysanthemum Christmas Gold and Snapdragon Ruth Brewster, and a seedling, vote of thanks; A. Sauter, vote of thanks for mignonette; Stumpp & Walter, vote of thanks for Calendula Orange King. A. N. Pierson, Inc., vote of thanks for vase of chrysanthemums; Traendly & Schenck, for their exhibit of roses, silver medal; comment of judges on Mock: "The finest vase of this rose ever shown before the club." "Mrs. Aaron Ward, exceptionally well grown; Premier, Columbia and Ophelia, all very fine. The committee would like to see such exhibits again." C. T. Guenther, for vase of Chrysanthemum Hamburg, vote of thanks; Henry Schmeckpepper, Glendale, N. Y., for pink sport of Chrysanthemum E. A. Seidewitz, vote of thanks; W. D. Howard, Milford, Mass., for crimson carnation, Bernice, 84 points.

At the meeting of the club November 11, A. N. Pierson, Inc., exhibited the roses Pilgrim and Crusader, both scoring 86 points; also, Chrysanthemum Golden Barbara Davis, which scored 88 points. On October 18, the committee visited the range of the C. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., to examine the new rose, Frank W. Dunlop, for final certificate, and recommended that the final certificate be granted. It scored 88 points.

NOTES.

It may not happen in 1920, but the handwriting is on the wall, that the wholesale florist colony must at no distant date forsake 28th street. The furriers, who seem to possess the art of turning a muskrat skin into arctic seal, and rabbit skins into most anything, have already "got the florists going." They are able to pay much and there is another feature. If a furrier that deals heavily in skunk skins.

THERE'S a growing tendency toward a closer contact—toward a better understanding of man with man in every line of endeavor today, two essentials which make for a sound and lasting prosperity. I want to be on such terms with every florist; I solicit new business on such a basis.

higher rents than the florists can stand, moves in next door to a florist, the latter—unless some merciful dispensation has temporarily deprived him of the sense of smell—had as well move out. Various schemes for a general movement have been talked over, but as yet, none of them have taken definite shape. William Gunther, of Gunther Brothers, is strong for a general move to 41st street, between 8th and 9th avenues. He says that there are a number of available stores in that locality; that it is conveniently situated to both the Pennsylvania and the Grand Central terminals, and is also easily reached by the elevated and the 7th avenue subway. As the large majority of the retail florists are located uptown, there seems to be logic in his argument. In the meantime, several wholesalers are already looking about—because they have to—for permanent homes for their business.

The scientists of Columbia University, having assured us that the end of the world is not coming, December 17, we have decided to add a few notes of encouragement to the trade to go right on with its preparations for Christmas. In plants, so far as we can learn, most of the growers that supply this market were pretty well sold out a month ago. The only stock that seems to be in abundant supply, is poinsettias. Good azaleas are, of course, at a premium. There seems to be a fair supply of cyclamens and solanums. The supply of heather is not heavy. We expect to see the foliage plants, such as the dracænas, ferns and Pandanus Veitchii, used in increased numbers in combination baskets and hampers. There will be various miscellaneous stocks on the market, primroses, for instance, that will help out the smaller stores. From present indications, it appears that there will be a fairly good supply and quality of holly.

A recent editorial in the Evening Mail started off as follows: "We humans are essentially stupid. Kipling was right when he said that we are very slightly changed from the early apes that ranged India's prehistoric clay. Our latest enthusiasm is aroused by a pseudo discovery made by a man in Manchester, England, that lead can be transmutted into gold. Sir Edward Rutherford is his name, one of the greatest physicists in the world. But he is silent on his 'discovery'." We do not care much for carrying gold about. Too heavy.

The Astoria Florist has just completed extensive improvements on the three story building, which he owns, at 2188 Broadway. The ground floor and a well finished basement are occupied by his business. On the upper floors, besides his family residence, there are large and handsome rooms fronting on Broadway, that have been leased for light manufacturing and office purposes.

Max Schling was unavoidably absent from the club meeting, December 8, on account of the serious illness of a friend, but for faithful service, the members went right along and elected him a trustee.

In the window of the Dards' store, there is a large placard, iniviting the people to order early, with a guarantee that all orders will be promptly filled at the time designated in the order.

J. K. Allen, now located at 118 West 28th street, is about to remove to 133 West 28th street, to occupy part of Walter F. Sheridan's store.

They are blasting the subsoil in Central park, to make trees grow. Well, there must be a great surplus stock of explosives in this country.

H. E. Froment will remove from 148 West 28th srteet in February, to a lotion, so far as we are aware, not yet designated.

A. F. F.

A Christmas Message to Florists

Dear Friends:

Do not worry about the people that are spending tens of thousands of dollars for fine clothes and jewelry. They have the right to spend their money as they please, and if they can afford expensive clothes and jewelry, they Can Afford Flowers, so Think Flowers, Talk Flowers, Advertise Flowers, keep good ones and you will sell them; that is Our Creed. And if you wish to have your Christmas Orders for New York and Vicinity carefully filled, send them to us.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, December 17, was $60.

IN continental Europe, there are more garden seed sellers than buyers.

WENHAM, MASS.—B. Hammond Tracy is making a business and pleasure trip through the south.

TULSA, OKLA.—A. T. Ferrell, of Saginaw, Mich., was here last week, viewing his oil well operations.

GARDEN seed growers, the past two years, seem to have planned a long drawn out world war, judging by the supply available everywhere.

ROGERS BROS., Alpena, Mich., who purchased a warehouse site in Chicago, some two years ago, have been offered a liberal advance on the price then paid for it.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district have been in stronger demand the past few days, with prices about the same as last week's, namely, $3.00 for colors and $3.50 for whites, prompt shipment.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, December 17, were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 to $11.25 per 100 pounds; March $12.75, sold; $12 bid for year; red clover, $40 to $48 per 100 pounds.

EUGENE SCHAETTEL, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, expects to sail for home from New York on the S. S. France, December 27. His address until that date is care of John Munroe & Co., 30 Pine street, New York.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened steady and December and January unchanged, December 15, with cash offered at $30.40. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.55, December $5.55, March $5.70, April $5.70 and May $5.70.

HENRI LOUIS DE VILMORIN, who is well known to the trade of the United States, re-joined his firm the past summer, having served with distinction in the French navy during the war. Mr. de Vilmorin and Miss Latham, of Havre, were married last August.

VISITED CHICAGO.—Eugene Schaettel, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France; George C. Thomson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; Frank G. Bennett, of the Portland Seed Co., Portland, Ore.; J. A. Blanchard, insecticide manufacturer, New York.

THE analyses of the official samples of seeds collected for test during 1918, by the New York agricultural experiment station, at Geneva, according to Bulletin No. 462 of that station, prove that as a regulatory measure, the present seed law has little, if any, value.

IN Farmers' Bulletin 1025, the United States department of agriculture advises rotation as one of the best general preventives of injury from attacks of the larger corn stalk-borer which has caused much damage to field crops in the south, from Maryland to Florida.

Holly and Green.

Fancy holly sold in Chicago this week at $10 per case and scarce. Dry or off color stock could be bought at $7. The demand far exceeded the supply. Floods, for 10 days, in the southern river bottoms, held back stocks until December 15, when they had to come forward by express.

The last few crates of bouquet green were in good demand at 20 cents per pound.

Timothy and Redtop.

Reports received from a number of important shipping points in the timothy seed producing sections of Illinois and Ohio tend to show that with the exception of a few small localities, the timothy surplus has moved from the hands of growers at prices apparently satisfactory to them. About $11 in Illinois and Indiana and $11.75 in Ohio, have been offered to growers for clean seed. These prices are practically the same as those prevailing during the previous few weeks. While no pronounced activity on the part of seedsmen to purchase seed has been noted in many sections, there has been a steady movement of seed from grower to dealer.

About 80 per cent of the seed had left the hands of growers in the principal producing sections of Minnesota and South Dakota. In general, the movement in this season has been normal, and growers have been fairly free sellers at prices offered them. During the latter part of November, about $10 was being paid to growers for clean seed.

About 95 per cent of this season's crop in Iowa and Missouri had left the hands of growers. Growers were being paid about $9.85 to $10 for country-run and $10.50 to $10.75 for clean seed, which prices were about 50 cents to $1 below those offered a month ago.

REDTOP.

The movement of redtop seed in Illinois has been normal and is practically completed with the exception of a few sections that still had a relatively small quantity of seed to thresh when the weather became unfavorable. About $15 was being paid for fancy or recleaned seed, which was 50 cents to $1 higher than was being paid to the growers about November 10. Practically all the reports agree in stating that the growers have been free sellers at prices that prevailed during November.—United States Seed Reporting Service, December 4, 1919.

Forage Plant Seed Imports, November 1919

The following table prepared in the seed laboratory of the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, shows the amount of the various kinds of forage plant seeds subject to the seed importation act, permitted entry into the United States during the month of November, 1919, and during the five months ending November 30, 1919, as compared with the corresponding periods in the previous year:

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Loui ville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

TROUTDALE, ORE.—The Spencer Gardens, H. C. McGinnis, proprietor, will this year make shipments of celery to the Chicago market, the first time this product has been placed in competition with Michigan and California stock. Four cars have already been shipped. —H. M.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.50 to $5.75; celery, Michigan, square box, $1.25 to $1.50; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 35 to 40 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 90 cents; tomatoes, per lug, $1.50 to $2.00.

New York, Dec. 13.—Celery, per doz. roots, 15 to 75 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $4.00 to $7.00; mushrooms, 60 cents to $2.00 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 45 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $4.00.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture indicate dull markets with a weaker tone during the period, December 8-15. Potato gains were less numerous but the trend was still upward. No. 1 sacked northern round whites advanced five to 10 cents, closing at $3-$3.05 per 100 pounds at Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota shipping points, while middle-western distributing markets gained 10 cents, reaching $3.10-$3.35. Minnesota Red River Ohios reached $3.50-$3.75 for jobbing sales. Colorado round whites strengthened to $2.80 cash to growers at shipping points and Idaho Rurals sold at $2.65 sacked cash track. New York sacked round whites strengthened to a closing range $3-$3.12 f. o. b. shipping points and sales in bulk and sacked stock in eastern markets continued dull with weak tone. Cabbage prices held generally firm, but a few weak spots appeared. Wisconsin Holland seed fell to $60-$65 per ton bulk at Chicago under heavy supplies and the general range in other markets was slightly weaker at $65-$80. New York Danish seed stock was steady at shipping points and ranged $65-$80 in consuming markets. New York Domestic closed stronger at $50-$60 jobbing range. The onion demand was slow in most markets, but supplies are generally limited and prices continue nearly steady. Eastern yellow stock still sold $5.50-$6 per 100 pounds sacked f. o. b. Eastern consuming markets quoted jobbing sales of No. 1 yellow stock $5.75-$6 and middlewestern markets $4-$5.75. Red onions ranged $5.50-$6 in middlewestern cities. California Australian browns continued about steady at $5.50-$6. Sweet potatoes were nearly steady, the demand continuing fairly active in consuming markets. Virginia yellow stock still ranged mostly $4.50-$5.50 per barrel, and Maryland yellows, $5-$6. New Jersey yellow stock strengthened to a range of $2-$2.35 per hamper. Tennessee Nancy Halls were firm in northern markets at $1.75-$2 per hamper, but ranged $1.35-$1.50 in Kansas City.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.
J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa Treasurer.
Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

VISITED CHICAGO: Robt. Chase, of the Chase Nursery Co., Chase, Ala.

HERBERT CHASE and family, of Delta, Colo., will spend Christmas at Huntsville, Ala.

SOME nurserymen are claiming that their stocks available for spring trade, are well sold up.

THE North Shore Landscape Architects announce the opening of their office at 615 Davis street, Evanston, Ill. Benj. E. Gage is landscape advisor; C. Dudley Wagstaff, landscape architect, and Nathaniel F. Webb, manager of the nursery department.

Ass'n Advertising vs. General Publicity.

John Watson, Princeton, N. J., executive secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen, in a recent communication to members of the organization, calling attention to the educational articles distributed by the association which have been printed in 800 publications and which have interested people in trees and plants to the extent that an increased demand has been noticeable in fruit trees and small fruits particularly, presents a number of pertinent facts, among them the following:

"Our publicity matter has suggested what to plant and where and how to plant it, but it is more important to us to tell people where to buy. That means advertising the association.

"There is just as much reason and need for our association to advertise as there is for any individual to advertise.

"Every advertiser must have something to advertise.

"Before you start your catalogue, tell yourself why people should buy your trees in preference to somebody else's. Get the reason why and put it into your catalogue and advertising with all your sincerity and every ounce of your enthusiasm. The 'reason why' is the only thing that can make a book into a selling catalogue or make advertising out of printers' space. Find your 'reason why' and tell it; if you have none, get one—make it—create it—and then holler about it.

"Accurate and even attractive descriptions, handsome pictures and fine printing, make nothing but a book. They are handsome books, but they do not sell goods. They are dead.

"Same way with the association. If we have a 'reason why', let's holler about it. We have it right now.

What can we offer planters that they cannot get elsewhere? We can offer them: Trees true to name, or replace or their money back; trees free from disease, under certificate of a state nursery inspector; trees in good condition when delivered or when shipped, as covered by the terms of sale.

"We can promise every buyer from a member of the association that he will get honest treatment and a square deal. Our constitution and by-laws provide for that now. Our vigilance committee and executive committee will carry it out."

WIZARD BRAND
TRADE MARK.

PULVERIZED SHEEP—PULVERIZED CATTLE

MANURE

PROTECTS YOUR CROP

It is direct heat dried and sterilized, weed seeds, grass seeds, fungus and disease germs destroyed in a direct heat rotary drying process that does not change or destroy any of the valuable elements in crude manure.

Air dried manures cannot be sterilized and usually carry excess moisture that actually makes them cost more per ton than WIZARD BRAND even at the same or a lower price.

Look for the WIZARD BRAND Trade Mark tagged or printed on every bag. If it is not there you are not getting WIZARD BRAND protection for your crop and pocket book.

Your dealer can get WIZARD BRAND for you if you insist or we will quote with freight rate on any quantity from a bag to a carload promptly.

THE PULVERIZED MANURE CO., No. 32 Union Stock Yards. Chicago, Ill.

Dreer's Peerless Glazing Points
For Greenhouses

Drive easy and true, because both bevels are on the same side. Can't twist and break the glass in driving. Galvanized and will not rust. No rights or lefts.
The Peerless Glazing Point is patented. No others like it. Order from your dealer or direct from us.
1000, 90c. postpaid. Samples free.

Miles and Smiles.

Mark your milestones with a smile,
E'en the year has been worth while;
Wondrous led and doubly blessed,
Let your joy be manifest.

Mark your milestones with a smile,
Fleeting years you'll thus beguile,
And the morrow sure will be
E'en a greater joy to thee.

Mark your milestones with a smile
By the roadside—mile on mile,
Then your followers will say:
Life's a smile—smile all the way.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Tulips and Narcissi.

The Dutch bulbs are now in condition to bring into the houses, for they should be well rooted, and will force readily, and from the first of the year on the grower should regulate the culture of these so that there will be a continuous supply. The best way to accomplish this is to have one day in the week which is bulb day—that is, on this day the succeeding lots will be brought from where they are stored and placed in the greenhouses. The demand will, of course, fluctuate to some extent, but by looking back two or three years it will be found that the call for this stock is about in the same proportion every year, and a basis on which to figure about how many pots or boxes should be brought up can be obtained. If it is found that the stock is accumulating at any time, those that are not quite in bloom can be removed to a cooler house and retarded, and those that are almost in bloom, if moved into a shed where it is dark and quite cool, will last in splendid condition for a week or 10 days longer. For the present it will be necessary to put the pans and pots in a shaded position in order to get the proper length of stem. Those forced early if allowed to stand in a warm house in full sunlight, will open their flowers before they have attained good height, so it is well to place them under a bench or provide a place where they can be kept rather dark for a week. In cutting the flowers endeavor to cut them from the pans or boxes that have been in the houses the longest. A thoughtless man will cut into a box that is just opening and which would be good for a week or more, when there are plenty that could be cut that will not last nearly so long. There is always a great waste in growing bulbs and everything that is possible should be done to prevent it. On bulb day when the fresh lot is put on the bench those that were brought up three or four weeks before and are in full flower will be ready to be thrown out. Any flowers that may be on these boxes, if they are well in bloom, should be cut and placed in water. They will last much longer if cut and kept cool than they will if left on the bulbs in the greenhouses.

Geraniums.

After the holiday trade there will be room enough to space out the geraniums and other bedding stock. The cuttings that were placed in flats, and the young stock in 2-inch pots, should be shifted to the 3-inch size and spaced on the benches so that a good growth is encouraged. As soon as well established in these pots, the top can be cut off and another cutting obtained. All the young stock possible should be taken from the plants selected in the fall for propagating purposes, for all the cuttings from which it is expected to produce good sized plants should be in the propagating bench by February 1. Any rooted after March 1 will be small plants for bedding purposes. The best stock for late May and early June planting should be in 4-inch pots by April, that they may be well enough established by the middle of May to begin to flower, and should have at that time three or four good branches so that a succession of bloom is assured.

Poinsettias.

This is a Christmas plant pure and simple. It is to the midwinter holidays what the lily is to Easter and the sale of plants or flowers after the new year is very small and hardly remunerative. The plants that are left should at once be treated for stock plants. It is the custom of some growers to immediately place the pots under a bench and water them no longer. It is much better, however, to block them up closely in a warm house and gradually dry them off until the wood ripens and then store them away where they will be kept dry. When the plants are treated by the former method the green wood often dies down more than half the length, but by a slower ripening off many more and much better cuttings can be obtained. They can be laid down on their sides under a carnation bench where they will not receive any water, or if the pots are needed they can be heeled-in in such a location, and here they can remain until April, when they should be started for propagation, using either the old growth or starting the plants into growth and making the cuttings from the young shoots as they break from the old wood. With these it is better to make the cuttings with a heel and in a warm location they root quite easily.

Cleaning Up After Christmas.

The Christmas sales will give the plantsman an opportunity to give the houses a thorough overhauling and begin preparations for the Easter stock, and also more room for the plants that are to produce flowers during the winter. The probabilities are that the best plants have been disposed of, and the demand for the balance will slacken up considerably for the next two or three weeks. Any plants that will not be salable in the middle of the next month, especially if they are not of the best quality, had better be thrown away, and not allowed to remain taking up valuable space for a month or more, only to be discarded later. The stock plants should all be selected and preparations for next season's propagation begun. The old favorite Begonia incarnata is still grown by many. The old plants never make good stock for another year, so select enough to produce all the stock wanted, and discard the balance. It will be busy times where many plants are grown, but the quicker and earlier the work is done the better will be the resultant crops. The bulb stock is now ready to be brought in and all the room should be immediately filled up with stock that can be grown into plants that will find ready sale. It sometimes takes courage to throw away plants that look as if they would bring in something, but it is far better to do this, even if a plant is thrown out that might be sold, than to carry along a lot of stock that never turns in a cent to the money drawer.

Montreal Ch istmas Advertising.

Notwithstanding the fact that local growing establishments were practically depleted as far as plant offerings were concerned since December 1, with unusually high prices prevailing in almost every item in the florists' list, the trade in Montreal, Que., showed its strong faith in publicity, an example of which was an attractive full page in the Montreal Standard, December 13, under the heading "Say Merry Christmas With Flowers." Among the firms who occupied space on the page were: McKenna, Ltd., S. J. Denson, Rubin Bros., Mrs. C. M. Smith, Campbell's Florists, Dominion Floral Co., Ed. Gernaey, Chas. J. Hill, John Eddy & Sons and George Hopton's Greenhouses.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

New Year's Day.

Away back in the sixties, the first day of January was the greatest floral holiday of the year in New York City. The florists there had all they could possibly do, and drew largely on Philadelphia for camellias, the fashionable flower of those days, and also for assistance. Singular as it may seem, Christmas, in New York, caused little demand for flowers, while in Philadelphia it was their big day, and the New York brethren used to go over and help them out, and a week later, Philadelphia florists would return the favor.

These sectional festivities, as the cities and country have grown in population, have all merged until now, Christmas, the greatest of all holidays, is universal the country over, while the observance of the New Year, with its beautiful custom of open house, is almost, if not quite, a thing of the past. It would appear as if there was a great opportunity here to revive the beautiful custom of sending baskets of flowers to friends, with cards wishing them a happy and prosperous New Year. If properly featured in window displays, and through the reading columns of the newspapers, as well as in store literature to customers, there might be a revival of this expression of love and esteem, through the giving of flowers, which would for this purpose have the field almost to themselves.

This could be helped along by the various receptions of a public character now customary, at the installations of city officials ,and also public and private dinners, at which there are always more or less elaborate decorations. There are quite a number of fancy balls, which call for decorations in the holiday colors of red and green. For this demand, it is always well to set aside a few cases of holly to be drawn on after the holiday rush. Should there be Christmas wreaths left over, they can be used up in work of this kind to good advantage.

For table decorations, cut poinsettias make a gorgeous display ,their brilliant bracts giving the color effect desired. These should be arranged in plateaus or in low bowls, together with sprays on the cloth, all of which should, when cut the desired length, have the ends of the stems seared or scalded in hot water, when they will remain fresh for a number of hours.

Anything in the way of house plants or plant baskets, left over from Christmas, should be freshened up and made to look their best, as there are quite a few who desire something of this kind for friends who were overlooked at the holiday. Primulas obconica, Townsendii and other improved types now coming in, should be featured in many ways. This class of flowering plants includes the most valuable that have been introduced in many years. They can be made to take the place of the present high-priced flowers in table and other decorations.

An up-to-date New Year's card, expressing the compliments of the season, thanking customers for their business of the past, and hoping for a continuance of their valued patronage, should be enclosed with the January 1 bills, and also mailed to all on the list whose accounts are closed.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The great excitement is over, and it is hoped that all had a prosperous holiday season. There was a big demand, and those who were prepared, who were early on the job with a store full of bright, fresh staples and up-to-date novelties, should have had all the business they could handle, at a handsome profit.

The Christmas business is one of the most important of the year, and its quota of profits should be correspondingly large. Again and again, we have heard retailers say: "I wish there were no holidays; there is just a lot of slavish work, and when it is all counted up, there is very little compensation." Such a statement reveals the poor business man. The successful Christmas campaign is planned months ahead; in fact, the best time to arrange for the Christmas of 1920 is right now. The entire experience of the recent trade in all its details is fresh in your mind, and its record should be immediately made in the year book. Every important item should have a place. A list of the various plants, flowering, berried and foliage, their condition, how they sold, those that ran short, and stock, if any left over and why; plant baskets, how filled and decorated, and data about them that will be useful for next season; the cut flowers, varieties of roses, carnations, violets, orchids, small flowers, etc., and how the demand seem to run. Also the wreaths, both for house and cemetery decoration. Note the best sellers, and any ideas brought out that will be useful for next season. Was the holly all right, and enough for the demand?

The arrangement of the store is important as to the window decorations and those of the front of the building. The delivery, extra help and cars for this work, as well as additions to the store force should be recorded. Was the circular out on time, did it pull, and was the result from newspaper ads satisfactory?

With such a record of the business, in black and white, to refresh the mind when preparing time again rolls 'round, mistakes are avoided and a profitable trade assured.

It is the head guiding the hands that makes the money. Take pencil and paper and figure out the profits. If they do not appear on the sheet, no amount of hand work will bring them. Many made up articles are sold at cost, or very little over, because time and material is guessed at and not actually determined.

Everything should be done to eliminate waste; stock left over is waste of the most expensive kind. Too much variety, purchased without regard as to whether there is sure to be a demand for the many items, leads to over stocks, that become shop worn and eventually have to be sold at a loss or thrown out.

Immediately the holidays are over, all decorations and every article of value in prepared material that remains unsold should be carefully laid away to be brought out next season. The entire interior of the store is to be so changed as to turn customers' minds into other channels.

The social season is now on, with balls, dinners and receptions following one another every day. There will be inquiries for new ideas in decorations for the buffet and dinner table, of which there should always be something of interest to show. If possible, a room adjoining the store, in which is kept various cut glass, silver, vases and other receptacles for flowers, and a table on which to display them, properly arranged, will land many an order. An occasional table decoration, as a window feature, will be sure to attract attention. It is a good time to keep made up and display corsages of various flowers. Sweet peas will soon become more plentiful, and there is nothing better that can be sold at a moderate price. They look most attractive, when with ribbons and pin, they are shown on wax paper, partially out of their boxes.

Plants of the Glory fern are good stock to carry. They are useful in all kinds of fine work. A plant or two, with the roots mossed, set in a plateau or basket, will take the place of expensive flowers and add to the grace of the arrangement with their beautiful light green fronds. They will also outlast the flowers. The common maidenhair can be used the same way to advantage. Shake off the soil, wrap a little sphagnum around the roots, and the fronds will not shrivel for several days.

SOLANUM WITH MAT COVER

Are you working or doing your share for the publicity campaign? Just now, there is demand for all the flowers that are grown; greatly helped by the countrywide advertising so intelligently carried out by the S. A. F. publicity committee. This is worthy of your most earnest support. There is not a retailer who could not do at least 20 per cent more business, if he would join in this movement financially, and then back it up with a little more pressure in his own store. The thousands of growers who are casting shadows over their prospects by holding aloof from this movement, should buy a ray or two of this sunshine of publicity. Every dollar they invest will bring them 10 in return.

Flower Scarcity and Sales.

To the great majority of buyers, flowers at this time, seem abnormally high. Like the words in the song, people come in, hear the price, turn round, and "walk right out again." The good salesman will soon get to know these timid buyers, and without at once discouraging their desire for a few flowers by quoting high prices, will endeavor to find out for what purpose they are to be used, and about how much it was expected they would cost. The greatest demand from those who are not frequent customers is for funeral flowers. Designs made entirely of flowers are beyond their reach, but if properly handled, they become satisfied with the magnolia or galax wreath, decorated with a few of the flowers they wanted. Others who are afraid the prepared materials look too artificial, will perhaps compromise on a wreath of crested ferns, which when decorated, is virtually all fresh flowers, the beautiful ferns taking the place of many of the higher priced blossoms and giving a most artistic finish.

Prepared palm leaves vary little in price from one season's end to the other, and can be made to add materially to the size of a large spray, by fastening short stemmed roses or other flowers to almost cover half the length of the leaves, thus continuing out the main body of the cluster, which then appears to be made of all long stemmed flowers.

A dozen roses that sell at $6 will be considered very expensive, while half a dozen of the same buds, and a couple of bunches of stevia for $5, will be quite satisfactory. Three choice roses, and a little green, are to be recommended, rather than a dozen roses of lower grade that cost twice as much. Their use or effect can be demonstrated in a pretty vase, kept handy for the purpose.

If the purchase is found to be cheer for a sick room, suggest a blooming plant, a primrose or begonia, or a nice fern, which may look more for the money, and be nearer the customer's price.

A vase or two of greenhouse foliage, such as croton sprays, leaves of the Begonia Rex, and cut fronds of the fancy crested ferns, can be used to good advantage in lieu of expensive roses in boxes of flowers or arranged baskets. A small vase basket, with a variety of cheaper flowers, such as sweet peas, or all calendulas, tied with suitable ribbon, will make a good showing that is likely to please.

Everyone that enters the store is a prospect; they may be "just looking," but the clever salesman makes it a point to show them just what they are looking for. To bluntly answer, "How much are roses?" by quoting the unvarnished figures, without endeavoring to interest them in other items, is not good salesmanship. There should never be any apologies for seemingly high prices, nor should the tone of voice show any such indication. It is better to immediately say, "Are they not beautiful?" which implies they are fully worth the price asked.

Never hold customers too cheap. The price, while it may seem high to you, is what they expected. In fact, a person who was ready or intended to pay $10 per dozen for roses, will not buy them at $5 even if they look good enough.

Suggestions often make sales. A bunch of stevia, one-half to a dozen mignonette, a bunch of bouvardia, violets, pansies, etc., may be placed in the box, with a dozen roses, if the proposition is made.

Early Christmas in New York Stores.

Few, if any, of the retail stores had received their complete supply of plants, December 20, but enough had arrived to show just about what they will have to offer. The quality of the poinsettias and the Christmas heather is excellent. In azaleas, it was almost a surprise to see so many fairly good ones, when we consider that it is all heldover stock. Solanum capsicastrum are much in evidence, and are being extensively used in combinations. The foliage plants, such as crotons, Pandanus Veitchii and dracænas, are also prominent. A few daisies have been noticed, and more are likely to be seen later. Indications point to a fair supply of cyclamens, begonias of the Mrs. Peterson variety, and other small plants. The stock of Otaheite oranges is fine. At the Dards store there was an excellent display of poinsettias, oranges, heather, exceptionally fine crotons and other foliage plants, and a large assortment of handsome wreaths. Few of the retailers find time or take the trouble to make up baskets of cut flowers for Christmas, but at Ralph Armstrong's store, a number of good features in such baskets were noticed. Small handle containers were filled with pansies, a cypripedium or a cattleya, sweet peas or roses, carnations and yellow narcissus.

The "bulls" of the Christmas tree market got a shock this year, as there was an abundance of trees. However, it is possible to make a stock of such trees look something better than a mere brush fence. That was done by J. H. Small & Sons. They had a most complete stock, from tiny shrubs up to 25 and 30 foot trees, all set and tamped in handsomely painted tubs. This firm had also its usual supply of fine plants.

At the Leikens store, in addition to Christmas preparations, the staff has been kept busy with funeral work and decorations. For December 23, they decorated the ball room of the Hotel Vanderbilt with an artistically arranged stock of poinsettias.

G. E. M. Stumpp had his usual fine display of plants and plant combinations. Heather, azaleas, poinsettias, ardisias and various foliage plant combinations were noteworthy. George Stumpp, the elder, who always shows up at Christmas, was on hand cheerful and smiling as usual. We confess that it is rather late to mention the fact that he is again a benedict.

But a medium supply had reached Kottmiller at the time of our visit, but all were well arranged. A feature was a number of handsomely decorated oblong boxes, filled with foliage combinations.

A. T. Bunyard had an excellent stock of oranges, heather and foliage plant combinations. Another feature was attractive wreaths of hemlock, studded with pine or spruce cones.

In foliage stock, J. W. Hauser had pots and tubs of English ivy trained on wire frames and they were attractive and sold well, but flowering stock was also in evidence.

In weather, December 20 was the fairest day of the week, and plant buyers were out. At practically all the stores here mentioned, many orders were taken.

H. H. Burns had many good features in plants and plant combinations, many of them of a size and price to be attractive to people of moderate means.

Max Schling's display was not completed, but an exceptionally large stock of poinsettias and heather of fine quality was noticed.

Holly Breakers.

Ever since the old saturnalian feasts of ancient Rome, a sprig of holly has been a symbol of sacrifice. Christianity added a new interpretation to the little red berries and the thorny leaves, but still they stood for sacrifice. Every Christmas, wreaths of holly have been hung in the home as nature's reminder of the greatest sacrifice the world has known.

Bud Moore was a holly breaker. Every winter he went into the holly woods of Tennessee to break the branches with the crimson berries and ship them to Chicago. Many a red-ribboned wreath, hung in the boulevard window at Christmas time, has felt the touch of Bud's fingers.

Those who have been lucky enough to obtain a wreath or two this year—for there is an unprecedented shortage—may be interested in Bud's story, as told by a series of telegrams exchanged by him with Vaughan's Seed Store.

"Eighty-one cases of holly shipped today," Bud wired November 27. "Other shipments delayed few days account of floods." Two days later this message: "Eighty-seven cases holly shipped today. Flood still on."

"Let shipments come along as fast as you can," wired Vaughan's Seed Store. The shortage was becoming acute. Four days later the store increased its orders and urged speed.

"Floods stopped all breaking," Bud wired, December 3. "Cars will come as fast as possible.

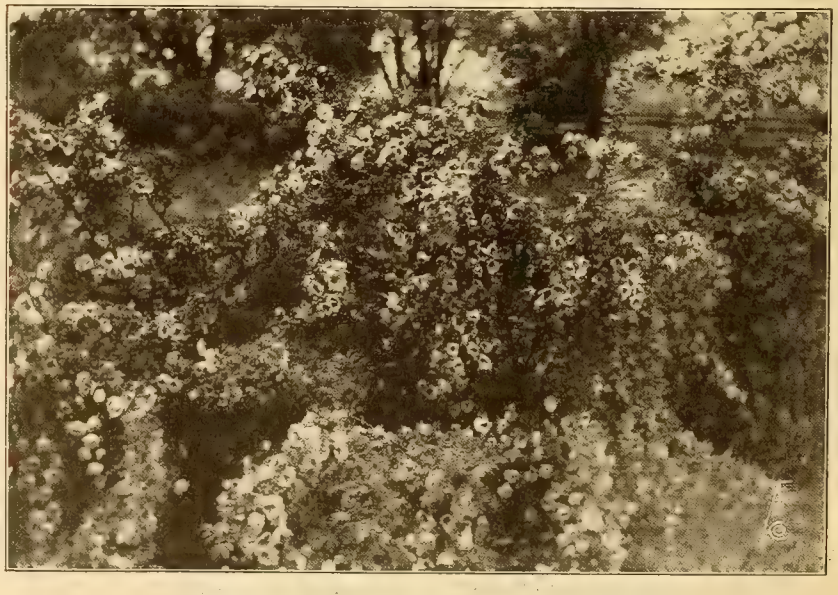
On December 8 came a like message of floods and delays, and a third was received later. More telegrams urging speed were sent by the store, December 10 and 12. No answer came from Bud. December 15 the store wired: "No letter or telegram this Monday morning. We must hear from you. Wire us."

HOLLY—AND SACRIFICE!

"One hundred and eight cases of holly shipped by express from Toone today," came the answer. "Seventy cases shipped to Jackson. Letter will follow explaining delay."—Bud Moore by T. Moore.

Last Tuesday this message was received: "Seventy cases holly shipped prepaid express tonight. On account of flood and bad weather can't get any more holly this season.—Bud Moore."

"Unless you express another hundred," the store wired on Wednesday,



ROSA HUGONIS PLANTED THREE YEARS.

"we shall be in a bad position with our holly customers. We gave you exclusive territory and it is your duty to make extra effort to make good this week."

"Impossible to get any more holly this year," read the answer. "My father died December 11 from pneumonia caused by exposure while getting holly for you. I have done the best I could for you in his place under the circumstances.—Thomas Moore."

ROSA HUGONIS.

And that's one reason for the holly shortage this season.

"Received your telegram with great regret, remembering the long years of pleasant business relations I had with your father," reads a telegram sent by J. C. Vaughan. "Please accept my deepest sympathy. Very sorry we did not know of your troubles. We shall be glad to continue our dealings with you next year."—Chicago Tribune, December 19.

Rosa Hugonis.

Rosa Hugonis, a native of western China, a large shrub with gracefully arching stems, flowers single and about two and one-half inches in diameter; bright, clear yellow petals and very fragrant, which has been one of the most interesting and beautiful plants in the Arnold Arboretum since its introduction, has proven a valuable addition to the few yellow-flowered roses hardy in New England.

For many years the Cinnamon rose, Rosa cinnamomea, was the first in the Arboretum to open its flowers, but in 1915, according to the Arnold Arboretum Bulletin of May 26, that year, two Chinese species, R. Hugonis and R. Omeinsis, began to bloom at the same time. Judged by its appearance in 1917, it was said that no plant sent from China to the northern gardens in the United States equalled this rose in grace and beauty. Its long arching branches were so thickly covered with flowers from end to end that the petals touched and made a continuous band of pale yellow. In 1918, it fulfilled its promise of being a hardy and fast growing shrub, and with R. Ecea, produced the first flowers of the season on the earliest roses.

Fred H. Howard, the well known California rosarian, however, says the old Persian Yellow is equally good.

Foliage Plants at Holiday Season.

ARRANGEMENTS GAIN IN PUBLIC FAVOR.

For many years past there has been more activity in the foliage plant trade during November and December than at almost any time of the year, this being largely due to the growth in public favor of various arrangements of such plants to be used as gifts. These arrangements are in the form of baskets, fancy earthen pots, or sometimes window boxes, and from the fact that the public in general, or at least that part of it which buys such arrangements, requires a finished article rather than something that they need to wait for the development of, there is a crowding of the roots in order to get the receptacle properly effective at the appointed time.

But, even so, these combinations of plants will last much longer in the house than a bunch of cut flowers that may have cost as much, so that on the whole the plants usually give satisfaction. Granted a sufficient variety of plants with which to work, and it is really surprising what numerous variations in these plant combinations may be produced by some of those tasty artists among our retail brethren, and it must be admitted that the artists in question sometimes work under greater disadvantages than a grower does in making up arrangements of this character, for the grower is likely to have a greater number of plants to choose from.

DRACAENAS STRONG FAVORITES.

The draceænas comprise a valuable group for this work, the old reliable D. terminal is showing its bright color to advantage at this season, and being possibly still the most popular of its family for Christmas work. D. Lord Wolseley is also valuable in these combinations, its narrower foliage and rich coloring making it a very effective plant, and at the same time a graceful one. D. deremensis Werneckei is an unhandy title for an attractive plant of peculiar variegation, the rather stiff foliage reminding one in some way of a variegated D. Draco. The general leaf color of D. Warneckei is a gray green, while the edges of the leaves are silvery white, and although the variegation of D. Warneckei is not so sharply defined as that of some other white-marked plants, still it may easily find a place in the trade. D. Massangeana and D. Lindenii are also among the useful members of this extensive family, both these varieties being variegated forms of D. fragrans, and like the latter, are of comparatively easy culture. It will also be remembered by most growers that the chief distinction between these two variegated dracænas lies in the fact that D. Massangeana has its variegation in the centre of the leaves, while D. Lindenii has marginal markings, and this very feature makes D. Massangeana the most enduring house plant of the two, its green margined leaves being less liable to decay than the more delicate foliage of D. Lindenii.

Then there is D. Sanderiana, that slender-growing and well-variegated little plant that is so much used for table ferneries and other small decorations, and finds many admirers in all stages of its development from two-inch pots to six-inch sizes. D. Godseffiana is another very useful species from the tropics, its wiry growth and firm glossy foliage giving a pleasing variety to many a small plant arrangement. Of course, it will be remembered that all the dracænas here noted are decidedly among the warm house plants, in most cases preferring a night temperature of 65°, with all the sunshine available at this season of the year.

As yet, most of the dracænas are to be had in moderate supply, but what may happen in another year to this stock is problematic, unless the federal horticultural board experiences a change of heart, for the raw material from which the florist gets his dracæna cuttings are the clean, smooth stems of these plants that have been imported from the tropics in former years, but which are now like whiskey and witchcraft, among the forbidden things.

CROTONS AND OTHER GOOD OFFERINGS.

Since crotons have been produced in large quantities and fine quality, there has also been found a ready market for them, and at Christmas time, these splendid plants, clothed with brilliantly colored foliage from top to bottom, meet with an enthusiastic reception. From three-inch pots to seven or eight-inch tubs are the sizes required by the up-to-date store, but for basket work, those of the smaller sizes are most useful. Crotons are essentially tropical plants and should not be exposed to cold draughts while standing around the store, or while in transit to a customer, but if handled with common sense, they are among the richest and most effective decorative material.

Marantas are not plentiful enough to be found in the majority of stores, but some of the leading decorators use them in choice arrangements, and of these plants, two of the best are M. Sanderiana and M. vittata, both of which have foliage of good texture and fine coloring. There are quantities of some other marantas to be found about the country, but most of them are not enduring enough or else have not color enough, and consequently, are little sought for commercially.

The variegated bow-string hemp, Sansevieria zeylanica Laurentii gives a novel touch to some combinations of plants; the erect, sword-like leaves, edged with yellow, make a welcome contrast with some of our old favorites of former seasons. But this plant is not yet very common, and as division seems the accepted method of propagation, it is not likely that the market will soon be overloaded.

Among the low growing plants that are very acceptable, and capable of standing quite a good deal of exposure, are the farfugiums, both the old-fashioned yellow spotted type of F. grande, and also the white variegated form. These farfugiums, or ligularias, as the modern botanists term them, are almost hardy, and thus make useful stock for window boxes.

Peperomia maculosa, nicely grown in three or four-inch pots, is readily disposed of at this season, and combines well with some of the ferns and other foliage material. Pandanus Veitchii, from four, five and six-inch pots; ivies, both green and variegated; some nice short, bushy plants of Vinca variegata and numerous other plants in smaller quantities, all appear in these Christmas foliage effects, some of which are novel, some are very beautiful, and some are merely quaint, but all are likely to be transmuted into precious yellow metal or its equivalent at this joyous and prosperous Christmas season.

Bulb Shipments From Canada Restricted.

BY FEDERAL HORTICULTURAL BOARD.

In what is characterized as particularly noticeable, absolute disregard of national or individual commercial interests by the federal horticultural board in making decisions, McHutchison & Co., well known importers of horticultural supplies, New York, call attention ot the following copies of letters with reference to obtaining a few surplus cases of lily bulbs, through reshipment from Canada, to relieve a temporary shortage:

November 19, 1919.

Federal Horticultural Board,
New York.

Following the visit of our C. B. Knickman, we state the situation in writing, and request that you lay the facts before Washington and advise us of decision as soon as possible. The facts are these:

Owing to the sinking of the S. S. Yoten Maru, off Yokohama, which was bringing our earliest large consignment of lily bulbs to New York, via Panama Canal route, and the holding back of 1000 cases in Seattle, due to lack of refrigerator cars, we are short of lily bulbs here, and the eight or 10 carloads now en route, cannot arrive in time.

You can understand that this will be a big loss to us. But on the other hand, we have a small surplus in London, Ont., which we would like to bring to New York by express, but your regulations prevent this being done—unless you are willing to strain a point to meet the situation.

The Canadian shipment went through in bond from Yokohama to London via Vancouver, and while we have not yet received shipping documents from Japan, we assume that no certificate of inspection is attached to the documents, nor health certificates or sterilization certificates on the cases, as these are not required by Canadian laws. This, of course, is merely conjecture on our part, but we must assume there are none. What we would like to bring from London are the following lots: 50 cases lilium giganteum, 7-9 inches; 10 cases lilium giganteum, 8-10 inches; 25 cases lilium giganteum, 9-10 inches.

As the soil in which these are packed comes from the side of a mountain taken many feet from the surface, there can be no danger of insect pests or plant diseases being introduced through this medium; but we are willing to confine shipments to points around New York, so that you can arrange for the disposition of the soil used as packing material, if you so desire.

Kindly take up this matter promptly with Washington, for we expect to receive at least 1,500 cases within three weeks, so that there would be no advantage in getting this small lot from Canada, unless we could get them in by express ahead of the freight shipments en route. Thanking you in advance for your decision, we remain,

McHUTCHISON & Co.

FEDERAL HORTICULTURAL BOARD.

November 25, 1919.

McHutchison & Co.,
New York.

Reference is made to your letter of the 19th instant, in regard to shipments of lily bulbs from Japan which have been routed to a Canadian point, and which you surmised to have been packed in unsterilized soil, because the shipper was under the impression that they were intended for the Canadian market and not for that of the United States. In reply to your query as to whether the board will allow such bulbs to be shipped into the United States, I have to advise you that the board considers it impossible to permit the entry of such bulbs into this country, and that strict compliance with the soil sterilization requirements must be insisted upon. Doubtless you will be able to dispose of the bulbs in Canada.

HARRY B. SHAW,
Pathological Inspector in Charge.

The Human Appeal.

We have been talking about the benefits of our national publicity compaign so long, without getting the response to which our slogan, "Say it With Flowers," is so justly entitled, that the following story, taken from the N. C. R. News, is rather pertinent:

"Travelling Salesmen: I've sold this medicine for over 30 years, and I've never had a single complaint. What does this prove

"Voice in the crowd: That dead men tell no tales."

While many of us appreciate there are no dead ones connected with the development or sale of flowers, yet occasionally we would like to hear from the silent ones who have as yet not contributed. Your committees have labored well, and if we have accomplished with the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," with its four words expressing so much, in so short a time, it must remind you of how much your committees have accomplished with so little funds. Our endeavors can be broadened, and the results proven greater, were the florists to awaken to the vast good all would receive, if all gave who could. Our campaign has attracted many who have never placed flowers in their proper plane, but by a vigorous campaign, nationally and locally, you are compelling attention to the end that all benefit in its distribution. The florists are peculiarly well situated in a national campaign, in the fact that the retailers who advertise locally, are also their own distributors, thus getting the double advantage of any other campaign, which compels manufacturers or others to create a middle-man as its agency for reaching the retailer, whilst the florists who tie up to our campaign, each enjoy the full benefits.

Flowers are getting more and more in popular favor as is evidenced by the increased sales reported everywhere. But the service is only begun if your campaign fund can get the proper support. One of the wise minds of our country said that it was better to save a little each week out of a small salary, than to earn a big salary and spend it all. If everyone who is interested in the development of flowers commercially, would subscribe a little every year, we would have sufficient to do what we would like to do, and your committees would feel more encouraged in producing greater results than what have already been shown.

If our appeal is consistent, then the answer is—Subscribe and you will then only be helping yourself after all.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman National Pub. Campaign.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The florists throughout the land have, probably without exception, in the past few days, been—to use a common expression—doing a "land office business." The magazine advertising of our publicity campaign was timely for this season, and was calculated to arouse interest in flowers and plants as Christmas gifts. A page carrying a beautiful group of flowers, painted from nature and reproduced in actual colors, appeared in "World's Work, Munsey's, Review of Reviews, Scribner's, Atlantic Monthly, Century and Harper's." A well-arranged panel of text conveyed the message:

"For the Christmas and New Year Greetings, let the heart speak through flowers. Radiantly, lovely and alive with the holiday spirit—they convey every thought and sentiment with a sweetness surpassing mere words."

In the Metropolitan, for December, was a whole page advertisement in colors, and located facing a solid page of editorial matter, the design, suggested by a famous illustration, including a beautiful girl of the Mary Pickford order, whose countenance gave unmistakable evidence of pleasure in the possession of gifts of flowers and plants. The text panel in this case suggested: "Say it With Flowers." The Gift of all Gifts. "Merry Christmas" has a new and richer meaning when you say it with flowers. More gracious than words—more personal than material tokens—flowers convey your Christmas greeting with a sincerity that speaks to the heart. Courtesy, custom, correctness—and a nice sense of thoughtfulness—are characteristic of the holiday wish expressed with flowers."

In all the advertisements was the paragraph:

"Your local florist, within a few hours, can deliver fresh flowers in any city or town in the United States and Canada through the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Service."

There is little room for doubt that this publicity has caused a greater demand for flowers and plants at this festive season than ever before. Before the war, we always counted upon extra business at Christmas, but never such a volume as this year. Many days before this trade paper went to press with its issue of today, plantsmen generally were entirely sold out of salable stock—evidence that the public intended to 'Say it With Flowers."

Our publicity committee is in urgent need of more funds to carry along the campaign during the spring months. St. Valentine's day and Mothers' day are to be featured very strongly in the magazine advertising, and contracts for space in the periodicals of large circulation must be quickly completed. It is hoped that the large body of florists who have not yet subscribed to the fund will see the desirability of helping themselves by helping the campaign. The response made by the public to our slogan, "Say it With Flowers," is surprisingly large. Help us to make it larger, help us to perpetuate it. We can, with the help we believe to be owing to us, make the slogan more popular than any yet established—it means more and has greater applicability than any phrse ever adapted to trade purposes.

Begin the New Year well, and see that your name goes on the honor roll of the campaign.

Pittsburgh, Pa,

SLOW WEEK BEFORE THE RUSH.

The usual lull in business before Christmas is on, and the retail stores report things slow in general, but the supply of cut flowers is such that everything is cleaned up daily at good prices. Some of the shops seem to think that the public will not buy cut flowers this year at the high prices that are going to prevail, but on an average, prices are no higher than last year, with no larger supply to draw from, and we all know that it costs more to produce stock this year than it did last year, so why should the prices be lower? More and more growers every year are turning over their plants to winter vegetables, as they claim they can realize more from these crops than they can from flowers. American Beauties and roses are in fair supply, and the quality is good. Other stock is short, carnations in particular being scarce, and it looks as though there would be a shortage of them for Christmas.

NOTES.

Randolph & McClements have one of the prettiest window displays in town, the color scheme is carried out in green and white. Everything used is artificial or prepared plants and flowers.

The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co. is specializing on blooming plants this year ,and has a fine display of poinsettias, begonias, cyclemans and primroses.

The McCallum Co. clan is beginning to gather for the annual love feast, which is held during the week between Christmas and New Year's.

Frank Zack, formerly employed by the A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co., is now in the employ of Randolph & McClements.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, as usual, has one of the finest displays of specimen plants and combination plant baskets in town.

Wm. Usinger, Charlie Edgar and Henry Blend are now on the scene, with about eight more road men to be heard from. M.

Baltimore.

LIMITED STOCK AT HIGH PRICES.

The condition of the local market remains practically unchanged, with no item in plentiful supply, while carnations are almost unobtainable. The outlook for even a moderate quantity of this flower after Christmas is far from encouraging, as most of the growers, for various reasons, have not made the usual plantings. All kinds of miscellaneous stock, such as calendulas, snapdragons and early sweet peas, are eagerly sought, as there is nothing else available for table decoration. In the retail stores, the 6-inch fernery is the popular substitute at this time when the price of flowers is so high. A headline in the daily papers is not necessary to let the frequent buyer know of the existing advanced prices, as they would be disappointed if the price of luxuries had not kept pace with the necessities of life. A dull week is always in order just before Christmas, and this week ran true to form.

NOTES.

The Leo Niessen Co. handled 3,000 paper frames this season, wire being coarse and very expensive.

Stevenson Bros., of Towson, had some very fine 36-inch Shawyer roses in this market during the week.

Lehr Bros. are shipping some excellent Premier roses, which are moving freely at 40 cents.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

As is customary with this club, the December meeting is advanced to the second instead of the third Thursday of the month, and the meeting is quickly adjourned into a social evening. The meeting resulted in the following nominations for the officers to serve this club the next year, beginning January 1: M. J. Brinton, Christiana, Pa., president; B. F. Barr, vice-president; Albert M. Herr, secretary, and Harry K. Rohrer, treasurer.

The programme committee reported an illustrated lecture on Holland by P. W. DeHertogh for the January meeting. The social committee, H. K. Rohrer, L. Landis and A. F. Strickler, reported that they were ready with their plans and the meeting adjourned to partake, first of the refreshments prepared, and then to bowl, play cards, billiards and pool. Mesdames Elmer Weaver, B. F. Barr, A. F. Strickler and A. M. Herr won prizes in the card playing, and Messrs. B. F. Barr and Lewis Dyer won the high score bowling prizes. The billiard and pool experts were content with winning their respective games, without any prizes. Mr. Hoehl, of S. S. Skidelsky & Co., was duly initiated as a bowler, and after trying both sides of the alley, without getting any pins, he decided that the middle was the place to roll, and ran up a very creditable score.

The size of the party was somewhat of a disappointment, but there was no lack of enjoyment in the pleasures of the evening, and the stay-at-homes had the sympathy of the crowd.

ALBERT M. HERR.

The Late George T Schuneman.

George T. Schuneman, a violet and sweet pea specialist, died at his home in Rockville Center, N. Y., December 22, of pneumonia, age 62 years. He was a native of Germany and had been in this country for 35 years, 21 years of which he was a resident of the above city. He was for a time in business at Baldwin, N. Y., but retired a few years ago. He was a member of the New York Florists' Club and kindred organizations. A widow survives. A. F. F.

FRAMINGHAM, MASS.—J. A. Nelson has purchased 12 acres of land adjoining his range.

FLUSHING, N. Y.—Max D. Ulrich, of Astoria, is said to have purchased two acres of land here and will commence flower growing in the spring.

MONTICELLO, FLA.—H. F. Banks, formerly of Newtown, Pa., has located here, and intends to grow bulbs of various kinds for the wholesale trade.

WASHINGTON, PA.—The Washington Floral Co., Inc., has applied for a decree of dissolution, a hearing on which will be held December 29, at 10 a. m.

SMITHVILLE, N. Y.—A. J. Maier, of Douglastown, Long Island, has purchased the range of Wm. J. Enters, comprising 8,000 feet of glass and six acres of land.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The feature of the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, January 13, will be a lecture by Professor Jack, of Arnold Arboretum, on "New Plants."

FARMINGTON, UTAH.—The Miller Floral Co. has named four new roses grown at its range here as follows: Utah and Olivia, red, and Peace and Edith Cavell, white.

TEWKESBURY, MASS.—At a recent meeting of creditors of the Ames Plow Co., a 20 per cent dividend was authorized by the referee in bankruptcy and James A. Proctor, Jr., was elected trustee.

LOWELL, MASS.—J. J. McManmon has returned from a visit of several months in England and Ireland, during which time he inspected a number of the leading nurseries and growing establishments there.

I have finished another year, said God,
In grey, green, white and brown;
I've strewed the leaf upon the sod,
Sealed up the worm within the clod,
And let the last sun down.

THE date of Easter in 1920 is April 4, sixteen days earlier than last Easter.

THE railroad bill will require a long threshing out in conference, and for this reason, it is expected that April 1, 1920, will be a more accurate approximation of the date of the roads' return, than January 1.

HIGH PRICES for Christmas plants and flowers, and their substitutes, are reported from many points, and the public is paying with little grumbling. The growers and dealers are entitled to more money for their products on account of the constantly increasing cost of production, but great care should be exercised to make the charges always fair and reasonable.

ANOTHER HOLIDAY.

On account of the holiday next week, advertisers and correspondents would confer a favor by mailing copy one day earlier than usual.

Plant Quarantine Extends.

The state of Ohio, according to recent reports, has established quarantine against Christmas trees from Illinois, Michigan and the eastern states. It seems to be coming about gradually, and before very long, if matters keep up in the same way, there will be no interstate commerce in nursery stock.

Mistletoe Scarce.

St. Louis, Mo., December 18.—Now comes the high cost of kissing. Under the mistletoe it may be taboo this Christmas, for mistletoe is 60 cents a pound, with virtually none to be had. According to tradesmen this city has received only two barrels of mistletoe. This was sold to two retailers, who in turn sold out before night. The twigs were placed on the market at 25 cents a pound, but the price went to 40 when the demand made itself felt, and no more can be obtained. Holly sold at 15 to 25 cents a pound and wreaths at 25 cents.—New York World.

Lumber Policy Problems.

In an address before the American Lumber Congress at Chicago, Henry S. Graves of the forest service, told the members early action was urgent in solving the problems of a national lumber and forest policy. Among other things he suggested the consideration of special measures as required by different regions with conservative financing and public co-operation, the adjustment of international relations, permanent mills and steady employment, placing timber on the market only as needed and protecting the present resources. At the present time, he said, the mixed character of ownership tends to prevent an orderly development that builds up and sustains communities.

Coal.

President Guthrie, of the Hillman Coal & Coke Co., testifying before the senate committee inquiring into the administration coal strike settlement, said: "About 20 per cent of the miners are idle all the time, according to our experience with 23 mines. That is, we have to have 120 miners on the payroll in order to get 100 men on the job as a constant factor. Miners like to celebrate all American holidays, and a lot of the foreign ones. Then they have a 'Mitchell day,' April 1, in honor of the late John Mitchell. They have a 'rabbit day,' November 10, when everybody adjourns to shoot a rabbit." President Guthrie read a record of one miner, who in 187 days of the present year, earned $3,070, or an average of $15.50 per day. The miner paid $72 for rent of a company house during the period and his fuel bill was $5. Other records showed earnings during the first nine months of 1919, ranging from $1,400 to $2,100 for pick and machine miners.

The loss to the United States on account of the coal strike, estimated by Secretary McKinney, of the Southern Ohio Coal Exchange, was about $126,000,000. The loss to operators he places at $26,000,000; loss to miners in wages, curtailed service, $40,000,000.

Christmas, 1919.

At this anniversary of the rising of that star, so beautifully described in a line by Heber as:

"Star of the East, the horizon adorning," we may with satisfaction to our inner consciousness, pause and consider what the rising of that star has done for us.

Through the long dark night of centuries, the people lived in spiritual darkness. Tyrants and war-lords oppressed, ravaged and enslaved. Slowly, it may seem, the light has spread. But the fact that it is yet spreading should cause us to thank God, and take fresh courage. Within the past few years, there has been much national as well as personal mourning, but considering the leading actors in the world's great and melancholy drama, our griefs have been the lightest. Therefore, at this glad season, let us all highly resolve to stand with unswerving firmness for the institutions and form of government that have made us what we are, and while keeping in mind improvements and increase in our business, let us heed the calls for good government, good citizenship and good morals.

Mass. Agri. College Winter Course.

The winter course at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, begins December 30 and continues for a period of 10 weeks. The course offered in floriculture is designed to furnish those who have not the time to devote to a longer course, with the theoretical and practical considerations essential to success in floricultural work. The course covers as thoroughly as time will permit, those aspects of the work which are of especial interest to the commercial florist. Some of the topics considered are greenhouse construction, greenhouse management, and methods used in growing important commercial crops. A portion of the course will also be devoted to a consideration of gardening and garden flowers. Special trips are taken to study floricultural establishments in the state. Courses in soils, plant diseases and insect pests accompany the work in floriculture.

Further information concerning the course may be obtained by writing for an announcement, either to the department of floriculture or the short course office, Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass.

MARKET MAINTAINS FIRM TONE.

Trade has been keeping up steadily all week. The extremely cold spell, which we are now experiencing is shortening up the supply to some extent. Funeral work keeps the stores busy, while decorations of every description are calling for Christmas stock. The rose supply is well maintained. There is a heavy call for all varieties, both from the local market and outside trade. American Beauties are coming in more freely, but there is no really high grade stock offered. Russells are not equal to requirements. Ophelia, Columbia and Shawyer are in much favor, and are bringing high prices. There is a fine lot of red roses available, chiefly Hadley and Red Radiance. We noted quite a few Ulrich Brunners during the week. There are hardly any baby roses in the market at all. Irish Elegance is seen in nearly all the stores. The heavy frosts have curtailed the supply of chrysanthemums to a great extent. Growers who have grown their stock in locations which are free from frost are now receiving fine prices for their cut. The only varieties to be had are Bonnaffon, Appleton, Helen Frick and Jennie Nonin. The supply of Frick is very good, and the quality excellent. The violet supply has been shortened up considerably by the cold weather, and the arrivals are cleaned up early in the day. The supply of gardenias has increased considerably and there seems to be enough stock at present to go around. There is no change in the orchid situation. Stock remains scarce, and the daily arrivals do not last long. Cypripediums are being used more frequently now that the supply has increased. Some very good sweet peas are coming in, but not enough to supply the demand. They are bringing excellent prices. The first daffodils of the season arrived during the week. There was only a limited supply of them, but they sold on sight. Just now, there is a grand lot of pink azaleas being shown in all the leading stores. The cyclamen supply promises to be as large and varied as last season. It is expected that the popular demand will run to medium priced stock, at least this has been the case the last two years. Begonias, in variety, will be largely featured. The stock of pot grown ericas also promises to be large. Ferns and asparagus are in much demand, with not enough stock to supply all requirements.

NOTES.

The many friends of Andrew Lagomarsino will learn with the deepest regret of his death, which occurred December 5, at his home at Colma. He was one of the pioneer violet growers of this state, and for years has been one of the largest shippers of this flower. He is survived by a widow and five children. The funeral was largely attended by the trade, and there was a lavish display of floral offerings from his friends. The business will be conducted as heretofore, by his son, Joseph, who for some time has been managing the affairs of his father.

Everything indicates record holiday business with the E. W. McLellan Co., according to Henry Avensino, manager of the wholesale store. Both ranges of the firm are now in full crop. The San Lorenzo range is cutting heavily of American Beauties and Russells, while the main establishment at Burlingame is sending in large quantities of all the other standard roses. They report the call for violets for out of town shipping to be heavier than in previous years.

The California highway commission has recommended that something be done to regulate the activities of the flower peddlers on the highway leaing to this city. The authorities of San Mateo county are sponsoring the passage of an ordinance to this effect. It is not intended to stop them entirely, as the authorities do not desire to take the means of support from these itinerant merchants.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co., on Powell street, created quite a stir with their exhibit of daffodils last week. This firm made great preparations to handle its Christmas trade. Flowering plants from the greenhouses at San Mateo were shown in great profusion.

Podesta & Baldocchi were prepared to handle the heaviest trade in their history. They gathered together a grand lot of flowering plants of the finest grade obtainable. They also offered Cattleya Trianæ plants in full bloom.

The amount of business being transacted by J. A. Axell, on Bush street, has greatly exceeded his expectations. He is handling a fine lot of roses from his growers, but says the supply is not equal to the demand.

The Hillsborough Nurseries had a fine lot of Russell and Columbia roses, for which they received the highest market prices. Henry Maier, the manager, reports the plant trade as being in splendid shape.

H. Plath, proprietor of the Ferneries, says the demand for foliage plants is in excess of former years. He has a grand stock and at present is shipping to all large points in the state.

At B. M. Joseph's, on Grant avenue, many new features were seen this Christmas. Novelty work was much in evidence at this store.

New York Notes.

If the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," is ever amended, one may hope that it will read, "Say it With Natural Flowers." Never in the writer's long experience, has so much artificial stock been seen in the retail stores—not in all of them, but in many. Even one Fifth avenue store is well stocked with it. In certain sections of the city, there is some excuse for it, but that does not include Fifth avenue. As a commentary on the artificial flower business, we give the following testimony given, December 18, in a court case, involving the custody of a child: "Mrs. Lisa's story was taken down by one of the Children's Society stenographers. She said that she had found it almost impossible to support herself and her two children on the $12 a week she received as a maker of artificial flowers, and decided to turn the younger child over to Miss Bly: Because she could not afford to miss a day at work, Mrs. Lisa said, she asked a neighbor to take the child to the writer."

We have received from Edward C. Vick, secretary of the American Dahlia Society, its bulletin for January, 1920. A foreword states that: "The printers' strike in New York made it impossible to issue the last number of the Bulletin." It contains a "pastoral" letter from the veteran president of the society, Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., and short articles by himself, Geo. L. Stillman and James B. Morton. It is announced that Mrs. Charles H. Stout, Short Hills, N. J., who is one of the mainstays of the Short Hills Garden Club, will give illustrated lectures before several garden clubs this winter. Mrs. Stout originated the J. Harrison Dick dahlia and presented the entire stock to the American Dahlia Society.

David Clarke's Sons had a fine Christmas stock of plants, including azaleas, camellias, poinsettias, heather and begonias of different varieties. Of the latter, one that is not often seen in stores, is well flowered specimens of B. Haageana. They have many fine combinations in foliage plants.

For Christmas, Malandre Brothers feature flowering orchid plants, poinsettias and Araucaria excelsa, of which they have a fine stock. In combinations, many small azaleas and heathers were judiciously arranged with Pandanus Veitchii, dracænas and Cocos Weddellianas.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held in its hall in the Engineering building, 33 West 39th street, on the Frank Lorraine, formerly in the retail business on East 28th street, this city, was in the wholesale district the first of this week. He is now well established in the growing and retail lines at Westwood, N. J.

C. F. Curtiss, a plant grower of Plantsville, Conn., came in early in the week with a big auto truck load of exceptionally large and well flowered cyclamens for William Kessler, 113 West 28th street.

In addition to other good features, Joseph A. Millang had a fine stock for Christmas of the Briarcliff American Beauty roses.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Nassau County orticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., December 10. President Joseph Adler occupied the chair. James Barlow, James Allison, Simon Garden, Oscar Olson and John Henderson were elected to active membership, and five petitions for membership were received. President Adler appointed Henry Gaut, James McDonald and William Preston to judge the monthly exhibits and their awards were as follows: Pot of Paper White narcissi, James McCarthy, 1st; three heads of celery, James McCarthy, 1st; 25 brussels sprouts, Thos. Henderson, 1st.

Since the last meeting, F. S. Smithers, an honorary member, died, and the secretary was directed to write a letter of sympathy to Mrs. Smithers.

The treasurer read his annual report, which shows the society to be in a strong financial condition.

The president appointed John F. Johnston as chairman in charge of elections and Henry Gaut and Ernest Westlake as tellers. Thos. Twigg was elected president and Wm. Millstead vice-president. Edward Harris was re-elected secretary, and C. J. Brown, treasurer. Joseph Adler was elected trustee for three years, and Arthur S. Cook, corresponding secretary. Messrs. Westlake, Watson, Henderson, Young, Frampton and Carter were elected as executive committee. Jack Everett acted as marshal at the installation of officers.

P. W. Popp made a few remarks on "The Assistant Gardener," and offered a prize for the best decorated basket of flowers to be competed for by assistant gardeners at the June meeting. Maurice Fuld gave a very interesting talk on the work the Garden Club of America has planned to do in the coming year.

There was a record attendance at this meeting, and a motion was made and carried, that the secretary put in the minutes the attendance of each meeting. Exhibits for the January meeting will be 12 carnations, 25 freesias and three poinsettias.

Michigan State Florists' Association.

Florists from every part of the state met at Grand Rapids, Mich., December 9, and organized the Michigan State Florists' Association, with 22 charter members. Much enthusiasm was manifested, and an effort will be made to enroll every florist in the state before the annual meeting to be held at Lansing early in March. The following officers were elected: Herbert Goetz, Saginaw, president; Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, vice-president; L. Plumb, Detroit, secretary; W. C. Wells, Ann Arbor, treasurer.

HEAVY CHRISTMAS DEMAND.

The demand for stock for Christmas this year is heavy and from all reports the total sales will show a great increase over those of other years. The market is pretty well cleaned up at this writing, Tuesday, December 23, with stock moving at the high advertised quotations. There was a heavy call for stock, December 20, for the Campanini funeral, which took a large number of flowers intended for the early Christmas orders. Orchids are selling at $4 to $5 each. American Beauty roses in the fancy grades are bringing $18 per dozen and extra choice Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier in some instances $10 to $12 per dozen. Carnations are being sold at prices ranging from $12 to $25 per 100, according to quality and variety, with very few obtainable. Sweet peas are cleaning up quickly at $4 to $5 per 100, and lily of the valley at $20 to $25 per 100. Violets are being disposed of at the advertised quotations and poinsettias at $3 to $6 per dozen. Stevia, mignonette, calendulas, daisies, sweet alyssum, chrysanthemums, pompons, snapdragons, Paper White narcissi, yellow narcissi and other miscellaneous seasonable flowers are being disposed of at the prices advertised and from present indications it appears as if the market will clean up completely in all items although some of the buyers are looking for a break in the fancier grades of roses which the dealers do not appear to be taking seriously. The call was particularly heavy for short and medium stemmed roses which are cleaning up quickly at high prices. Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Ophelia, Killarney, Richmond, Sunburst, Ward, Montrose, Champ Weiland, Hoosier Beauty, Maryland, Shawyer and the other varieties of roses are in heavy demand and cleaning up nicely. Red winterberries, holly and mistletoe are quickly disposed of and large quantities of boxwood are being sold. Greens are selling nicely and, taking everything into consideration, the Christmas sales to date are greater than expected and the returns the growers will realize will offset to some extent the high cost of production. The retail stores are featuring cut flowers, plants and made-up wreaths everywhere and are anticipating the heaviest Christmas demand in years if the weather is at all favorable.

CAMPANINI FUNERAL FLOWERS.

The Campanini funeral caused a heavy demand for stock the past week, which helped considerably to clean up the market almost completely, December 20, when most of the work was made up and delivered the following day to the Auditorium theatre, where special services were held. Thousands who packed the theatre scarcely breathed as the velvet curtains of the stage were slowly raised, revealing the casket containing the body of the maestro lying in state beneath a blanket of violets, orchids and lily of the valley. The setting was that of an old Roman basilica. At either end of the casket, a waxen flambeau burned. There were flowers everywhere, tributes from friends and admirers of the director-general of the Chicago Grand Opera Association. On three sides of the casket, they were banked, filling most of the spare space on the stage. The orchestra pit was filled with them. Large designs and bouquets filled the maestro's private box, and overflowed into four adjacent boxes. There were from $8,000 to $10,000 in flowers there, including the decorations and casket cover representing $3,000 by Victor Bergman, who had charge of the arrangement. The casket covers (through some error there were two) were by Ernst Wienhoeber and Victor Bergman, one of violets and carnations by the first mentioned firm, and the other by Mr. Bergman, of orchids, violets and lily of the valley. Mangel had several pieces, including a $600 wreath of Killarney Brilliant roses. George Wienhoeber's order represented a considerable amount and included several fancy baskets of white chrysanthemums and red roses. A. Lange, Friedman, Fleischman, Samuelson, Schiller, Alpha Floral Co., Harry C. Rowe, George Perdikas and several others also had some orders for the occasion. The funeral services were held at the Holy Name cathedral, December 22, Reverend John A. Cavanaugh officiating. The body was placed in the vault in Calvary cemetery and later will be taken to Italy.

NOTES.

Joseph Kohout, president of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, is a firm believer in publicity and greatly favors some good plan of advertising. He sums up the situation like this: "One great advantage of advertising properly directed is that it reduces the selling cost of the retail dealer in creating an increased demand without a proportionate increase in overhead or a selling expense. The grower, because of the increased demand of the retailer under the law of supply and demand, creates a higher wholesale price in which the grower is directly benefited. To illustrate this statement, suppose the grower's average on roses is $9.01 per 100 blooms or $1.37 per plant for the year. If the grower would appropriate 10 cents per plant in advertising to stimulate further the demand and the prices realized thereby would average 12 cents per bloom wholesale or $1.80 per plant, the grower would make 33 cents extra per plant per season without an increase in production. On 10,000 rose plants the sum of $3,300 is not to be sneezed at." Mr. Kohout has the right idea and it is the general opinion of all the growers that everyone should join in the publicity movement. One grower who keeps pretty close tab on the cost of production says that it takes nearly $1.60 to grow one rose plant per season under the existing conditions and that if each plant averaged around $2 per season the profit on same would not be any too large considering the great risk he is taking compared to many of the other lines of business.

Greenhouse users of coal in quantity have been advised of an advance in its cost above contract, one concern claiming an increase of 26 cents per ton in the cost of production, because of the payment of a 14 per cent advance to their laborers, and they are passing this on to the consumer, notwithstanding the firm's contracts to the buyers. They pass on the further information, that if the arbitration commission to be appointed by the government, grants a further increase to the miners in excess of the 14 per cent, such increase will also be passed on to the consumer.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, was answering a long distance telephone call at the time General John J. Pershing passed the store in the parade, December 20, so he missed getting a glimpse of the famous leader. Jack Byers of this firm, who went through almost every fight of any importance on the French front, was one of the spectators and was probably the "fellow" the big chief waved his hand at as he went by.

N. J. Wietor is more than pleased with the Christmas demand so far at Wietor Bros.' store, which exceeds that of all other years. This firm is cutting a fine line of stock, including some of the best grown Premier seen in this vicinity. Mr. Wietor's son, Harry, who is attending college at Milwaukee, Wis., is giving his father a lift at the store during the holidays.

A hearing has been called in the bankruptcy proceedings of Aaron S. Pyfer and Peter M. Olsem, February 2, at 10 a. m., in the United States court rooms in the Federal building, at which time all creditors and other persons interested may appear and show cause, if any, why the petition of the defendants for discharge should not be granted.

The special mid-winter flower show at the Garfield park conservatory is open, and will continue until January 4. The conservatory is open to visitors daily from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. The exhibit is composed of flowering plants, principally poinsettias, while some bulbous stock is also on display.

Charles Drissler, of the Wietor Bros.' force, is the proud father of a baby boy who arrived at his home, December 18. As this is the first boy in the family, naturally the proud father is strutting around the place as proud as a peacock over his early Christmas present.

Poehlmann Bros. had a heavy call for stock for the Campanini funeral this week, which included an order for 100 cattleyas for $400. This firm's Christmas business is exceedingly heavy, and the entire force is being kept on the jump in filling all the orders.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association filled an order this week for 100 orchids for $400 for the Campanini funeral. The Christmas demand at this establishment is exceptionally heavy, with the sales running ahead of last year.

The Fleischman Floral Co.'s Christmas advertisement in the leading daily this week was of particular interest to the trade this year, owing to the absence of prices. It shows good judgment under the existing market conditions.

Mangel reports the early Christmas demand brisk, with a heavy call for plants. Funeral work, on top of the holiday business, is keeping the increased force working overtime.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. never had such a splendid Christmas business as this year and cleaned up completely in cut flowers. Bill Timme gave the regular force a lift during the rush.

The shipment of California heather to this city has been a great disappointment to the buyers. Some of the stock arrived in such poor condition that it was immediately dumped.

William Wolf, proprietor of the Wabash Flower Market, East Monroe street, who was on the sick list for over a week, recovered in time to attend to his Christmas business.

The E. C. Amling Co. is having a heavy call for stock of all kinds, which means that John Michelsen and his force are working like beavers to handle all the orders.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report a heavy Christmas trade, with a strong call for roses. Mr. Vaughan is planning on making a business trip to California early in January.

Bassett & Washburn had a fine cut of roses for Christmas, but are cleaning up everything they have to offer at this writing, with a heavy call from out-of-town points.

Kennicott Bros. Co.'s sales for Christmas this year, up to the time of this writing, were the largest in the history of the firm's 38 years in business.

James Henderson, son of Alex. Henderson, attending the Massachusetts School of Technology, at Boston, is home for the Christmas holidays.

The J. A. Budlong Co. had a splendid supply of stock to offer for Christmas, especially roses and carnations, which cleaned up early at this store.

George Wienhoeber reports a heavy call for funeral flowers this week in addition to what promises to be the heaviest Christmas on record.

Herman Schiller, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, is better at this writing, and his friends are hoping for his early recovery.

Peter Reinberg reports a heavy out-of-town call for stock, especially roses, and everything points to a cleanup at this writing.

P. L. McKee, of the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., returned this week from a business trip to New York.

The Joseph Foerster Co. is busy as can be this week, and everything points to the "best ever" Christmas business.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports colored lily bulbs from Japan, and lily of the valley pips arrived in good condition.

Erne & Co. are having their share of the Christmas business, and report a heavy out-of-town call for stock.

The Alpha Floral Co. had one of the finest showings of plants in the city for Christmas.

The American Bulb Co. received a large importation of Japanese baskets this week.

RECORD CHRISTMAS BUSINESS INDICATED.

At the time these notes were written, the Christmas rush was just starting, but if the business up to this time is any criterion, the florists of this country will experience the greatest business, not only in volume, but in the record prices that prevailed. The unprecedented demand for out-of-town deliveries is keeping the mail and Florist's Telegraph Delivery service constantly on the go. In plants, cyclamens were about equal to the local demand, but many out-of-town buyers were disappointed in not placing their orders soon enough. The same held good with begonias of the Peterson types. Solanums were of good quality and were in brisk demand. Poinsettias, both cut and pot, were sold out early, the low pans for table use selling on sight. In the medium and large size plants, sales were equally brisk. The loss of azaleas as a Christmas seller is a sad blow. Lack of this unexcelled blooming plant has caused the public to appreciate them, and most any price asked, would easily be forthcoming were they obtainable. In cut flowers, American Beauties shipped from outside points arrived in good condition and brought remarkably good returns. Premier, Columbia and Russell all sold well; the shorter grades to meet the demand of people of moderate means, and also used for corsage work, were in supply unequal to the demand. In fact, the above holds good for Ophelia, Ward, Brilliant, Double White and Pink Killarney and Sunburst. In strictly corsage roses, Baby Doll, Nesbit and Brunner were largely sought, and in arrangements with violets and sweet peas, were universally used. Sweet peas at unheard-of prices sold out clean, the best being quoted at $3 per bunch of 25, at retail. Yellow and white narcissi held their own, being a great filler in assorted boxes where the purse strings are tight. The same holds good for stevia. Calendulas are great favorites with flower buyers of this city and sold at $2 per dozen, retail, and unequal to the demand. The violet problem was the worst in the history of the business. Even California broke all records and had heavy frosts 10 days before Christmas, which sent the hopes of some who looked to that market skyward, but at the last some very nice shipments arrived. Orchids and lily of the valley, the favorites of critical buyers, were the cause of many apologies and many trying moments for the salesforces. Both were of inferior quality, the one at $5 each, the other at $5 per dozen. Suffice to say, everybody was prepared for the unusual conditions, and present appearances foretell when the last telephone kick has been appeased on Christmas afternoon, the verdict will be "best ever." CLUB MEETING OF INTEREST.

The club meeting, December 16, was only fairly well attended, though an interesting programme well paid those who braved the cold and were present. Prof. C. P. Halligan, chief of horticulture, at the Michigan Agricultural College, Lansing, was the speaker of the evening, addressing the members on "Plant Feeding and Elements of Plant Growth." The address was very interesting and highly instructive, and after its delivery, the speaker invited and received many inquiries, further explanatory of the subject treated. By a resolution, unanimously adopted, the address will be printed in the trade papers, and thus extend the benefit of it to florists generally. Mr. Halligan gave some data respecting the institution he represented horticulturally, that surprised his hearers as to the extent and value of the work the college is devoted to, and he urged the florists to refer their growing problems to the departments of the institution that are at all times prepared and most willing to give the assistance asked.

Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich., was an interested visitor, and he had on display two varieties of his late blooming chrysanthemums, Sunbeam and December Beauty. The former is a clear yellow of Bonnaffon shade, and quite as large as that popular variety is ever seen. Philip Breitmeyer was so well pleased with it that he placed an advance order for 500 blooms for Thanksgiving day, next year. December Beauty is a large white flower, showing a shade of pink that adds materially to its attractiveness. Of both these varieties, Mr. Smith will cut several hundred blooms for Christmas, which establishes their great value commercially. He also showed some blooms of a very small type of anemones, these to meet the requirements of some growers and dealers who see a distinct demand for this type. Mr. Smith gave a short, but interesting, talk on the growing popularity of chrysanthemums as their season is being extended throughout December by the development of these late novelties. The William F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., also had on exhibition specimen blooms of their Hamburg Late Pink chrysanthemums that easily bore out the reputation of this variety, now so popular.

A committee consisting of E. A. Fetters, Harry Taylor and William Dilger, was appointed to draw up resolutions upon the death of Sidney Beard, one of our most popular members. The resolutions of deep regret were unanimously adopted, and copies of the same ordered sent to the widow and mother of the deceased.

Charles Plumb was the victim this week of three accidents, involving much loss and anxiety. His large delivery auto, while on a journey to Ann Arbor, fell over in a ditch by the roadside, as a result of the driver's attempt to avoid a collision with a machine recklessly driven towards him. The day following, his commercial auto was burned up by the ignitioin of the gasoline by an overheated exhaust pipe. December 15, the elbow on the blow-off pipe of one of his boilers sprung a leak, which required quick work to repair before threatened injury to his stock. This was only possible by the use of an auxiliary boiler.

M. Bloy, who, with Robert Plumb, attended from here the organization meeting of the Michigan State Florists' Association, at Grand Rapids, December 12, gave a report of that meeting, outlining the purposes of the association, which will include an annual exhibition. The next meeting of the new society will be held at Lansing, March 16 next.

Edmund Beard, uncle of the late Sidney Beard, has taken charge of the business of Beard Bros. Repairs have been made to the chimney and office, destroyed by the wind storm of November 29. J. F. S.

SEASONABLE WEATHER BRINGS GOOD TRADE.

Clear, cold weather has put considerable snap into the business during the past two weeks, with a brisk demand for all kinds of flowers, decorations and holiday novelties. There is a scarcity of cut stock, however, as the result of low temperatures caused by coal restrictions at the time of zero weather. Some of the shipments which have been consigned to this market from a distance have been badly frozen. There will be a large supply of poinsettias and flowering plants for the holiday period. Holly is good in quality but the receipts are limited.

NOTES.

George B. Hart's force has been unusually busy getting out the large number of holiday orders.

Local growers are still cutting good Maud Dean chrysanthemums.

Miss Dean, of Peterborough, Ont., has joined the H. E. Wilson force.

J. B. Keller Sons are busy with many decorations. CHESTER.

CHRISTMAS TRADE OPENS STRONG.

On December 20, the holiday business opened in earnest with a promise of most voluminous sales notwithstanding the necessarily high prices. Orders are pouring in, with the greater part of the call for prepared wreaths and cemetery decorations, of which there is a splendid assortment. Immortelle wreaths are high priced and scarce, but there are some chenille arrangements at more reasonable figures, although in no great quantity. Wreaths made of green, with pine cones, frosted and plain, are in good demand when arranged with sprayed dried flowers. The street supply of holly and native greens is unprecedented, and the stock is beautiful. There has also been a gorgeous array of large and small Christmas trees of cedar. This material is also made up into wreaths, as is the native spruce pine. Carnations are becoming scarce and are quite high in price. The little stevia finds a ready place in many a box of cut flowers, and Paper Whites are available in small quantities. A brisk trade in plants is anticipated. Poinsettias, primulas, the old standby, cyclamens in good quantity, solanums and ferns make up the offerings.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. will have a limited cut of carnations, but will show some of the finest Christmas roses ever offered in this market. Their plant supply is also unusually good and in large variety. Attractive baskets and birch boxes are a splendid feature at their establishment. An explosion of ammonia in their refrigerating system recently caused a loss of several hundred dollars.

The Joy Floral Co. will have quite a showing of carnations with roses also quite plentiful and of excellent quality. They have a generous supply of prepared wreaths, which have been featured in window displays. A wonderful assortment of poinsettia plants is moved as fast as they come from the greenhouses, finding quick buyers.

The McIntyre Floral Co. has been somewhat handicapped by damage to their establishment by an adjoining fertilizer plant, but nevertheless will have a good supply of roses and carnations. They also have an excellent offering of plants, including poinsettias, solanums, primulas, cyclamens and white and yellow narcissi.

Charles Tritschler is bringing in his usual offering of fine plants, of which he makes a specialty.

CHRISTMAS SHORTAGE ANTICIPATED.

As usual the week before Christmas found the market rather short of cut stock, due to the general scarcity, and growers holding back for the holiday demand. The wholesale houses, however, have been busy with sales of boxwood, laurel, ground pine roping and other items in strong demand. Cold weather has ruined several shipments of plants, and cut flowers also showed the effect of the drop in temperature. Prices have made strong advances over those of former years, but everything cleans up daily. Cut stock, from present indications, will fall short of Christmas requirements. Narcissi and stevia are quite plentiful. Carnations are at a premium. Sweet peas are a short item, due to cloudy weather.

NOTES.

A recent visit to John Kirchner's store and greenhouses showed his establishment to be in excellent shape. The store force, numbering 15 to 20 persons, were busy making wreaths. At the greenhouses there was a wonderful array of plants, among the best being about 3,000 cyclamens in 8-inch pans, which readily bring $5 wholesale.

The Sunday papers contained Christmas advertising from almost every retailer in town, many of the spaces being quite large, and the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," was freely used.

Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

The third annual dinner of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, held at Lachine, December 11, was a great success, about 100 being present on this highly enjoyable occasion. C. A. Smith acted as toastmaster. There were numerous speakers, responses being made for king, country, craft, sister societies, private gardeners, seedsmen and the ladies. A topic of much interest to the retail trade was ably handled by Frank McKenna, who said it was very discouraging to create a good trade, advertise and educate the buying public to "Say It With Flowers," and then discover that the flowers to carry out the idea were not to be had, and the few that were available priced so exorbitantly that customers would be frightened away. He urged every member of the club who could do so, especially the private gardeners, to grow stock to help meet the demand, the increase being largely attributed to the work of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and the publicity campaign of the Society of American Florists. Wm. C. Hall, who had charge of the decorations for the occasion, responded to the toast, "The Ladies," saying that the best toast to the ladies was to "Say It With Flowers," after which he distributed wonderfully fine roses by the handful. Miss McQueston rendered the song "Say It With Flowers," which has scored signal success throughout the country as mentioned in previous issues of THE AMERICAN FLORIST. She scored a hit and her number on the programme added to the evening's enjoyment.

At the business meeting of the club, R. Burrows, of St. Anne de Bellevue, was elected president for the ensuing year.

SUPPLY IS LIMITED.

The market during the past week has been active in every way. As the Christmas holidays approached there was an increasing demand for flowers of all kinds and florists began to feel the shortage in supplies which became more marked as the holiday season approached. Stocks of all flowers are of high quality and readily sell at good figures; in fact, the holiday advance is already upon us, and the people are paying the increased prices without complaint. Roses are still the headliner in the local trade. They sell from $3 to $8 per dozen, which will be increased to from $8 to $15. The offerings are mostly Columbia, Premier, Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty. Violets are coming into the market, and the quality is exceedingly good. There is also a fair supply of narcissi. Carnations are quite scarce, and none of the local dealers have been able to get sufficient supplies to take care of the trade. They sell in the neighborhood of $2.50 per dozen. Sweet peas are quite scarce, and only a few are on the market. They find ready sale, as the demand is extra strong. It is believed that the dark weather is holding back all of the flowers. Plants are plentiful, and a lot of the usual business in flowers will be shifted to plants during the present holiday season. There is a good supply of begonias and cyclamen, while primroses will be quite scarce.

Iowa State Horticultural Society.

At the convention of the Iowa State Horticultural Society, held at Des Moines, December 9, it was decided to hold the 1920 exhibition of the society at Council Bluffs, the show at Des Moines this year proving a losing venture.

Wesley Green, of Des Moines, after 21 years continuous service as secretary, retired and was made president emeritus in recognition of his work in the society's interest. He was succeeded by R. S. Herrick of Ames. S. A. Beach, of Ames, was re-elected president; F. O. Harrington, of Williamsburg, was chosen vice-president and C. M. Kinney, of Mitchellville, was elected treasurer.

NORMAL BUSINESS DESPITE ZERO WEATHER.

In spite of the thermometer holding close to the zero mark, and flowers freezing as a result, business holds up to standard. Prices are high, with American Beauty leading at $9 to $16 per dozen. Mock, Richmond, Columbia, Premier, Russell, the Killarneys, Hoosier Beauty, Hadley and Ophelia range from 25 to 75 cents each. Carnations vary from eight to 12 cents. Calendulas are offered at $4 and $5 per 100 and poinsettias are bringing $35 to $75. Other offerings include callas at $3 to $4 per dozen, sweet peas, $5 to $6 per 100 and stevia, which is extra fine, at $4 per 100. There are quantities of flowering plants, but not enough, however, to supply the demand. Cyclamens are selling at from $2 to $4, wholesale; poinsettia pans, $2 to $6 each; begonias, $1.50 to $6; primroses, 50 cents to $1 and extra fine araucarias, $4 and $5. Prospects are bright for a good Christmas trade. Locally, the crops of carnations and roses are fair, but there will not be enough flowers to satisfy all requirements.

NOTES.

The feature of the week was the singing of the already popular song, "Say it With Flowers" at Keith's theater by Vernon Stiles. The act was made more effective by the throwing of flowers to the audience during the rendition of the number. Thousands of blooms were distributed to the audiences in this way. On December 19, at an entertainment of the local Rotary Club, Mr. Stiles sang the selection to about 500 persons present. On this occasion, he presented red roses to every lady in attendance during his part of the programme. This is effective advertising and should be encouraged in every city where the song is presented. Florists should in every possible way lend assistance in the donation of flowers. The artists will do the rest.

Gude Bros. Co. has been exceptionally busy the past week with orders for some elaborate dinner decorations as well as for a number of weddings and debutante parties. The firm is installing a water-grate-culm-burning apparatus at its northeast range at a cost of nearly $3,000. Wm. F. Gude, who has been serving on the grand jury, was agreeably surprised at the adjournment for Christmas, when he was presented by other members of that body with a magnificent token in the shape of a gold penknife, which he holds in high appreciation.

With the removal of the coal restrictions, the trade in this vicinity is relieved and happy.

CHRISTMAS OUTLOOK VERY DISCOURAGING.

If present indications count for anything, this year's Christmas trade, as far as the local retailers are concerned, will be one of the lightest in history. Buyers have been so eager that as early as December 1, the supply of flowering plants, and in most cases arrived from the growing establishments. The quality of the stock is well above the average. Azaleas are well-grown, bushy plants, are in most cases arrived from Belgium in good condition, but very late. Cyclamens, which have taken the place of azaleas for the past five years, are better than ever. The improvement in the culture of these plants in recent years has been marvelous, and if the azaleas could not be imported at all, we should miss them very little. Begonias in variety are as usual offered in all their shades of pink and floriferous habit and they prove good sellers—but poor keepers. Poinsettias are not quite as good as usual, nor so plentiful, the trouble seeming to be a shortage of stock plants. Solanums are good but the quantity is limited. There are no bulbous plants to mention with the exception of a few freesias. Ferns are sold out but there is a fine supply of palms on hand, recently arrived from Belgium. Greens have been scarce and high in price, but there is considerable local grown stock to take care of this demand.

ZERO WEATHER STOPS SHIPPING.

The feature of the past week has been the severe weather, the temperature dropping to the zero point. There were several days of cloudy weather and a considerable fall of snow. Such conditions were a great handicap to the plant men, interfering with their out-of-town orders, as shipping in such weather was out of the question. The last two days moderated considerably, but there was little sunshine, and the outlook for cut flowers is not promising. There was no surplus the past week; shipments were very light, as they always are the week before Christmas. The business in the stores was dull, which condition gave them a chance to finish their wreaths and other Christmas stock, nearly all working at night in their hurry to get through. Prices have ruled so high, that very little cut flower stock was purchased, except to get out orders. The retailers' ice boxes were, for the most part, full of fancy wreaths, baskets of green and holly and other Christmas material, with cut flowers on the side, as it were, for the time being. For the past two weeks, there has been an embargo in Florida against shipments of asparagus sprays by express, and what has come through, arrived by parcel post, which was as satisfctory, except that no ice could be used as when sent by express.

NOTES.

As a rule, what is displayed well, will sell, which should be true of Christmas wreaths, as all the stores, large and small, have featured them this year to the limit. H. H. Battles has a great line, both in his main store and that of his Century Flower Shop, next door. Many of these have prepared magnolia foundations, elaborately decorated with cones, red and silvered ruscus and other materials. His window wreaths for house decoration are of boxwood, with a wired red ribbon bow. A striking Century Shop wreath, crescent in form, was of whitened or silvered lycopodium, dotted with large red berried decoration. These were displayed, suspended either side of squares of white paper, which made the wreaths stand out conspicuously.

John C. Gracey introduced a new idea which is most effective and answers the question as to what to do with the old auto tires when they have outlived their usefulness. The answer is wrap them with red chenille, and decorate them as best you know how. Mr. Gracey placed a large spray of extra size cones and green ruscus diagonally across one side, and placed the finished piece in the window. It was immediately sold for what it looked to be worth, showing a profit of at least 10 times its cost. Mr. Gracey has turned his 26th street place into a public auto garage, and will in the future devote his time to his Columbia avenue store. A new Dodge delivery car has just been added to his fleet.

Referring to publicity, a prominent and successful retailer declared that the public did not need to be educated to buy flowers half as much as the great majority of retailers required lessons in store management and salesmanship, and how to display their wares to the best advantage. He thought the trade papers should have a good share of the publicity fund to be used in educating storekeepers in up-to-date store management and all the details that go to make up a successful business.

In speaking of holiday prices and prospects, a large wholesale dealer stated there are always flowers to be had at a price. Those who speak quick enough, and are willing to pay, generally get what they want. While they are turning down orders for medium grade of roses, they can still furnish $35 to $50 per hundred stock.

Charles Henry Fox had a splendid line of wreaths, made of spruce bough clippings stuck into mossed frames. The center of the frame had triple rows of cones, illuminated with red alder and white cedar berries. This combination, artistically arranged as they were, made one of the best wreath offerings of the season.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had a large greenhouse filled with made-up baskets of foliage and flowering plants. The quality and arrangement was fine. The Glory fern figured largely in nearly all of them. There was also a fine lot of Mme. Petrick azaleas nicely in flower.

Alfred M. Campbell is cutting a fine lot of Premier roses from his 10,000 plants. It was quite a plunge on a new thing, but results appear to show that he made no mistake. His 10,000 Laddie carnation plants are also doing well, but are not so free as he would like.

The miniature boxwood trees made by T. Nelson Geiger were a distinct success. They sold at handsome profit prices as fast as he could get them up. Beautiful variegated Oregon holly was a feature here.

The Robert Craig Co. has had a wonderful shipping trade, getting orders out in good time until the cold spell held them up. Everything salable in Christmas stock was cleaned up.

Edward Reid expects to have a fine lot of double violets, roses and carnations. "Those who will pay the price, and speak first, will get the goods," is the way he puts it.

The Leo Niessen Co. had an unusual call for cut flowers in all lines and grades of stock. Great preparations have been made for a record breaking business.

Berger Bros. handled a fine grade of holly. They were also strong on holly wreaths. Carnations will be a feature with them immediately after the holidays.

George Aeugle, of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., will have a good Christmas crop of roses from his Morton greenhouses.

The Joseph Heacock Co. says it was never so low in stock for Christmas as this season. They expect to cut heavily in January. K.

New York.

COLD WEATHER THREATENS SHORTAGE.

With a cold wave that sent the mercury down to zero on the morning of December 18, with a light supply of stock, and in proportion a lighter demand, the wholesale district was not a particularly cheerful locality during the past week. The plant growers were as busy as could be expected under the weather conditions, in moving their stock to the retail stores, where preparations for the Christmas trade were active, but all branches of the trade were, to some extent, hampered by the cold. The entire east was in the grip of "J. Frost." The first snow of the season fell early in the week. In this city, the fall of the mercury was gradual, reaching zero at 4 a. m., December 18. It dallied around zero till 8 a. m., and was only seven above at noon. It is a safe enough guess that this will not increase the supply of flowers for Christmas. One prominent rose grower, when asked early in the week if the then moderate cold, would reduce the supply, replied: "It is a question, if it can be reduced any lower than it now is." A carnation grower spoke in the same vein. But we expect to "muddle through" in some way, and there have been times when before Santa Claus arrived, a predicted shortage had developed into a surplus. But such a denouement is hardly to be expected for this Christmas. With these indications of a scarcity, it was to be expected that prices would advance. By December 19, special American Beauties wholesaled at the rate of $150 per 100, Premier $75, Columbia $35, with prospects of higher prices; Enchantress types of carnations $10 and $12 and Mrs. Ward $15. But it may be added that the highest priced stock will move slowly until the actual Christmas buying begins, when if the predicted shortage develops, another strong advance in prices may be expected. A feature of the market, December 19, was a stock of irises that reached one firm, and were held at $12 per dozen sprays. Cattleyas ranged from $12 per dozen for the small ones, to $24 for the best. The best gardenias were quoted at $12 per dozen in our issue of December 13, and they are holding to that, with prospects of a raise. It has been bad weather for violets, with no unusual movement, prices ranging from $1 to $2 per 100. In the minor stocks, such as stevia, calendulas, bouvardia, pansies, etc., there is a fair movement. Scattering lots of chrysanthemums continue to arrive. By December 20, the temperature was well above zero, but still cold. With a whole week of cold, and practically no sunshine, the supply of stock was necessarily light and prices kept pushing up. Orders were booked for American Beauty roses for December 22 at the rate of $200 per 100. As yet, there had been no great demand for red carnations, and with the Enchantress, they were wholesaling at $12 per 100, Mrs. Ward and Benora, $15. Anything in the way of good No. 1 roses brought $15 per 100, as they were more in demand than specials. No. 2's were so scarce as to be hardly worth mention. The small stock of the carnation, Laddie, that was on the market, went at the rate of $25 per 100. There did not seem to be much call for violets, but $2.50 and $3.00 per 100 was asked for the best. Poinsettias brought $4 to $9 per dozen, according to quality; Callas, per dozen, $4 to $6. In orchids and gardenias, the movement was slow. There was a strong demand for holly, all kinds of wreaths, and green in general.

December 22.—The outlook is favorable for good Christmas business. Plants are going fast, with orders coming in for cut flowers.

NOTES.

This city has experienced zero weather in past years, but that makes no difference. When a cold snap comes, people must talk and write about it. The evening Sun prints an editorial entitled, "Zero," and quotes a country schoolmaster, and a Mr. McAndrews—a Scotchman, we guess—as follows:

O Winter! ruler of the inverted year!
I wish to gosh you wasn't here;

McAndrews's cautious comment:

Snow, ice and cold that serve the Lord,
I've seen them at their work,
And wished I had another berth or they another kirk.

If a vote was taken among the florists they would probably give unanimous consent to the above.

It appears that the west, as well as the east, is suffering from cold. Read this item from a Kansas paper: "The Rev. January returned home Saturday from a trip to Leavenworth and Kansas City." Taking time by the forelock, so to speak. But cold as it is, here is an encouraging editorial note from our own Tribune: "Zero weather in New York, and at the Bowery Mission only one man applied Wednesday night for a bed. The municipal lodging house, with a capacity for 918 men and women, had 64 guests. Bread lines no longer string out their queues of shivering men with shuffling feet."

In addition to a good general stock, William P. Ford, 107 West 28th street, is now receiving a fine quality of cut lilac.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, is receiving good stock of the roses, Pilgrim and Crusader.

J. J. Coan, 115 West 28th street, is handling excellent stock of the carnation, Laddie. A. F. F.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

VEGETABLE SEEDS are in good supply, peas excepted.

THE price of bags at Chicago, December 23, was $60.

KNUD GUNDERSTRUP, for some years engaged in the Chicago onion set business, died December 18.

CATALOGUE houses will be interested in the advance of news print paper to the record price of 7½ cents per pound.

CHARLES L. ATLEE, for 29 years with the W. Atlee Burpee Co., has joined the staff of the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis.

THAT lost, strayed or stolen carload of Joss lily bulbs arrived at Chicago last week in a common box car, completely frozen.

NEW YORK.—Frederick S. Radway, of the I. L. Radwaner Seed Co., has returned from Europe, having been absent 10 weeks, glad to be back after an eventful trip.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district continue in strong demand with prices about the same as last week's, namely, $3.00 for colors and $3.50 for whites, prompt shipment.

R. & J. FARQUHAR & Co., Boston, Mass., has been incorporated under the laws of that state as R. & J. Farquhar Co., the business having been conducted 37 years as a partnership.

A CHICAGO banker says: "While money is close, no particular concern is expressd. Money should be in better supply by the middle of January. It is becoming close with us, and our loans are very high."

DISSOLUTION suits are now pending, according to the United States department of justice, against M. Plowaty & Sons, onion dealers in Massachusetts, and the Western Cantaloupe Exchange, melon dealers in the west.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened slightly higher and December and January holding firm, December 22, with cash offered at $30.75. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.52½, December $5.70, March $5.85, April $5.85 and May, $5.87½.

CARL CROPP, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York, says flower seeds are coming forward very slowly, domestic as well as foreign. Pansy and many other European items are extremely scarce, also named varieties of home-grown sweet peas.

EUGENE SCHAETTEL, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, who intended sailing for home on the S. S. France, December 27, as reported in our issue of December 20, is now scheduled to leave January 6, the sailing of the steamer having been delayed until that date; his address in the meantime is in care of John Munroe & Co., 30 Pine street, New York. Mr. Schaettel celebrates the sixty-first anniversary of his birthday this week.

Grass Seed.

Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, December 23 were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 to $12.50 per 100 pounds; March, $12.80 sold; $12.30 bid for year. Red clover, $40 to $48 per 100 pounds.

At Paris, Ky., December 23, new crop Kentucky blue grass was quoted in car lots, 19-pound test, at $24.65; 17-pound test, $12.20; less than car lots, 35 cents per 100 pounds higher.

Farmers' Seed Loans.

Washington, D. C.—An appropriation of $4,000,000 for loans to farmers in drought-stricken sections of the United States, for the purchase of seed for next spring's planting, is proposed in a bill which has just been introduced in Congress by Representative Riddick, of Montana. The loans will be limited to not more than $300 to any one farmer, and it is provided that they shall be made through national or state banks, and be secured by a first lien on the crop planted with the seed so secured. The bill has been referred to the committe on agriculture.

Announcement was made a few days ago of the intention of the Ohio Valley Seed Company to build a five story mill and grain elevator. The building will be erected at the corner of Indiana and R. W. Rowley streets, and plans for the same have been drawn and the contract will be let in a short time. The company already has a warehouse, 48x125 feet on the site. This building will be given additional stories and used for storage, while the elevator part will be erected on the remainder of the lot, which is 100x125 feet. The Southern and Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroads will furnish switching facilities. Capital stock of the company has been increased from $25,000 to $100,000. "Our growing business demands more room," said Louis J. Graf, the secretary and treasurer of the company.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $5.50 to $7.00; celery, Michigan, square box, $1.50 to $2.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 35 to 40 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 90 cents; tomatoes, per lug, $1.50 to $2.00.

New York, Dec. 22.—Celery, per doz. roots, 15 to 75 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $4.00 to $7.00; mushrooms, 60 cents to $2.00 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 45 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $400.

Mulching Tomatoes Increases Yield.

According to reports received by the Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia, from tomato growers in St. Louis county, a straw mulch increased the yield of fruit from tomatoes very strikingly, during the latter half of the past season, when the effects of the dry weather were harmful to unmulched plants. Besides yielding more fruit, the mulched plots yielded smoother, sounder and cleaner fruits than did the unmulched plots. These factors would be especially desirable where tomatoes are grown for a fancy retail trade. The mulching material used was wheat straw of last year's crop, applied five or six inches deep around the plants, a few weeks after they were set in the field. The mulch should be applied before the soil is dried out by summer heat, and it is much better to have the surface completely covered with the mulching material before the plants begin to branch and spread over the ground. The chief value of the mulch seems to be in the case of dry weather, yet in wet weather, it keeps the fruit and vines from coming in contact with the ground, thereby keeping them clean and healthy. It would seem that wherever straw, grass, or leaves are available for mulching purposes, that the mulch will be quite beneficial to tomatoes. This is especially true of home garden plantings, and small areas grown for market. The cost of the mulching material and the labor of application would probably prevent this practice from being profitable on an extensive scale.

Potato Crop Report for December.

The bureau of crop estimates of the United States department of agriculture in its report of the late or winter potato crop based on conditions December 1, has the following comments:

"The states in the following table include all those producing late potatoes in considerable commercial quantity for other than local market. The carload movement this year is now estimated at 133,124 cars as compared with an estimate of 129,466 cars on October 1. Reduced to bushels, the commercial crop of late potatoes this year is about 93,186,000 bushels as compared with 106,608,600 bushels last year, or 87 per cent of last year's crop. The yield this year is also about nine per cent less than the average. In the heavy producing states of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, the production promises to be 56,465 cars, compared with 63,510 cars last year, or 89 per cent of last year's crop. In Colorado, the only important state in the Rocky Mountain district, there was about 31 per cent of the potato crop still in the hands of the growers December 1.

"Conditions in the northwest have not differed much since October 1. Idaho, Washington and Oregon promise to ship 10,430 cars as compared with 13,205 last year. Thirty per cent, or 3,129 cars, were still in the hands of the growers of the northwest, December 1. Maine, New York and Pennsylvania indicate a production of 45,599 cars as compared with 43,522 cars last year. On December 1, it was estimated that 55 per cent of the crop in these states was still in the hands of the growers and growers' organizations.

"The loss after harvest was not particularly heavy, amounting to 5.8 per cent for the entire country. The northwest had some loss from frost injury while the potatoes were still in the ground, while rot caused considerable loss through the middlewestern and eastern districts.

"The average yield per acre for the entire commercial potato acreage of the United States amounts to 144 bushels, the highest—260 bushel average being in Maine, the leading state in production, and the lowest—63 bushels, being in North Dakota. Other states which ran high in average yield were California, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, and some districts of Colorado."

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.
J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.
Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

SALEM, ORE.—Every available walnut tree is being planted in this section. The acreage devoted to prune trees will also be increased at least 10 per cent.

ACCORDING to Manager J. E. Miswander of the California Peach Growers, the surplus on hand this season after filling all orders will not exceed 1,000 tons.

EUGENE, ORE.—The Eugene Fruit Growers' Association shipped during the past season, 1,723,000 pounds of apples, five times the quantity moved last year.

TORONTO, ONT.—The park commissioner of this city favors a plan which will be sent to the city council to purchase, at a cost of $35,000, a number of acres of land to be used for a civic nursery.

DINUBA, CALIF.—Fig growers of Tulare county at a recent meeting here, effected a temporary organization with a view to forming a marketing association. The officers are W. Sam Clark, president, and W. R. Van Noy, secretary.

DETROIT, MICH.—At the recent meeting of the state horticultural society in this city, that body went on record as being opposed to public warehouses as being impracticable from an operating standpoint, and the fact that it would require many millions of dollars because of the varied number of products requiring storage.

Painesville, O.

Herman P. Knoble, president of the Friedley Co., Cleveland, O., accompanied by Shep Norris, greenhouse superintendent of the firm, were welcome visitors, recently.

Kallay Bros. have made improvements at their establishment, including an addition to the seed house and a cellar and packing houses for nursery purposes.

T. R. Norman & Sons will conduct their nursery on a profit-sharing basis after January 1, all employes in their service for two years or more participating.

The Storrs & Harrison Co. has closed a very prosperous fall season, with sales of trees, shrubs and plants probably greater than in any previous year.

C. C. Hallinan reports exceptionally good demand in shrubs and perennials during the past season.

T. J. M.

Private Forestry.

Henry S. Graves, of the United States forest service, at a meeting of the New England Forestry Conference, held at Boston, Mass., called attention to the importance of private forests in offsetting the failing supplies of virgin timber and the fact that New England is no longer self-supporting in lumber resources and that private forestry must supplement public timberlands. He urged a constructive programme that will require public participation, assistance and direction, which will include compulsory fire protection, organized and under state supervision. The public in its own protection should prohibit destructive methods of cutting that injure the community at large, care against premature and wasteful cutting and the adoption of a state policy of taxation that would encourage the practice of forestry, and further the co-operation in problems of labor and the liberal assistance of the public to the farmer and small owner.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Next Annual Convention, Cleveland, O., August 17-19, 1920.

President Miller's Message.

To All the Members of the S. A. F. & O. H. and Affiliated Bodies:

We are all standing together on the old December platform, suitcases in hand and our other baggage checked, waiting for the 1920 express. We hear the warning screech of the locomotive whistle around the curve. The train draws in, on schedule to a second. Old Father Time, the one train dispatcher who is always on the job, no matter what the weather may be, swings his dim lantern; Experience, the only conductor in whom we may with safety place our confidence, shouts, "All aboard!" We all pile in. There are ample reservations in the popular parlor car, Good Luck, and there's a well-stocked dining car forward. Caution, the brakeman, closes the gates. Again the whistle screeches, and we are off, Hope, the headlight, blazing the way into January.

Well, how do things look for a successful journey? Our last year's trip on the 1919 was not so bad after all. Here and there, for one reason or another, there was a slowdown, but we did not jump the track or have a collision and we came in on time.

In extending the season's compliments to our beloved society and affiliated organizations, my best wishes go to each and every one. To the dear ladies of our sister society, I extend my hearty greetings. May God spare them to continue the good work of making our annual gatherings more pleasant by their inspiring presence. I hope and believe that the 1920 express will carry us all safely through, and that we will be happy and more prosperous at the end of the run than ever.

We have reason to congratulate ourselves at this time, fellow members. The good old U. S. A. stands out on the world map bigger than ever, stronger than ever, more patriotic than ever. After a rest-up, following the end of the war, we have taken stock and find that prosperity is with us in abundant measure. But our share of it in the New Year will not come with mere wishing. We need to take off our coats, roll up our sleeves and get down to hard work. We must go after it.

Our society represents co-operation, thrift and conservation. We owe a great deal to our old leaders. They appreciated these three great qualities and founded our society upon them. Let us strive to continue their good work to make our organization more influential and more representative. In union is strength. All the way from the greenhouse to the retailer, there should be helpful co-operation. Our interests are closely allied. For one to be successful, all must share in the success.

In the year just beginning, there are important matters which are bound to engage our attention, a few of which I want to mention.

While we have great respect for the men who form the membership of the federal horticultural board, we nevertheless feel that the efficiency of that important body would be materially strengthened, and the best interests, not only of the florists, but of the public in general, served, were practical growers invited to suggest one of their number for appointment on that board. In all fairness to the great and ever-developing industry which is represented by our organization, we believe the department should have the official benefit of the ripe experience which comes through continued, direct touch with the various activities in plant propagation and culture.

Encourage recreation and affiliation. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." This particularly applies to the florist who does not affiliate himself with his trade organizations. He misses many opportunities. No man in our profession can afford to be on the outside, and no one is too big or too small to become a part of us. We are fortunate to have such an edifying membership, and I hope soon to see all the wholesalers, cut flower growers and pot plantsmen enrolled.

PUELICITY.

Support publicity. Our publicity campaign is only in its infancy and needs to be encouraged. We are indeed favored by having such efficient men to wage this campaign, but we must all join and help in the work. Just imagine what we have accomplished in less than two and a half years. Why, for a few thousands, we have succeeded in flashing our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," throughout the United States. Yes, throughout the whole civilized world; while other tradesmen and manufacturers, after spending many years of laborious work and incurring exorbitant expenses, have not met with the success we have.

I congratulate myself on having such fine material for state vice-presidents, men who willingly give their time to work toward making our society as strong as the Rock of Gibraltar.

To the officers, I want to say that I feel greatly honored in being elected to serve in this high office, and with their co-operation, and that of my fellow members, I will do my utmost to make my administration a success. I need add only one thing. Let us work in the New Year with a united purpose to carry forward the work committed to our hands. The road lies straight ahead and, as a wise old Arab said years and years ago: "No man is ever lost on a straight road."

Secretary Young Reports Progress.

My hearty wishes for a most happy and prosperous New Year are extended to every member of the society. My personal thanks to a large number are also gratefully extended for their liberal support given to the secretary's office in its work during the year just closed.

The society may be congratulated upon entering its thirty-sixth year under most favorable conditions. The growth in membership in 1919 was rather remarkable in comparison with the growth of former years, especially when we consider the fact that general business conditions were going through a period of reconstruction. Most notable has been the large influx of life members, nearly 800 being the total for the year.

Prominent in the work we shall be called upon to do in 1920 will be the continuation of the publicity campaign. While little more than half of the $100,000 fund which our publicity committee believed it possible to raise last year, materialized, every dollar was expended to advantage, and a marvelous amount of publicity resulted. With conditions vastly better, the fund for this year should be easily raised. The campaign has resulted in a vast amount of benefit to the whole trade, and the value of our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," for publicity purposes, is estimated at millions of dollars. We should be untiring in our efforts to cash in on this value during the year.

Considerable work is also to be done this year in the promotion of the fifth national flower show, which is to be held in 1921. This will be a gigantic undertaking, and is expected to eclipse all previous shows.

For the first time, the society has a vice-president in every state in the Union, and in the territory of Alaska; there are vice-presidents also in most of the Canadian provinces, and in Cuba. Through these appointments, the society has both national and international representation, and is in touch with trade conditions generally.

Only two additional trade organizations have, so far, taken advantage of the affiliation privilege presented under our by-laws—the State Florists' Association of Indiana, and the Illinois State Florists' Association. With the requirements in the way of affiliation made easier, by the amendments to the by-laws passed at the Detroit convention, it was expected that organizations in the west and south would make efforts to secure representation upon our executive board.

A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.
President Society of American Florists

This year the annual convention is to be held in Cleveland, the dates, August 17-19. It is not too soon to plan to be in attendance. There is much to be seen in and around Cleveland of interest to florists, and it goes without saying that visitors will be heartily welcomed by our fellow craftsmen.

Let all of us use our best endeavors to increase the strength of our organization this year. In some states our membership is far behind what we might expect, and, surely, it is to the advantage of every live florist to become a member of his trade organization, which represents his interests in emergencies with which he, as an individual, cannot possibly cope. There is much truth nowadays in the old saying, "United we stand, divided we fall." We should, then, do our utmost to place our society where it ought to be—in the front rank of trade bodies, ready to battle against anything and everything likely to be detrimental to the well-doing of our craft.

Retiring President Ammann's Address.

Greetings to one and all with best wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

After two very trying years for our predecessors in office, and the trade at large, we were, on January 1, 1919, ushered into office under most auspicious conditions. Demand for florists' stock was exceptionally good. Growers and retailers were getting prices worth while, the volume of business was greater than ever before, and everybody was pleased and satisfied.

Now let us make a short review of the why and wherefores. First, we had less production at the close of 1918 and beginning of 1919, than for some time previous, the many reasons for which, we need not go into detail here. Second, the demand for our product, no doubt, was greater than ever before; some say on account of the influenza epidemic, while others say publicity was a large factor. Let us grant that it was either, or probably both. One thing we must all admit: It was a condition brought about by the supply and demand. Now then, if that is true, and I am sure it is, then we, no doubt, have the problem solved. All we have to do is to create a demand sufficient for the supply, and we all will be happy. This has been one of the primary aims of the past administration. We tried it through publicity, both national and local. The results, we feel, were very satisfactory for a beginning.

Local co-operative advertising has been initiated into many communities with very satisfactory results. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery, as an organization, and through its individual members, has done some very creditable work along this line. The national publicity contributions are, however, not coming in nearly as well as they should. In order to keep up this great work, more activity must come from the yet indifferent class among the trade. There is only one good reason why a florist, be he grower, wholesaler or retailer, should not subscribe, or rather invest, in national publicity. That one reason is, "If he does not expect to pay his pledge when due."

A condition already existed where the publicity committee had to temporarily borrow funds against outstanding accounts to pay advertising bills promptly. This should not be so, and I want to admonish all subscribers to pay their pledges promptly so the committee can get the benefit of all cash discounts, which amounts to a consilerable sum in one season.

Just as a closing word. I desire to express my sincere gratitude to all who have had a part in the great stride our society has made the past year. The credit belongs to no one person, least of all to myself. It is due to the efforts of the various committees, the administration office, the earnest co-operation of our affiliated societies, and the liberal space given to the work by the trade press.

I thank you one and all from the bottom of my heart for the service you have rendered our beloved society, and for the privilege I have had in having just a part with you in moving the grand old S. A. F. just a step forward. Now let us all unite in joining heart and hand with the new administration towards a greater goal and higher ideals.

OFFICERS OF THE SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS FOR 1920.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The first special flower day to be featured in the 1920 campaign is St. Valentine's day, for which all possible publicity should be forthcoming. In addition to a page, in colors, in seven magazines, our promotion bureau has arranged to supply to florists a paster stamp in three colors, and of most appropriate design, for use on envelopes, packages, bills, letters and other material issuing from florists' establishments. These pasters are available for immediate shipment, and a liberal use of them will help to impress the public with the suggestion that they "Say it With Flowers" on St. Valentine's day. Clubs and other organizations can arrange to buy these paster stamps in quantity, for distribution to their members, and if properly used, they furnish a very inexpensive way to advertise this day thoroughly in a community of any size. They will be supplied on orders to the secretary, John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York, at the following rates: 500—$2.00; 1000—$3.00; 2000—$5.50; 5,000—$13.00; 10,000—$25.00; 25,000 $60.00; 50,000—$115.00; and 100,000—$225.00. All orders up to and including 5000 are mailed postpaid. Above that number they are sent by express, charges collect.

THE BILLBOARDS.

With the holiday trade out of the way, perhaps many of our friends will now give attention to the matter of billboards. When we think of the great number of florists' establishments presenting available sites for the display of our handsome billboards, we feel sure that the quantity we have arranged for will soon be distributed and doing the work expected of them, conveying our message "Say it With Flowers." Shipments on early orders have already been made, and orders coming in now will be promptly filled. Send to the secretary for a descriptive circular, if not already in possession of one.

GLASS SIGNS.

Nearly 100 glass signs were shipped from the factory this week. Every florist should display one of these signs, costing only $2.00 delivered, and connecting in a way, with our publicity advertising. Decalcomania transfer signs, in the same design, are also available, four for a dollar.

FURTHER SUPPORT URGENTLY NEEDED.

This is the time when good resolutions are made. If you have not yet subscribed to the publicity fund, it would be a graceful act on your part to begin the year with a subscription—graceful to yourself, as well as to the publicity committee, who have taken so much upon their shoulders in forwarding the work which has meant so much for the whole trade. Every florist who withholds his support to the campaign, holds back also the work. The committee, necessarily, must plan arrangements for publicity a considerable time in advance, and they cannot enter into contracts blindly; they must know that they will have the money to meet their obligations when due. A campaign similar to ours was recently launched by the toy manufacturers, after a preparation running into a year or more. They had $68,000 actually in hand before they started their publicity work. They would not take chances. We have worked somewhat differently. Our committee laid out a plan to cover certain periods, and as soon as sufficient funds became available, they went ahead. A lot of time was saved in this way, and immediate results were enjoyed—but it created a lot of anxiety for the committee.

The florists no longer have "hard times" to contend with. Our campaign has helped wonderfully to increase business, and all of us are reaping the benefit. Right now is the time to show appreciative interest in the campaign work—with a cheque covering a subscription. Subscription blanks and other matter mailed upon application.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

CHRISTMAS TRADE

New Business Records.

With prices averaging about 25 per cent higher than a year ago—and in a number of cities much more—the 1919 Christmas trade made a new record for increased volume of sales, showing a considerable gain over the satisfactory period of last year. Quality in general was better than in former holiday periods, in many cases, notably so, and prices in most instances were paid without complaint. The buying public, well supplied with money, wanted the best, and in the few cases, where prices for cut flowers lessened interest, plants moved readily as acceptable substitutes. Roses, carnations and violets were in short supply, compared with the demand and what limited offerings of bulbous stock were available failed to receive serious consideration. Violets and orchids showed perhaps the greatest price advance, and with a shortage of sweet peas, corsages met with limited sales. Poinsettias sold well, with roses a close second. In plants, the demand was so brisk, that all seasonable stock, went fast, and it was hard to determine favorites. Wreaths for decorations of all kinds found great favor. The following condensed reports from various sections of the country, indicate that it was truly a "Say it With Flowers" Christmas, with much credit due the national advertising of the Society of American Florists and the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association's fast-

Christmas in New York Retail Stores.

When one reflects, that in Manhattanan (Old New York) and the Bronx, there are over 300 strictly retail flower stores, and in the Bronx a number of others that combine growing, in a small way, with retailing, it would seem that something interesting could be written about them. Perhaps the man—or woman—that could write the most entertaining narrative of the Christmas trade, should have a more fervid imagination than the writer of these notes, a person like Dr. Cooke, for instance, who "discovered" the North Pole. The growers, who like Paul and Apollos, have had a long season of planting and watering, have at last been reaping some fruits of their toil, and it can be said that they have done well. When Quarantine No. 37 and various other drawbacks are considered, the plant productions for this season were most creditable. In quantity, the poinsettias took the lead. So far as one could observe, every plantsman grew them, and a number had almost an excessive stock. There was a wide range in the size and quality of the poinsettias. There were very many large and attractive plants, others were but medium in size and quality, and there were many small ones, that in these times of high prices, gave people of limited means an opportunity to secure a growing plant showing the true Christmas color. We would consider the prices charged for all sizes of poinsettias, by the retailers, as reasonable. Good stock in 12 and 14-inch pans, arranged with Asparagus plumsosus, ranged from $15 to $20 each. For large plants or combinations in baskets, there were sales up to $35. On the other hand, small and inferior plants went as low as $3 to $5. If the growers had but a limited stock of azaleas to bring forward, they certainly did well to bring them to market so well flowered and in such good condition. Part of the stock would, for florescence, compare favorably with that on the market in the halcyon days, before the federal horticultural board was seized with bugphobia. Prices ranged from $8 to $40 each. The white, or as it is generally spoken of, the Christmas heather, was fine and some splendid specimen plants were seen. There was a larger stock of it than we had anticipated, and it served admirably as a foil for the great stock of red. The pink variety, of which there was a considerable supply, was also an attractive feature. Small plants of the lavender (E. regenerius) were used to great advantage, in combinations with Pandanus Veitchii, dracænas and small ferns. There were sales of large white heathers as high as $75 and $100; smaller plants $5 to $25 and $60. There were many fine specimens of the orange, and they too, were a relief to the eye where so much red was in evidence. The general range of prices was $8 to $25.

There were fair stocks of cyclamens, solanums, begonias of the Lorraine type, celestial peppers and other small plants, all of which found admirers and purchasers. But it was the poinsettias, heathers, azaleas and oranges, and the various combinations with such foliage plants as crotons, pandanus, dracænas and the ferns that made the stores don their Christmas dress. Only a limited stock of ardisias and camellias were noticed, but some of the latter were very attractive. What ardisias there were did not move well at the prices, $8 and $10. Even in these times of high prices, they are not worth it. A few large pots of daisies were seen, but being poorly flowered, they were not factors. There were a few cleverly arranged baskets of cattleyeas and cypripediums and adiantum. In quantity, doubtless many more poinsettias sold than any other plants—there were more of them—but singly, and in combinations, we would class the heathers as the best sellers. Many combinations of foliage plants were sold, because a small plant of heather was included, and plant for plant, the heathers brought much more money than the poinsettias. There were many sales of cyclamens at $5 to $10 per plant. If any stock was slow, it seemed to be the berried plants.

As for plant novelties, strictly speaking, there were none. Nothing was noticed but that a similar variety had been seen in former years. A few of the tall acacia plants were seen. In several stores, there were pans of short tulips, but they attracted little attention.

The plant trade in the leading stores was excellent, and everything that was attractive sold well. But little, excepting the culls, was left. So far as we can learn, the plant trade was good throughout the city.

As a matter of course, the large stores in the heart of the city sold cut flowers even at the high prices, but there was much complaint on that score and orders were heavily cut, so much so, that a predicted shortage of cut flowers developed into a surplus on Christmas eve. White carnations had the hardest fall, but no carnations sold up to expectations. Time and again, the carnation growers had been warned about "pickling," but it does no good. There were even some of the shorter grades of American Beauty roses and special tea roses left over.

NEW YORK NOTES.

There is no more effective way that a retail florist can "Say It With Flowers," than to keep up attractive window decorations; they speak for themselves. In the hurry and bustle in getting ready for holiday trade—cold weather and plants late in arriving—the window is sometimes neglected. It would be impossible in limited space to do justice to all the attractions in that line that we have noticed, and but a few can be mentioned. Malandre Brothers made an exceptionally fine window display of handle baskets, filled with azales, heather and foliage plants, decorated with pink ribbon. In the wings, were pyramids of well fruited orange plants, decorated with correspondingly colored ribbon. Cut flowers were so scarce, and high priced, that but few got into the windows. But at Herman Warendorff's Ansonia hotel store, many callas were used as a centerpiece for the window decoration. Suitable plants were grouped around the mirror, but attractive features being a large globe of goldfish and tall hand painted vases. The store and windows of the Boulevard Floral Co., were rich in color, with poinsettias, heathers, azaleas and begonias. The Aphrodite Co., displayed a pyramid of azaleas and begonias, flanked by orange plants. There were many attractive features at the store of the J. G. Papadem Co. Noteworthy was the fine arrangement of heather and poinsettias. Excellent stock of camellias, cyclamens and begonias was noticeable. The Colonial Florist (Costos Sakelos) has a taste for massed decorations, and the window of his main store did not fail to attract attention. Almost all the available varieties of plants were massed, each decorated with suitable ribbon. A. B. Cazan exhibited a fine collection of plants. Like others, he was well stocked with poinsettias, other attractive features being oranges, araucarias, begonias and celestial peppers. Large plants of Pandanus Veitchii enhanced the effect. The Broadway Florist made a good display with poinnsettias, azaleas and oranges. There was an excellent plant display at the Dards store, which was practically sold out by 10 a. m., December 24. There was a fine arrangement for handling and delivery, and Manager Perry is to be congratulated. Guido, Inc., had a large stock of plants and combinations, and sold out well.

Christmas in the Chicago Stores.

Plants were handled on a large scale this Christmas, owing to the great scarcity of cut flowers and everyone sold out completely with one or two exceptions, especially where the dealer replenished his supply at the last minute on account of the heavy demand. Cyclamens, begonias, poinsettias, peppers and heather were the principal offerings in the plant line. There were many complaints about the supply of heather plants from California, which arrived in such poor condition in some instances that the entire shipments had to be dumped. Made-up baskets and boxes of flowering stock, ferns and foliage plants were included in the offerings and moved readily as in other years. Pepper plants sold at $3.00 to $7.50 each; cyclamens at $4 to $15; begonias at $4 to $6; poinsettias at $4 to $15 and Scotch heather at $5 to $25. The made-up boxes and baskets sold at prices ranging from $10 to $30 each. Some higher prices were realized, but those quoted above are the average said to have been obtaind by the majority of the stores. American Beauty were sold for all kinds of prices ranging from $20 to $40 per dozen, according to quality. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia, Milady, and Premier sold at high figures, ranging from $5 to $18 per dozen, and more in the extra select grades. Ophelia, Sunburst, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Ward, Shawyer, Champ Welland, Maryland and Montrose had a good call, owing to the prices asked, but all roses cleaned up nicely. Violets sold well, and so did sweet peas and orchids, notwithstanding the high figures paid at wholesale. Holly wreaths were in strong demand, and so were made-up baskets of boxwood and red winterberries. Made-up wreaths and baskets of artificial stock were featured quite extensively this season and sold exceptionally well. The ideal weather which prevailed the few days before Christmas made deliveries easy, which meant much to the local dealers. The sales for Christmas week, according to the majority of the stores, were the best in years, and while considerable grumbling was heard in regard to the high prices of stock in general, everyone is convinced that flowers, plants, etc., have been sold too cheaply in the past, and that the public will pay what is asked or take something else at hand if told of the high cost of production. This is the first time in years that the market held as firm as it did the day before Christmas, when stock of all kind, including the high priced carnations, cleaned up completely.

Christmas at Philadelphia.

The December holiday trade, with its more or less uncertain outcome both as to volume of business and stock of various kinds with which to meet the demand, has come and gone, and as far as can be ascertained, in the interest of the grower and retailer, it has been very satisfactory. In most cases, as far as sales are concerned, the records of last year were broken; there are a few grumblers, but the great majority, particularly those who went after the trade in up-to-date business-like methods, report increases from 10 to 25 per cent, with a very good clean-up of almost their entire stock. One dealer said his store looked like a place for rent, it was so empty. Those who were prepared with a good up-to-date stock that invited business had all the trade they could attend to at prices better than were ever realized before. Those who were doubtful of the outcome, and had to work up goods, such as wreaths on the last days, lost many opportunities, and had to fill their odrers in a wasteful and expensive way. Retail prices were from 25 to 100 per cent higher than last season, compelled by reason of increased prices of plants, all cut flowers, stock from the supply houses and extra salaries. There was no way out but to pass it on to the purchasers or general public, which was done, and in the great majority of cases, successfully. A certain ratio of profit is absolutely necessary if the business is to pay, and those who do not meet conditions in this way can never hope to get ahead or have any surplus to lay by. While the supply of cut flowers held out to the end, there was a scarcity of all kinds of medium priced stock. Carnations were from 25 to 33 per cent below the production of last season, while the same holds good on medium grades of roses. There were enough of the specials and extras of Columbia, Premier and Russell that sold from 35 cents up to $1, but the 15 to 25 cent kind were very shy, the demand being not nearly satisfied. Well grown Russell were preferred to Premier of the same grade. Carnations were, as expected, very scarce, selling from $12 to $15 a hundred for select stock, with a few of the best at $20. American Beauties were scarce at from $1.25 to $1.50 each, and yet the street men were offering quite good looking stock on Christmas morning. Snapdragons sold well, as did white lilac. Calendulas and Paper White narcissus cleaned up, as did daisies. For some reason, stevia appeared to hang fire, and much of it sold as low as 25 cents per bunch. Last year, it brought 50 cents easily. As compared with last season, cattleyas were at least 33 per cent short, but increased prices brought their total of sales up to the volume of 1918. Two dollars each for choice flowers was the price. There was a good supply of callas, which were in demand, while one grower surprised the market with a few new crop Easter lilies. Violets sold as high as $4 per hundred for choice New York doubles. There was a good supply of greens, for which there was little or no advance in price.

There was an immense demand in the stores for wreaths of all kinds, nearly all reporting an increased business, both for house and cemetery decoration. The French and Japanese moss wreaths, being again available, were largely sold for a medium-priced article. Prices, however, on all store-made wreaths, with magnolia and oak leaf groundwork, and decorations of supply house material, were from a half to double the figures of a year ago. There were some fancy wreaths of spruce, decorated with quantities of cones and red berries, and others of clippings of nursery evergreens, both of which were very classy and brought big money.

There was the usual array of choice plant baskets, which appear to have more interest taken in them every year. The choice pieces, enhanced with ribbon decorations, seen in the various stores, were exceptionally fine. While flowering plants of all kinds were claimed far short of the demand before Christmas, yet there appeared to be enough to go around. As featured in the shops in jardinieres, baskets, mats and paper covers, with silk and fibre ribbon or chiffon trimmings, they were very salable. Fruited plants, particularly dwarf solanums and celestial peppers, were quite plentiful and sold well at good prices. Dwarf oranges were scarce, and nearly all imported. There were a few ardisias. Poinsettias were the quantity stock. They were for the most part very well flowered, and in the decorated pans, sold at prices much above last year. Cyclamens, begonias and primulas were well done by local growers, but heather and some well flowered baby ramblers, a novelty for Christmas, came from New York and eastern cities. There was an immense sale of pot ferns, Boston, Scotii, Teddy, Jr., Norwood, Verona, and others, which were never seen in better form. They all brought record prices.

For some reason, there was a great oversupply of Christmas greens. Many carloads of Christmas trees were left unsold on the railroad sidings, while piles of them were seen all over the city on the morning of December 25. At the city hall, on Christmas Eve, trees that should have sold for $2.50 to $5 were almost given away. It was the same with holly. Many cases remained unopened, while well made holly wreaths sold for 10 cents each. These were street prices; as a rule, the stores fared much better, providing only for their regular patrons, from whom there was a good demand. Take it altogether, it was a splendid Christmas trade, at least 10 per cent in volume of transactions greater than last season, which at the advanced prices, argues well for the future.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—With prices slightly higher than for the holiday season of 1918, A. & J. Hobbs recorded a gain of about 14 per cent in this year's Christmas sales. Roses, carnations and violets were in limited supply, and while bulbous stock was quite plentiful, the demand was light. Quality also was not up to the standard of a year ago. The sale of flowering plants showed an increase. Red, as usual, was the predominant color.

DETROIT, MICH.—With an advance in prices of about 50 per cent, Christmas sales at John Breitmeyer's Sons increased to double those of a year ago. In bulbous stock, there were no offerings of account, with the exception of a few Paper Whites. The supply of roses, violets and carnations was ample, with quality in general of good condition. As a rule quality was better than for the 1918 season. Made-up baskets, pots and poinsettia pans took a strong lead. Roses took the lead over carnations, and orchids were too high in price and limited in supply to be counted as a factor. There was a heavy demand for wreaths.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Samuel Murray says that higher prices than prevailed in 1918, helped to bring this year's Christmas sales to a point 35 per cent above last year's record. The quality of stock was also better than in former years. Roses, carnations and violets were in limited supply with no bulbous flowers. Flowering plants showed a gain in favor, and the same was true of arrangements of this stock in baskets. This up-to-date establishment enjoyed the best business of its career of more than 35 years. Ideal weather was also a contributing factor to success in perfect delivery.

CHARLESTON S. C.—While wholesale prices were much too high those asked by the retail stores were very little higher than a year ago and Christmas trade showed an increase of about 75 per cent over that of 1918 as reported by T. T. Bolger. The supply of roses, carnations and violets was below requirements and more bulbous flowers, which were of good quality, could have been sold if available. In other lines, the quality was not as good as in former years. In plants, the supply was short and anything in bloom moved freely. The demand called for the best quality in every case.

DES MOINES, IA.—According to the J. S. Wilson Floral Co. 1919 Christmas prices showed an advance of 15 per cent over those of last season with volume of sales 25 per cent better. Roses were a short item, but there was a plentiful supply of carnations, with prices too high to allow many sales. There was a fair demand for bulbous flowers. Everything considered, quality was better than in 1918. Plant sales showed an increase, especially poinsettias, followed by cyclamens and solanums. There was also a very good demand for Boston ferns and made up plant baskets. Magnolia wreaths went strong.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Christmas prices from 10 to 25 per cent better than last year, and an excellent demand is reported by Henry Smith. More cut flowers could have been sold, had they been available, especially roses, carnations and violets, and Paper Whites were about the only bulbous offering. Roses were of improved quality but carnations failed to reach their usual standard. Fancy roses enjoyed a very brisk call. All good pot plants sold well, but there was a shortage of flowering varieties, which helped the movement of ferns.

OMAHA, NEB.—Hess & Swoboda did 22 per cent more business than during the Christmas season of 1918. Carnations showed an increase in price of 33 per cent, and roses held about the same as in former years. The supply was limited, with the exception of California violets, which were plentiful. Quality in general was about the same as a year ago at an average price advance in all lines of 25 per cent. Poinsettias, both cut and pot, were the favorites, and plants moved better than ever. Cut flower prices killed interest in some cases.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Larger sales and cleaner business with little advance in prices over last year is reported by the Saltford Flower Shop. With the exception of bulbous stock, of which none was offered, cut stock was plentiful at the price. The quality was fine. Orchids and sweet peas were the short items. In plants, cyclamens took the lead with decorated ferns a close second. Begonias were not as much in favor as in former years. Orders, while calling for smaller quantity, were for higher quality than usual and early buying was noticeable.

RICHMOND, VA.—Ratcliffe & Tanner, Inc., had an increase of about 25 per cent in Christmas business, plant prices being about the same as last year, and cut flowers advancing from 50 to 100 per cent. In violets, carnations and roses, the supply fell below requirements, and the quality showed little difference as compared with a year ago. Flowering plants showed a gain in popularity. Violets and orchid prices were out of the question and fewer corsages were worn than in previous years, due to this reason.

WORCESTER, MASS.—For the 1919 Christmas trade, an increase of 50 per cent was noted in both prices and volume of sales by H. F. A. Lange. In cut flowers, roses were in good supply, but there was a shortage of carnations and violets. Paper Whites was the only item offered in the bulbous line. In general, the quality was ahead of that of a year ago. Poinsettias enjoyed a better sale than in former years. In plants, flowering stock showed increased sales. Quality was called for, regardless of price.

LAWRENCE, KAN.—In money value, Christmas sales showed an increase, with prices on some items nearly double those of 1918, according to A. Whitcomb & Son. In roses, violets and carnations, prices were too high to interest many buyers and there was not much movement in bulbous stock. The quality of the flowers in general, however, was good. While cyclamens took the lead in the plant section, all flowering stock moved very well. The call for cheaper plants was noticeable.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gude Bros. Co. reports 1919 Christmas business 25 per cent better than last year, with prices much higher. There was an ample supply of roses, carnations and violets of excellent quality with no increase noticeable in the call for any special flower. In plants, everything went with a rush. Increased prices did not seem to affect buying. In some instances, where one dozen seemed to call for too great an outlay, a half-dozen was made to answer the purpose.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Hoyt Bros. Co. reports prices about the same as for the Christmas period of last year, but 1919 volume of business showed a gain of about 30 per cent. Roses were in limited supply, but carnations and violets were ample to supply most needs. Bulbous stock was not in evidence. In all lines the quality was exceptionally good. Plant sales were about on a par with those of a year ago. Warm weather and good roads made delivery easy.

TOLEDO, O.—Mrs. J. B. Freeman reports better sales and more satisfactory prices than a year ago for the Christmas trade. Narcissus was the only offering in the bulbous line and the supply of this was good. In roses, violets and carnations there was a shortage, as the quality was below that of last year. Roses and violets led the demand. Plant sales were about on a par with the movement in 1918.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports an increase of 50 per cent in Christmas business, with a limited supply of cut stock, and advanced prices on some lines. The quality was unusually fine and there was a heavy demand for the better grade of plants and cut stock. Any Christmas plant found ready sale and there was a brisk demand for wreaths.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Holm & Olson report 1919 Christmas trade 15 per cent greater than last year, with prices about the same. Roses and carnations were equal to requirements, but there were no violets or bulbous flowers. The quality was fully as good as in former years with plant sales about equal to former corresponding periods.

FALL RIVER, MASS.—C. Warburton reports a 25 per cent increase in Christmas sales with an advance in prices of about one-fifth as compared with 1918. Cut flowers, with the exception of bulbous stock, were equal to the demand, with quality up to standard. In plants, the offering was sufficient for all needs.

FARGO, N. D.—The Smedley Floral Co. recorded a 30 per cent increase in Christmas sales volume, at prices about the same as last year. Quality was about on a par with other seasons and the cut flower supply was plentiful, poinsettias being most in favor. In plants, cyclamens were the favorites.

Grimm & Gorly's New Quarters.

Grimm & Gorly, well-known St. Louis, Mo., florists, have leased the four-story building at 712 Washington avenue, that city, which they have remodeled into a flower shop that will be unequaled in excellence of appointment and service by any store of its kind in the west. Vincent J. Gorly says that he has planned many innovations for the new store. The exterior of the building will be remodeled, with large cement flower boxes, in tiers running parallel to each floor. These will be filled throughout the year with seasonable plants and flowers. A canopy of bronze and glass will project over the doorway. The first two floors will be used as salesrooms, and will be decorated with plastic reliefs, crystal chandeliers of unique design, caen stone walls and floors of French tile. A large display of wicker ware, sun-room decorations and nursery effects will be shown on the second floor.

The Late W. Marcus Stephenson.

W. Marcus Stephenson, landscape architect and rose grower of Old York road, Philadelphia, Pa., died December 27, age 60 years. The deceased succeeded to the business of his father, trading under the firm name of John Stephenson's Sons. Some years ago he erected a mammoth rose house, 50x 1,200 feet, from which he produced very fine stock. He was unmarried and lived in the old mansion with his sisters. The funeral, held December 30, was attended by many in the trade, by whom he was held in high esteem. The business will be continued by H. E. Roberts, manager, for the present.

The Late James Christatos.

James Christatos, a well known florist of New Yorw, died December 24, after a lingering illness. He was of the family of that name who are well represented in the flower business. He was a brother of N. Christatos, and an uncle of Morris, Thomas and Robert Christatos, all in the retai florist trade. He leaves a wife and five children. His death is deeply felt by his many friends.

1920.

"The morning wind forever blows;
the poem of Creation is unending."

THE Christmas business of the post offices of the United States shows an increase of 50 per cent.

CHRISTMAS TRADE, judging from the early reports at hand, shows an advance of about 20 per cent over that of last year.

THE horticultural classes at the University of Illinois are so full that there is not more than half enough staff to carry on the work.

IT is reported the coming year will be one of restricted glass output, labor not being as available or as efficient as in the past. The demand for glass for new buildings promises quite extensive.

Personal.

James Gurney, Sr., former superintendent of Tower Grove park, St. Louis, Mo., is enjoying good health in his eighty-sixth year.

Carnation Convention Hotel Rates.

Members and friends of the American Carnation Society and the Illinois State Florists' Association expecting to attend the annual meeting and exhibition to be held at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, January 21-22, should make their reservations at once. The hotels are filled up all the time, and unless reservations are made early, visitors are very likely to be disappointed in securing the accommodations they want. Rates are as follows:

New York Spring Show Schedule.

The final schedule of the New York spring flower show which will be held in the Grand Central Palace, that city, March 15-21, 1920, under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York, the New York Florists' Club and the American Rose Society, has been issued and copies of same may be had by addressing John Young, secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York.

In all, there are 291 classes in which awards will be made, ranging from $5 to $500, with divisions for commercial and private growers. In the commercial section, plants in flower will be judged in 17 classes, palms and foliage plants in 13, ferns six, bulbous plants 12, orchid plants four, cut orchids one, roses in pots and tubs, six, cut roses 23, carnations 11, sweet peas 11. The feature entry will again be a display of rose plants, including hybrid perpetuals, hybrid teas, climbers and polyanthus types, arranged as a growing garden, covering 500 square feet, for which the following prizes are offered: $500, $300 and $200. An equally attractive schedule is offered in the section for private growers with classes added for dinner table decorations and basket arrangements.

Pansies—Sow Now.

We have for many years produced at least part, and sometimes all of our pansies for spring trade by sowing seeds in midwinter, from December 1 to January 15. There are several good seasons for this method. The first, and a very good one, is that in midwinter we can depend upon every good seed to produce a plant. This is not the case in hot weather in August. At the present price of seed, this point is worth considering. The second reason is that we seldom have time in October to give the young plants proper attention, owing to other interests. Third, and very important, these young plants do better in summer than the larger wintered-over stock. This is so well known by customers that they will buy no others.

To do this right, we have found that we cannot avoid two shifts. We sow the seed into shallow drills, on greenhouse benches, having the rows two inches apart. We do not cover the seed at all, but use a piece of bunting (white cheese-cloth) and spread this over the seeds. Water will go through this cloth readily, and also some light, yet drying out is prevented and also any displacing of seeds. It is the best method we have ever used. This cloth can remain until the seeds are well rooted, when it must be removed before the plants push through the mesh. With very little attention, a perfect stand is easily obtained. When these seedlings show character leaf, they are pricked out on benches 2 inches by 2 inches and about March 20 they are shifted out into cold frames 3x3 inches. All this work is done in a very low temperature, somewhere between 40 and 50°. It is also not essential to have the best of roof, as they come along all right in an old house, or a place that is shaded at times. We know of nothing that pays better than this method of pansy culture, if well done. It produces the short-jointed, sturdy plant that the buyer likes. We have found that hard freezing in March does not hurt them in the cold frames, hence, do not delay the final move if you are ready.

CHRISTMAS SALES UNUSUALLY GOOD.

Christmas trade this year may be said to have been the very best ever experienced by the local florists. It differed in some respects to that of a year ago, and yet in most of its features it was not dissimilar. Many days before the big event, the active buying of plants and artificial effects, and inquiries, gave a clear indication of the heavy demand that developed on Tuesday and Wednesday. On these days, the trend leaned strongly to cut flowers that were previously most completely ignored. The slogan, "Say It With Flowers," was never before exemplified to the extent it was on these days, when the people apparently tiring of expressing the spirit of good will by cards and other inanimate things, turned to the beautiful roses, violets and poinsettias, in cut flowers, and plants of cyclamen, poinsettia, primula and begonia. Boston ferns, too, were a factor in the plant line, and even Dracæna fragrans, ficus and palms found favor with many. Solanums, well berried and highly colored, were found in all the florists' shops, and were never before so popular in the medium priced items. In the more expensive effects expression was found in the made-up plant baskets that some of the stores were provided with. The erica as a Christmas plant was made acceptable by a touch of color by the pot cover and bow of red fibre or ribbon, and nicely completed the assortment of plants, all of which were sold readily, and after Thursday very few salable plants were to be seen with the florists. In cut flowers, some surprises were met with. Roses led in popularity, the stock was uniformly good, and prices not excessive. American Beauties in the better grades held their popularity in the usual ratio with other varieties, though it must be said that Russell and Premier cut down the call for medium and short grades of American Beauties. Ophelia was never seen to better advantage in all grades, and perhaps this variety excelled all others in popularity, and certainly more of it than any other variety was sold on this occasion. Violets were still popular, but the supply was far short of the demand, and many substitutions were made. Carnations were not a factor this year, and no good colored ones were available in this market. Good whites were plentiful and far in excess of the demand, even at the wholesale price of $10 and $12 a hundred, a figure that was freely offered for the same flowers a week previously, but they were held back for the "big day" with the inevitable result—no sale. Wreaths made up with evergreens and artificial trimmings, sold well, perhaps better than ever before, and this was due chiefly to the merit of the artistic effects offered, which found appreciative buyers. The weather was quite cold and made deliveries a serious and important matter with many who were obliged to use inexperienced help. All pot plant growers sold out entirely and few, if any, dealers had their orders filled completely, irrespective of the time of placing the same. The market was well supplied with Paper Whites of good quality, selling most uniformly for $8 a hundred, and all of them used. Stevia was never seen here in better quality, and the supply nicely equaled the demand.

NOTE.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Robert and Henry Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, whose mother passed away December 24. The funeral was held Friday morning, December 26, from St. Aloysius church, with its beautiful and extensive Christmas decorations still intact, lending much impressiveness to the requiem services. The local florists were well represented and the floral offerings most beautiful. Among them was a handsome wreath from the Detroit Florists' Club. Interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

WONDERFUL CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

Now that Christmas business is a thing of the past, everyone is trying to get into a normal physical condition. The volume of business was perhaps 40 per cent greater than last year, when actual money value is considered. The stock of flowering plants and cut flowers was not sold out in some instances, but higher prices account for the difference. Bulb stock was a good seller, and owing to its keeping qualities was one of the most satisfactory items. Flowers in general were of high quality, and were it not for the high prices, no complaint could be offered on this score. Demand in previous years has always favored medium grade stock in all shops, with the exception of a few in each city, who cater to the elite exclusively, but this year the higher priced articles seemed to move best in most shops; in fact, th leftovers were, in most instances, plants of the lower prices. The unusual demand for corsages is explained by the boys being home from abroad; especially is this more noticeable since last year was the poorest corsage year for a long time. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association is now the florist's best customer, and the volume of business that accrues from this source, at a holiday, is certainly wonderful. In not so many years from now, this source of business will be the greatest item for a florist, and we predict the out-of-town business will nearly equal city sales in the near future.

NOTES.

Fred Gear says business was about the same as last year, all flowers and plants being sold. Mrs. Gear had an unusual experience, when a truck belonging to Julius Baer broke down in front of her home. The chauffeur asked to use the phone, not knowing he was phoning from the home of a brother florist.

Irvin Gebhard, proprietor of Tromey's Flower Shop, reports receipts equal to last year, but amount of stock sold not quite so great owing to the high prices. Mr. Gebhard says a number of customers claimed, when through buying other merchandise, they had little to spend for flowers.

H. W. Sheppard's business was greater than last year: some of the days, receipts were doubled, while others were equaled or bettered. All hands were kept on the jump with little time to eat or sleep. Mrs. Klunder, Frank Herb and Roy Greensmith were valuable additions to the force.

C. E. Critchell reports business the best in the history of the concern, the only cause for complaint being lack of good stock to fill orders, good carnations being the shortest item.

Wm. Murphy & Co. sold out clean with the exception of one shipment of sweet peas, which arrived in poor condition, much to the disappointment of prospective buyers.

E. W. Gillette's force worked long hours to get out all the wire work orders, and in the cut flower department everything sold out clean.

Robert Kelly, Fourth street, reports business the best ever, selling out everything in flowers and blooming plants.

Louis Kvrk had more orders for Aaron Ward roses, baby primroses and stevia than he could fill.

T. W. Hardesty & Co. report business ahead of last year, both in receipts and volume.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange said everything salable went in record time.

BUSINESS NEVER BETTER.

Market conditions have been fine in so far as moving of stock is concerned, but the supply has been inadequate for the demand. The heavy shipping trade has made great inroads on the limited amount of stock arriving, and this has caused prices to hold up to a high pitch. Business has never been better, and this does not bar the wonderful business of a year ago, which was attributed to the influenza. The bulk of the roses arriving, have been of the better grades, and fancy stock has sold exceptionally well. The leaders are Premier, Russell, Columbia and the various reds. Carnations have had a good call. Sweet peas and violets have been in strong demand, with a very limited quantity. Narcissi have been in the best supply and clean up daily at $8 to $10 per hundred. Calendulas, daisies, snapdragons and Christmas Gold pompons also clean up daily. Up to Christmas time, quite a few late chrysanthemums helped out wonderfully in supplying the demand for funeral flowers, Until a few days before Christmas, decorating greens were exceptionally short, but at the present writing, greens of all kinds are in good supply.

CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

To say that Christmas business was beyond expectations, is putting it mildly. There was a decided increase in the number of flower buyers, and the average prices were far above former figures. The supply of cut flowers being somewhat short, most of the wise retailers stocked up well on seasonable plants, and everybody seems to have cleaned out. It was a matter of comment among the trade that the public was well satisfied with prices, and seemed to realize that they were getting bigger values in flowers than they could obtain in other merchandise for the same amount of money. We cannot help but believe that the wonderful publicity campaign of the national society and the follow up advertising of the local florists, is the greatest factor in bringing the flower buying public into our shops, and with a continuation of the proper spirit, we hope to report a greater and more successful Christmas for 1920.

NOTES.

New Year's promises to be another big flower consuming event. The advance orders for corsages for the various watch parties is very promising. If we do not have a few days of sunshine, the variety of flowers to be used for this work will be confined to roses and orchids almost exclusively.

W. W. Ohlweiler had some hard luck for Christmas, his boiler springing a leak. However, with the assistance of a few of the county growers, they had him fixed up in time so he did not freeze out. A few weeks ago, he also had the misfortune to lose his cut of stevia by coal gas.

Oscar C. May and W. A. Rowe were cutting chrysanthemums up to Christmas, and the last few weeks' cut was very heavy, considering the lateness of the season. Returns were very good, and this helped to balance the scale of prices on their early chrysanthemums.

H. G. Berning had an exceptionally large shipping trade this season, and for the holidays he was crowded considerably to fill all of his out-of-town orders.

Orchids brought top notch figures for Christmas, but this did not stop them from being cleaned up at the high prices.

ACTIVE GENERAL CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

Holiday week was active in every way in the Buckeye capital. Business never was so brisk, and florists were rushed until after Christmas, when there was a slight lull, as is usually the case. Scarcity of stocks in certain lines hampered sales prior to Christmas, but, nevertheless, trade was the most active in years. Roses were in good demand, and readily sold from $8 to $15 per dozen. The principal offerings were Premier, Ophelia, Russell, Ward, and Sunburst. Carnations also sold well, and these stocks were cleaned up early. They retailed from $2.50 to $4 per dozen. Sweet peas were rather scarce, and those on the market were soon sold. They were unusually fine this season. There were some crysanthemums still on the market, but the supply is fast dwindling. Narcissi were rather plentiful, and the same was true of violets. The latter were very fine and sold rapidly. In the plant department, trade tended largely towards primroses, begonias and cyclamen. The latter were the most plentiful and sold from $5 to $7 each. Many of these plants were used for Christmas gifts. Prospects for the coming year are very bright. The indications point towards an active trade during the early months, as many social functions are scheduled.

HEAVY CHRISTMAS DEMAND.

The demand for stock for Christmas this year was exceedingly heavy, with the total sales showing a great increase over those of the same period of 1918. The shipping trade was extra large, and the city demand was strong enough to clean up the last minute cuts, so that when the wholesale stores closed on Christmas day at noon, there was very little stock, if any, on hand for the next day's orders. The weather was ideal for shipping purposes, and no complaints so far have been heard in regard to stock freezing, and while several of the houses had some of their stock returned it was principally on account of the high prices, the buyer probably making up his mind at the last minute that he could conveniently get along without it for reasons well-known to the average retailer. The cost of production is heavy at present, and the retailers in general did not complain of the high prices, but it was rather difficult for them to explain to the public, especially the stores catering to the poorer and medium class of trade, why cut flowers were so high. One retailer told his customers that they have been sold too cheap in the past, which is certainly true in some instances and that he bought a large supply of plants, especially for those who felt that they could not afford the so-called high prices, which seemed to satisfy the majority of these customers. American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier sold exceptionally well, especially in the shorter and medium stemmed lengths, and while all the fancy stock in these varieties cleaned up, more pushing was neded to move it. Sunburst, Hoosier Beauty, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Richmond, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Ophelia, Montrose, Champ Weiland, Mrs. George Shawyer and a few other varieties grown for this market, also cleaned up completely, but judging from the remarks of some of the growers, a few of the older varieties will have to be shelved next season to make room for the newer sorts, such as Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia, Premier and some of the later introductions, which are being grown on trial at some of the establishments in the vicinity. Carnations were in short supply, and cleaned up quickly at prices ranging from $12 to $25 per 100. Orchids brought from $3 to $5 each, wholesale. Sweet peas sold for $4 to $5 per 100, and the best lily of the valley for $20 to $25 per 100, although there was some inferior stock available at $15 to $18 per 100, and in some instances, a trifle less. Poinsettias did not sell as well as they should at $3 to $6 per dozen, and there were a few left over after Christmas. Calendulas, violets, daisies, mignonette, snapdragons, white and yellow narcissi and sweet alyssum were sold out completely. Holly was scarce, and the same holds true for mistletoe. Boxwood and red winter berries were both good sellers this year, and there was a heavy call for green goods. Artificial stock played an important part in the Christmas offerings in the shape of made-up wreaths and baskets. Plants were handled on a large scale by the local retail florists, and the only reason why some of the stores had a few left over, was because they bought more than their usual supply, and could not handle the orders as fast as they came in, owing to the lack of efficient help, etc. Those who have some left, are finding them good property for the New Year demand, owing to the extreme scarcity of cut flowers, which is greater at this writing than it was at Christmas. Taking everything into consideration, the Christmas demand this year was the heaviest for sometime, and everyone appears to be well satisfied with the results. Wedding orders are numerous this week.

NOTES.

George Hunt, father of Harry H., Arthur E. and Agnes F. Hunt, of Evanston, Fred G. Hunt, of Glencoe, Mrs. A. Piddington, Mrs. James Powell and Mrs. David Twist, of London, Eng., died December 27, at the age of 82. He was a florist in his younger days and was born at Sahamtong, Norfolk, England. His three sons, Arthur, Harry and Fred, are at present engaged in the florist business at Evanston and Glencoe, and are well known to the trade in this vicinity. Funeral services were held at the late residence, 1515 Payne street, Evanston, Tuesday, December 30, at 2 p. m., with interment at Rosehill cemetery. The entire trade joins in extending the family their heartfelt sympathy in the loss of a loving father.

The A. L. Randall Co. gave an illustrated lecture on the afternoon of December 29 in the Le Moyne building, to which all its local and traveling salesmen were invited. Ed. Galavan took all those present on an extended trip through Randall land via the stereopticon limited, stopping off at such places as the Wisconsin moss fields, French immortelle districts, Italian ruscus farms, Japanese bulb regions, and various other local and foreign points in which the firm is interested. Their refrigerator factory and basket works were also shown on the screen together with so many other subjects that one would have to attend a special performance to get a glimpse of the magnitude of the number of articles that this house is really handling. The reason for Art Hansen's second trip to Europe was a beautiful subject and met with the approval of all those present.

A committee representing the retailers, wholesalers and growers met at the office of Hilmer V. Swenson & Co., 431 South Dearborn street, Saturday afternoon, December 27, to discuss a subject of much importance to the trade in this vicinity. The members decided to hold a special meeting on or about January 12, when everyone in the trade is urgently requested to be present, as the subject to be discussed affects every branch of the business. Be sure and be there.

John Poehlmann spent his fourteenth Christmas in the wholesale market last week at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s store, when the firm's total cut flower sales were the greatest in that period. The shipping trade was exceptionally heavy at this house, and the local demand cleaned up the last minute cuts. T. E. Waters and his force are busy taking inventory in the supply department.

The Fleischman Floral Co. never had such a heavy Christmas demand as this year and cleaned up completely in all lines, especially plants, which sold out earlier than usual this season. In cut flowers American Beauty roses had a heavy call. I. Rosnosky, Dick Parker and D. Delaney helped out the regular force during the rush.

Wietor Bros. are so well pleased with the rose Premier that they will grow it on a larger scale than ever next season. They are busy propagating at the greenhouses and judging from the cuttings that are being made, some of the older varieties will be discarded at this place next season.

The Central Floral Co. featured plants extensively at its North State street store and cleaned up completely in this line. Made-up wreaths of specially prepared foliages were rapid sellers. The total sales were away ahead of those of last year.

Peter Gross, well-known as an expert cyclamen grower in this vicinity, left early this week for Defiance, O., where he has taken a position with W. S. Kirchner, successor to C. Winterich.

At the meeting of the forestry class of the Chicago Woman's Club, December 30, Mrs. Carl Cropp presiding, talks were made by Messrs. Kennicott and Perkins on the forest preserve project.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, had two large wedding orders December 26-27, which helped make the total sales for last week on top of a record Christmas the best ever.

The E. C. Amling Co. had a big Christmas business, with the sales for December 22 running close to $25,000. The total sales for the week were surprisingly large.

Henry Wittbold has a big decoration for Marshall Field & Co. to be finished on the evening of January 1. His son, George, will superintend the arrangement.

Bassett & Washburn are coming in big crop with roses and the daily receipts now include some particularly fine stock, which is cleaning up quickly.

Zech & Mann had the best Christmas in years, and cleaned up completely in all lines, with a heavy out-of-town call for stock.

Herbert Hansen says that Peter Reinberg's total Christmas sales were away ahead of last year, and the greatest since 1916.

Leonard Koehler, of the Joseph Foerster Co., joined the ranks of the benedicts, January 1.

The George Wittbold Co.'s sales for Christmas were ahead of last year.

Visitors: John Klaus, Greenwood, Mo.; E. A. Fetters, of Smith & Fetters, Detroit, Mich.; J. J. Higgins, Philadelphia, Pa.; H. Wilson, of Wilson's Seed Store, Columbus, O.

Wichita, Kan.

BUSINESS GOOD, EVERYTHING CONSIDERED.

"Generally satisfactory," broadly defines the conclusions of the local florists concerning Christmas, 1919. Several features might have been better, but with the memory of last year still fresh, we realize also that many things might have been worse. Stocks were fairly adequate in most lines. The unfavorable weather since Thanksgiving did much to shorten production in cut flowers and held back development of flowering plants, so that some stock offered, or meant for offering, was not quite at its best for show of bloom. The local supply of cut flowers was largely augmented by heavy shipments from Chicago, St. Joseph and Denver. California helped out with violets, pepper sprays and various greens. Retail prices were somewhat higher than in previous years, but the quality of stock was generally fine and buyers seemed to expect to have to pay good figures, and everything was cleaned up nicely. Carnations were practically out by Wednesday noon, selling at $3.00 to $4.00 per dozen. Holiday social affairs are crowding the week full. The weather is fine, and the florists are held right on the job taking care of the business. There was a nice line of F. T. D. business, both going and coming. W. H. C.

GOOD HOLIDAY BUSINESS IN ALL LINES.

Christmas trade in this city was very good, both in cut flowers and plants, but a noticeable feature was the absence of sweet peas. Violets enjoyed a good sale and cleaned up by Wednesday. Carnations and roses were in good supply, and the quality was satisfactory. Paper White narcissus and stevia helped to fill out many orders. Poinsettias were good property, but showed the effects of frost, wilting down quickly. With the country on the "dry side," it is now a question what the New Year's eve will bring forth.

NOTES.

W. C. Ruest, of the Cleveland Plant & Flower Co., is hunting for rabbits, and has been promised enough to supply "hassenpfeffer" for the entire store force.

John Knorr, manager of the Brookline Floral Co., was presented with a fine baby boy, December 24. Congratulations.

CHRISTMAS TRADE BEYOND COMPLAINT.

The 1919 holiday trade was very good, with plants selling exceptionally well, although cut flower sales diminished, this condition brought about by high prices which customers refused to pay in many instances, and were as well pleased with begonias, cyclamens, poinsettias, orange trees and like offerings as a substitute. During December, cut flower sales have fallen behind almost 25 per cent. Violets were very scarce, the retail price being $8 per 100. Sweet peas were good and moved rapidly. The quality of the carnations was extremely poor. Roses showed improvement, and although high in price, moved well.

NOTES.

At Philip L. Carbone's establishment, business was better than last year. Plants enjoyed a brisk movement, and plant arrangements in jardinieres and baskets brought very satisfactory figures.

B. A. Snyder & Co. had one of their best seasons, and moved large quantities of holly, mistletoe and laurel, as well as good supplies of roses, violets, carnations and sweet peas.

J. J. O'Brion's store reports good trade in plant stock. Among other features here were attractive cone wreaths and sprays of cones and mistletoe.

Thomas F. Galvin's two stores had a very busy holiday season. Orchids, gardenias, violets and roses were in good supply.

Welch Bros. Co. had a good holiday demand, with heavy supplies of lily of the valley, gardenias and roses.

BUSINESS NEVER BETTER.

Never was there such a sale of flowers in this city for Christmas as the florists enjoyed this year. Many of the largest shops were practically sold out of the desirable varieties December 24, and yet Christmas day continued to bring further business, and most of the stores remained open and employed extra help all day to take care of the rush orders that continued to come in. The coal shortage of some weeks ago forced some of the growers to temporarily shut off steam from a few of the houses, and to run only on part capacity, so that when the holiday season came on, their stock of flowers was not as heavy as it should have been to take care of the trade. All have a good supply of coal now, and are running in good shape. In view of the lesson learned from the coal strike, some of the florists have increased their capacity for storing coal with a view to forestalling any possible emergency of this kind in the future.

LULL AFTER HOLIDAY RUSH.

As is usual after the holidays, things are quiet except for the funeral demand, which is always more or less persistent. Since Christmas, the growers' shipments of cut flowers have been light, although in some quarters, they are getting a fair showing of roses. There are still a few chrysanthemums, while the first daffodils arrived December 26, making, as one of the retailers put it, "both ends meet." Carnations are scarce, anything worth while bringing $12. Sweet peas, which were so fine in late November and early December, were a disappointment at Christmas, the vines, owing to the dark weather dropping most of the crop intended for the holidays. They are still scarce and in demand. Cattleyas are holding at $2 each, and when one thinks of the great quantity now used, 10 times as many as seen in the market 10 years ago, it would seem that the flower buyers are backing up the trade to the best of their ability. Thirty-five dollars was obtained for a corsage of cattleyas at Christmas, which is about the record for this city. The general prices, with few exceptions, are off about 20 per cent from those obtained for the holidays, and if the expected increases in stock materialize, they will not be long in getting back to normal figures that will induce the great rank and file of flower buyers to again visit the stores. One of the commission dealers, in speaking of the holiday supply of cut roses, stated that growers should aim to produce more buds of a medium size, as there were 10 buyers for the short grades to every one of those who desired specials. There is almost an unlimited demand for roses selling from $12 to $25 a hundred, but the extras and specials that bring twice or three times these figures are always hard to move except in limited quantities. Hadley is now about the only red rose, but it is not satisfactory because not prolific, and it also has a tendency to run to specials at Christmas. Seventy-five cents to $1, wholesale, is not a popular price, particularly when the retail cost of handling and profit is added. The old American Beauty held its own; in fact, distanced all rivals. There are fine Russells, Premier and Columbia, said to be as good as American Beauty, but their best price was $1 each, and some left over, while the old favorite cleaned up to the last salable flower at $18 per dozen, which retailed in the shops at $36. Retailers all deplore the scarcity of medium priced roses, they having to do a lot of explaining to customers. Seven dollars and fifty cents to $10 looked like a lot of money for a dozen buds, but this had to be the price for flowers that had any class to them. There appeared to be an extra supply of stevia, which at its low price of 25 cents per bunch, helped to make bulk in boxes of cut flowers. It appears to be hard to estimate the volume of trade, but it is generally conceded to have been better than last year. As at most holidays, while all do a good business, some appear to clean up better than others, which is the case this year, there being here and there some choice plants, baskets and long-stemmed roses that would have added considerably to the receipts had they been sold. However, most of the shops express themselves as very well satisfied with their business. All had a great sale of wreaths at much higher prices than last year. The members of the F. T. D. were called on as never before from correspondents all over the country. The orders for out of town delivery were also greatly increased, so that membership in the organization is now becoming a valued asset.

The Joseph Heacock Co. is alive to its position as leader in the palm growing industry, and has made arrangements to increase its stock. Cibotiums, which are also a feature, have been in great demand the past year.

Wholesalers had all the business they could handle, each house stating they could have sold many more of the lower grades of roses and more carnations and other small flowers had they been able to get the stock.

Charles H. Grakelow's business was stated to have been phenomenal, away ahead of any previous year. His store front was beautifully decorated and illuminated at night with electric lights.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons, in their Bellevue-Stratford and Ritz-Carleton stores, did an immense business, describing it as their best Christmas.

A. M. Campbell received over 5,000 roses from his Hatboro greenhouses, December 26-27, most of which were very fine Premiers.

Gustave Koethe, of Roxboro, suffered a serious loss by fire Christmas morning, which destroyed two greenhouses.

J. Otto Thilow is expected back from his Australian trip, January 10.

BAD WEATHER HURT CHRISTMAS TRADE.

It was a white Christmas.

However it may be at other seasons, there is justification in writing about Christmas weather, as at no other time of the year can weather have so much influence on the florist business. Beginning December 20, the weather was fair and mild up to December 24. At noon on that day, a mixture of rain and sleet began to fall. As evening came on, it turned to snow, and by midnight there was a fair blanket, and a much lower temperature. In a few of the retail stores, orders were being taken for plants as early as December 20, and there continued to be fairly steady demand up to the evening of the 24th. In the wholesale district, from December 22, business was fairly active, with advancing prices. There was an impression abroad that stock would be scarce, and that there would be a great demand for cut flowers, consequently many of the buyers paid the high prices. That condition prevailed until about noon of the 24th, and then gloom set in. The storm came on, which was a hard blow to the violet trade, and it also became evident, that instead of a shortage, there was grave danger of a surplus. But, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," and some one remarked, a long time ago, that "the florists are a hopeful lot," so it was hoped that the retailers, having practically disposed of their plants, would move in force on the wholesale district in the night or early morning hours, the wholesale stores being open all night. But such hopes were blasted or frost-bitten, which ever way one may choose to put it. The large majority of the retailers did not boycott the wholesale district; far from it. They simply staid away. It was a very dull Christmas eve, and since wood alcohol has come to be such a potent factor in commerce, about the best that could be done was to drown the sorrow in strong coffee—very little sugar at that. As had happened in previous years, a lot of stock came in too late to be available. That, and the previous high prices, accounted for a surplus at the final in nearly every stock. Special American Beauties and gardenias—both being in rather light supply — were the only stocks that really moved well and held up to the high prices. Special American Beauties finished at $200 per 100, wholesale, and gardenias went above $1 each. One hundred and thirty-five boxes of violets came in, December 24, whereas a dozen boxes probably covered the shipments of the two preceding days. Under any condition, they were too late, but the storm and cold wave materially aided their downfall. On Christmas morning, thousands of them lay idle in the ice boxes. White carnations and lily of the valley also went dead. Thousands of white carnations were left over, with a fair sprinkling of the other varieties. It cannot be said that the condition in orchids was quite so bad, but there was a considerable surplus. Of other leading stocks, roses probably fared best, though it finally became slow work to push special tea roses. Under the conditions here set forth, we leave our readers to form their own conclusions. A large amount of stock was sold at almost unprecedented high prices, and a few retailers report that their customers paid without murmuring. But among the majority of retailers, there was widespread dissatisfaction, and they reported their customers as in the same frame of mind. Two of the leading Broadway retailers, both with a good line of trade, reported that on account of the high prices, they could not have pushed cut flowers if they had tried. All reports agree that the plant trade was exceptionally good. Notes of the plant trade will be found in another column. Prices on cut flowers up to December 24, varied but little from our quotations of December 27. At this writing, business, as might be expected, is quiet, and there has necessarily been a drop in prices, though good stock is not cheap. When the market, so to speak, gets its second wind, there may be a fair New Year's business.

December 29.—Business is quiet, but prices on roses and carnations are holding firm. Cut poinsettias went bad in the Christmas trade and many are about that cannot be sold. Orchids are slow.

NOTES.

Some of the newspapers are devoting considerable space to the reported invention and attending discoveries of a learned Indian, Sir Jagadis Chunder Bose—not one of our Indians, but a native of India. His invention is called the crescograph. Briefly stated, it is an instrument or a set of instruments for recording the "life story of a plant," its growth, checks that may occur, and its final descent to oblivion after it has reached maturity. One enthusiastic writer has the following: "Interesting as a popular science entertainment as this work is, it has a far reaching importance. Every flower pot or greenhouse may be made an agricultural experiment station. The work of weeks and months may be compressed into the quick observations of hours, if not minutes. There is a belief in some quarters that the growth of plants may be stimulated by electricity and experiments on a large scale have been conducted with them." If this invention is what it purports to be, we highly recommend it to the growers who ship flowers to the New York market for the Christmas trade.

It is said that it "can be made to interpret the vision of plant growth in terms of light." That should do away with the necessity of storing cut flowers in cellars and dark rooms in order to keep them for Christmas. One more invention is needed, to wit, one that will record the age of a flower when it reaches this market.

The Greek-American Florists' Association will hold its annual ball and entertainment at the Hotel Commodore, 42nd street and Lexington avenue, February 26. President Lales of this association, who recently returned from an extended visit to Greece, reports dissatisfaction in that country over failure of the peace conference to settle the Greek claims on Turkey.

Eugene F. Bechamps, of Flushing, recently opened a store for the sale of fruit, vegetables and flowers, opposite the Murray Hill station of the Long Island R. R. The flowers are grown at his son's greenhouses in Flushing. He had a large stock of green and Christmas trees and cleaned up well.

Among recent incorporations reported from New Jersey, is that of the Joseph Manda Company, 191 Valley road, West Orange; general nursery business, capital $100,000. The head of this company is Joseph A. Manda, well known in this city and to the trade in general.

J. K. Allen, one of the oldest wholesalers of the district, has temporarily removed from 118 to 133 West 28th street, and now occupies a part of the store with Walter F. Sheridan. He expects to secure a permanent location by spring.

C. E. Zerbakos & Co., 622 Columbus avenue, have applied for incorporation papers in the amount of $5,000, to engage in the sale of flowers, trees and shrubs. The firm is composed of C. E. and M. Zerbakos and E. Walsh.

John Stemme of Stemme & Sons, florists, of Hattiesburg, Miss., is spending the winter in this city, taking a commercial course. He is a young man of good address and we wish him success.

Sakas Brothers have erected and opened a retail store in an unique little greenhouse at No. 1 West 47th street. As it is a good location, they are likely to secure business.

On the night of December 19, thieves entered two houses of the Hession range, in Flatbush, and carried off the open flowers.

John Kessler, well known in the trade of this city, is now managing the flower department of the Hotel Commodore.

HOLIDAY TRADE SURPASSES 1918.

The 1919 Christmas trade was much better than in previous years, and stock sold out well. In plants, there was a heavy call for begonias, ardisias, ficus, ferns, palms, solanums and cyclamens. Carnations were good property and roses brought excellent prices. Violets were scarce, as were sweet peas. Mignonette and Paper Whites moved freely. Greens sold well in spite of the fact that quantities of this material was offered on the street. One dollar bought the best Christmas tree in the city. One thousand trees arrived here after the holiday and were thrown on the dump. The stores were all decorated; in fact, better than ever before.

LARGEST CHRISTMAS TRADE ON RECORD.

In summing up the Christmas business, it can be done in one word, "Wonderful." To begin with, the weather was ideal, just cold enough to put life into things, and not so cold that plants and cut flowers had to be packed extra carefully. The rush started early in artificial wreaths and baskets, and never before were so many artificial combinations sold. December 24 found the wholesale houses cleaned out of everything in the line of Christmas supplies. Plants and combination plant baskets sold freely, and all the retail stores report that the higher priced ones moved first, and in most cases it was hard to sell the cheaper ones. The supply of cut flowers was sufficient, with the exception of short roses and carnations. All the retail stores are in accord, that while prices were high, they never handled better stock for a holiday. The whole can be summed up as the largest ever, and every one in this district is satisfied. American Beauties were in short supply, of very good quality, and in some cases, Premier had to be substituted in filling orders, but there were no complaints, as the quality of Premier was fine, and as they could be had in 36-inch stems, they would take the place of American Beauties without any trouble. Columbia was the favorite in the roses, and they were superb, but all varieties sold well and brought higher figures than ever before. Russell, Milady, Ophelia, Sunburst, Hilda, My Maryland, Pink Killarney and Ward were all in big demand and cleaned up without any trouble. One thing noticed this year was the shortage in short and medium length roses and the big supply of fancy grades. Carnations were in short supply and brought prices ranging from $12 to $15 per hundred. The quality of violets was of the best, with plenty for everyone, but the price was so high that none but the better class stores cared to take a chance and handle them. Lily of the valley and orchids were scarce and high. There was an abundance of white and yellow narcissi and stevia with a big demand for the same. Sweet peas, baby primroses, calendulas, snapdragons and mignonette were as popular as ever, and cleaned up without any trouble. The supply of greens was large enough to take care of the demand.

NOTES.

The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co. report the largest business in their history, but the same fact holds true with them as with other retail stores; the number of sales made was small compared to other years.

The florists' and gardeners' club will meet Tuesday night, January 6, in the basement of the Carnegie library, N. S., at which time nomination of officers for the coming year will take place.

Mrs. E. A. Williams sold more of her famous combination plant baskets than ever before, and says that the holiday exceeded her expectations.

On top of the big holiday rush, Randolph & McClements handled several large decorations, December 24, which taxed their large force to the limit.

The high prices at Christmas have driven the small flower buyer to look for something cheaper, and the candy stores have benefited.

The Zeiger Co. reports a large volume of business, with everything salable cleaned up. M.

LET'S ALL GET BEHIND
St. Valentine's Day This Year and Make it the BIGGEST DAY in the History of Our Business.

EXTENSIVE advertising will be run in the leading magazines exploiting Flowers for Valentine's Day. This is going to create an interest in Flowers and a demand for Flowers—BUT in order to secure the maximum benefit from all this publicity, every Florist in the country should hook up with it by advertising locally to his own trade.

The S. A. F. & O. H. has taken steps to aid the Florist locally by supplying Stickers and Posters. These are inexpensive and something everybody can afford. It is urged that every Florist in the country get behind this movement. The effort and cost per individual requires so little. We can double the business for Valentine's Day if we make this ONE BIG UNITED MOVEMENT.

Stamp is printed in beautiful colors.

THINK!—what a power for publicity these two little mediums can be made if every Florist in the country would use stickers on all his mail and packages sent out in January and February, and if the Posters were displayed in every Florist window, in the store and on every Florist auto. Millions of stickers would be circulated and thousands of posters displayed. Now all that is required to accomplish this is that every Florist do his part—the effort per individual is hardly noticeable. Buy these Stamps and Posters at once. Combine your order with your neighbor Florists' and obtain the quantity rate and secure a more intensified campaign.

N. B. The profit made in sales of this material, above expense of handling, will revert to the National Publicity Fund.

PUT STICKERS
On EVERY Letter

you send out in January and February. Stop and think for one moment what an enormous circulation can be secured from the use of the stickers on letters—3000 Florists each sending out 500 in one month would make 1,500,000 letters.

PUT STICKERS
On EVERY Package

you send out in January and February. How many packages do you send out on an average each day? Now total the number for one month.

And Remember, each package goes to a Flower buyer or user.

So your circulation would be 100 per cent efficient.

REGARDING THE POSTER

THE Poster carries out same design as in stamp. It is beautifully lithographed in four colors—size 14 x 21 inches, printed in sheet style instead of on card board—very similar to Liberty Loan Posters.

By all means use these posters in your store and on your auto.

DISPLAY POSTERS
in your windows and store

Hundreds, even thousands of people, go by the average Florist Shop every day—imagine the striking effect on the public if every Florist Shop displayed the same poster!

DISPLAY POSTERS
on your delivery auto—

How many delivery autos have you? Now total all the Florist autos in your city. Put one Poster on each side of every Florist auto in town and every single person in your city, able to be about, will receive the suggestion, "Say it with Flowers—Valentine's Day."

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, December 30, was $60.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is spending the New Year holidays in New York.

EL MONTE, CALIF.—The Johansen-Winslow Co. has succeeded to the business of the Victor Johansen Seed Co.

GERMANY has appropriated 1,000,000,000 marks for premiums to encourage growing of wheat, barley and potatoes.

CINCINNATI, O.—Trimble McCullough, of the firm of J. Charles McCullough, is planning to leave for California early this month.

DAVID BURPEE, president of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., having started the mailing of his firm's 1920 catalogue, is spending a brief vacation in the south.

FRANK G. CUTHBERTSON, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., reports the early prospect of sweet peas with attractive double flowers quite superior to the old strain of doubles.

SEATTLE, WASH.—The engagement is announced of Ross Downs, general manager of the Chas. H. Lilly Co., to Miss Hazel Lilly, daughter of the founder and head of the firm.

THE sailing December 20 of the American liner Manchuria from New York for Hamburg, marks the resumption of passenger steamship service from that port to Germany, interrupted since 1914.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district continue in strong demand with prices about the same as last week's, namely, $3.00 for colors and $3.50 for whites, prompt shipment. Operators expect to start January shipping next week.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened five cents higher and December and January holding firm, December 29, with cash offered at $30.85. Timothy was unchanged, cash being offered at $5.75, December $5.85, March $5.97½, April $5.97½ and May $5.97½.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, December 30, were as follows: Timothy, $10.00 to $12.50 per 100 pounds; March $13.50 bid; $12.75 bid for year; red clover, $40 to $48 per 100 pounds, all items showing advances over last week's figures.

THE state of Washington in 1919 had approximately 35,000 acres in garden peas for seed, average yield 400 pounds to the acre, and turnip 1,500 acres, average yield 800 pounds. This production accounts in part for the big surplus lists which seed growers of that state are now offering.

AMERICAN manufacturers of agricultural machinery are doing a big business in Europe. Despite soaring value of the dollar in London, English orders are now being placed in America, and continental orders, which would go to England ordinarily, also are being placed in America.

Immortelles.

French advices are that the high prices of the fall of 1919 on immortelles will prevail during the fall of 1920, but for the following year, a great many plants which were set out in the summer of 1919, will then be in bloom, and for 1921 prices should be materially lower.

Seed Cabbage Freeze in Washington.

One of the results of the unusual cold weather has been the practical destruction of the 1920 cabbage seed crop of the state of Washington, the loss being estimated at 70 to 90 per cent. Owing to the backward weather, the selection and protection of heads was delayed until the frost caught them.

In 1919 the state had approximately 1,400 acres in seed cabbage, yielding 1,250,000 pounds.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

The Robert Buist Co. has been shipping seeds to the south for the past month. This firm finds a great shortage in wrinkled peas, there not being more than one-third of a crop. Garden seeds, as a rule, are much cheaper than for the past two years. Spinach, which sold as high as $1.50 a pound, is now 25 and 30 cents, and many others have been greatly reduced. The business outlook is very good.

The Moore Seed Co. says the outlook is brighter, as many seeds are so much lower. Mr. Moore believes that Germany has lost her hold with flower seed trade. California is a great competitor, particularly for quantity products.

C. R. Gloeckner, of the Henry F. Michell Co., reports much larger buying by florists than ever before. Large orders are already booked for cyclamen seed for next June delivery.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., are working full pressure in getting seed stocks ready for the 1920 season, southern shipments of which will soon begin.

Burpee's Catalogue.

The new catalogue of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., follows last year's plan, dividing the vegetable seeds into four classes: Root crops, edible seeds, greens and salads, and vegetable fruits. The reasons for this change are partly mechanical and partly from a sales standpoint. In the matter of sales, it seems advantageous to get the customers to think of the vegetables in connection with the different classes, or in reference to the purpose for which the vegetable is grown. This has resulted, it is said, in slightly increasing the number of varieties purchased.

Fourteen new varieties of early flowering Spencer sweet peas are offered for the first time, also two new dahlias. Two-color plates are used for the illustrations of greens and salads, and in all, there are over 100 subjects illustrated in color.

The Fordhook home garden plans, directions and collections of seeds, are again featured.

Seed Analysts Meet.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Association of Official Seed Analysts is in progress this week at St. Louis, Mo. The programme includes addresses and reports of various officers and committees, also papers as follows: "Forcing the Germination of Freshly Harvested Wheat and Other Cereals," G. T. Harrington, Washington, D. C.; "Effect

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $6.00 to $8.50; celery, Michigan, square box, $2.00 to $2.50; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 35 to 40 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 90 cents; tomatoes, per pound, 25 to 45 cents.

New York, Dec. 29.—Celery, per doz. roots, 15 to 75 cents; cucumbers, per dozen, $1.00 to $3.00; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.25 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 45 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $4.00.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for the period December 2-9, indicate a steady volume of business with higher prices. General price gains in potatoes continued. Supplies are decreasing and low temperatures interfered with the hauling to shipping stations. Advances reached 10 to 25 cents in the producing sections and 10 to 40 cents in consuming markets. No. 1 sacked northern round white stock closed 15 cents higher at $2.85-$3 per 100 pounds, at Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota shipping points and reached $3 to $3.85 in middlewestern distributing markets. Red River Ohios rose to $3.40-$3.50. Colorado and Idaho round whites were strong in western and southern markets at $3.10-$3.50. New York sacked round whites closed 25 cents higher than the previous week at $3 f. o. b. and sales of bulk stock in eastern cities ranged $2.90-$3.05. Sacked Maine Green Mountains gained 25 cents and closed at $2.82 f. o. b. and ranged $3-$3.35 in New York. In cabbage, further gains of $5 to $15 per ton were reported. New York Danish Seed stock advanced $5 per ton bulk at shipping points closing at $50-$65 per ton. Consuming markets quoted this stock and Wisconsin Holland Seed $15 higher at $70-$80. New York domestic cabbage ranged $45-$50 in leading eastern markets. Onions made further gains. Eastern yellow stock was very strong at western New York shipping points, reaching a closing range of $5.50-$6.00 per 100 pounds, sacked f. o. b. Eastern and mid-western yellow onions ranged generally firm at $5-$6 in consuming markets. California stock followed a similar jobbing range, although Australian Browns ranged 25 to 50 cents above yellow stock in some markets.

Rhubarb.

While our local market (Ohio) is probably one of the best rhubarb centers in this country, for many years this crop has been overdone, prices have ruled low, and in general, we looked upon this crop in disfavor. Added to this has come the scarcity of sugar at times, which has also a depressing influence. Right when these conditions were at their worst, we bought a piece of land which had heavy plantings cf rhubarb, part of which were as old as 20 years. At first, we were inclined to tear up and destroy all the rhubarb, but the scarcity of labor prevented this. Presently, new forces came into operation—scarcity of apples and berries. To such an extent did the shortage of berries operate last season that long after the normal season for rhubarb had closed, demand was active and prices the highest for the season. But this was not all—prohibition put a new demand into action—rhubarb for home wine making. All fall, we were actually bothered by persons wishing to buy large quantities of rhubarb for this purpose. On top of all, we had commercial canners bid on the entire crop in carload lots. This will show what enormous changes occur in a few years. Instead of tearing up our holdings, we are replanting on a large scale.

For forcing in winter, the roots should be dug just before the ground freezes hard, and they should be allowed to freeze either in the field or in storage before forcing to mature them earlier. There are about three places used for this purpose—the manure-heated hotbed, the furnace-heated cellar, and the under-bench room in greenhouses. Darkness is absolutely necessary, as in full light, leaves are produced instead of stems. Fifty to 60° is the proper temperature, and the earlier the forcing is attempted the warmer the requirements. The roots should be packed closely, and all cracks filled with soil. Moisture is an essential. The heavy, succulent stalks draw heavily on moisture and watering is necessary under benches and in cellars with artificial heat. In hot-beds, this moisture is generally present. After forcing, the roots are exhausted and worthless. To renew patches, young divisions are used, and planted 3x3½ inches and given cultivation one year. After that, an annual mulch of cow manure is better. The crop can be pulled the second year for market and at four or five years used for forcing. Where forcing alone is the object, they can be planted closer and removed every second year. Rhubarb is the easiest crop to grow and will succeed anywhere where plant food and sunlight exist and drainage is ample.

MARKETMAN.

Tomatoes Need Fertilizer.

A number of fertilizer tests carried out co-operatively between tomato growers and the horticultural department of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture at Columbia, have given indications that the tomato crop repays well for the use of commercial fertilizer. Thousands of acres of tomatoes are grown for the canning factories in Missouri, but yields have been too small, generally speaking. The yield of canning tomatoes can be greatly increased so that the crop will be far more profitable to the grower, by the use of moderate quantities of commercial fertilizers. J. W. Pierce, of Howell county, reports an average yield of only 0.8 pounds of fruit per plant on an unfertilized plot, while an adjoining plot receiving 250 pounds of a complete fertilizer produced 3.2 pounds per plant, an increase of 400 per cent. Nitrate of soda alone, and potash alone, showed little benefit to tomatoes, while acid phosphate alone, showed a very marked increase. Other tests located in the Ozark section show the same general results. One of the good results from fertilizing tomatoes, is the earlier maturing of the fruit, a difference of three to four weeks being observed in many cases. Another interesting point, observed on the farm of H. H. McElhaney near Springfield, is that tomato plants respond better to fertilizer if it is applied and worked into the row a week or 10 days before the plants are set.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

SAVANNAH, GA.—The county tree planting commission will set out 500 shade and ornamental trees along the public highways in this vicinity this spring.

SONOMA county, California, has at present approximately 24,000 acres of prune orchards and there are thousands of acres suitable and available for prospective plantings.

CALIFORNIA nurserymen have subscribed $100,000 to a fund for establishing a state co-operative nursery. William T. Kirkman, of Fresno, sponsored the movement.

SPOKANE, WASH.—At a recent conference of fruit growers of the northwest in this city, it was decided to adopt uniform standards of apple grading for the states of Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Montana.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—Prizes to the amount of $600 are offered as premiums at the annual apple show of the students of the horticultural department of Purdue University to be held January 12-16.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The Nurserymen's Bud Selection Association of California has been capitalized at $150,000 and will have for its object the improvement of fruit trees of the state. Among the directors are George C. Roeding and W. T. Kirkman, Jr., Fresno; J. S. Armstrong, San Diego; J. E. Bergthold, Newcastle; Max J. Crow, Gilroy, and H. A. Hyde, Watsonville.

Apple Blotch Control.

That apple blotch, a serious fruit disease in Ohio, may be prevented from destroying the fruit of apple trees was brought out in control demonstrations this year in Clermont, Scioto, Lawrence, Hamilton, and Warren counties. Authorities at the Ohio experiment station who have been watching the work believe that spraying with Bordeaux mixture will effect a control, but as yet complete demonstration had not been secured.

The fruit from trees where these demonstrations were held was 90 per cent free from the disease, and the remainder marketable on sprayed trees. On unsprayed blotch trees, 90 per cent of the fruit was blotched so badly that it was unmarketable.

The system of spraying consisted in applying Bordeaux mixture two, four, six, eight and 10 weeks, respectively, after the petals fall.

The Smith-Cider variety, which is regarded by experiment station authorities to be the least resistant of apples against blotch was rather effectively controlled this year, the sprayed trees yielding 13 bushels of fruit, worth $2.50 a bushel, while the unsprayed tree yielded only two bushels worth $1 a bushel.

Christmas Trees in 1919.

An oversupply of Christmas trees in New York had the effect of bringing down the price to as low as 35 cents as compared with last year's figures of $2 each. Last season's high prices inflamed the imagination of the speculators in the sentiment of the holiday season, but competition and the oversupply "punctured their balloon."

In Chicago, the market was swamped, and 70,000 of the Christmas evergreens were given away to children by the commission merchants, rather than throw them on the city dumping grounds.

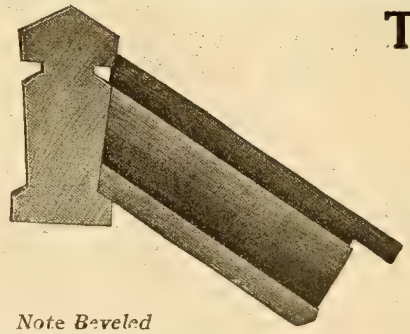
The Answer is—

BUY NOW!

Shrewd business men who have analyzed fundamental conditions and know America's resources are placing orders well ahead.

There is unprecedented prosperity. Prices are increasing. Supplies of greenhouse material are becoming more and more limited. There can be but one answer—BUY NOW.



Note Beveled Shoulder on Ridge.

Notice the beveled shoulder on which the roof bar rests at the ridge. Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouses do not depend on nails alone. They are stronger where strength is needed. Bars are easily brought to proper position—no time wasted in getting them to correct height. The shoulder at the ridge takes care of his automatically.

They are simple and accurate—easily erected. Thus the life of your house is lengthened and the cost of erection lowered.

Catalogs on request.

Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouses

give you the very highest grade material and modern design at the lowest cost for erection. They are practical, simple, efficient and moderate priced.

Designed especially for the commercial grower. Made of selected Louisiana Red Gulf Cypress, cut to exact measure, with complete plans so easy to follow that any carpenter can set them up perfectly.

Also Callahan Duo-Glazed Sash for your hotbeds, the sash that means safety for your plants.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Lilies.

The lilies for Easter should be brought into warm temperature right after the first of the year. A house of 60° at night should bring them into perfect condition for Easter when it occurs at the time it does this year. Those that are in 4-inch pots should be potted in 6-inch, and we have found the best way to do this was to first place a crock in the bottom of the pot and cover with about an inch of soil, then place the 4-inch plant on this, filling in around the stem above the old ball. The lily always throws out roots at the base of the stem when the buds form, and if potted in this manner these roots will be in soil and materially aid the plant in perfecting the bloom. With these roots covered with soil the plant also makes a much better appearance. The soil in which they are potted should be a rich compost of about the same composition as is used in rose culture, and the plant should be firmly potted and well watered and placed in a good light location where the plants will not get drawn. A plant 18 to 24 inches high when in bloom with the foliage thickly studded along the stem, is the one most desired at Easter. Keep the aphis down all the time by constant fumigation. These little insects are the worst plague to the lily grower, for if they once get established on lilies they are very difficult to dislodge, so it is much better to give the plants a fumigation every week and thus guard against them than to wait until their presence is manifest and try to kill them. This is one of the most pronounced cases where "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Fuchsias.

It is now a good time to start the old stock plants of fuchsias, for there is plenty of room in the propagating bench and it is the early struck cuttings that make the fine plants for vases and boxes, and if cuttings are taken in spring they immediately produce a flower and it is difficult to get a good growth, the plant often remaining short with a stunted appearance yet bearing flowers. If the old plants have been thoroughly ripened, shake the soil off and pot in a good new loam, cut back the wood and place them in a warm house and syringe plentifully. The young growths will shortly appear and should be made into cuttings as soon as they have attained a length of an inch and a half or two inches. As soon as rooted pot in 2-inch pots and give the young stock a warm temperature. When growth commences the top can be taken off and another cutting made, and the plants shifted to 3-inch pots. Another stopping will be necessary in late winter to make nice, bushy plants that will be full of bloom in early spring. Keep them clean from mealy bug by constant spraying.

Rambler Roses.

Of all the exhibits made at the flower shows in the east a few years ago, the rambler roses attracted the most attention. The varieties of these beautiful plants have increased rapidly and they can now be had in all the shades of red and pink and also white. The single varieties have also been greatly improved and many of these make most beautiful plants. Every grower should have a few of these for Easter, and even if they do not sell, they can be grown on for next year when a finer and larger plant will be had and the wood grown this year can be propagated, and if planted outside, will make nice plants. Plants grown in the field and lifted this fall will have to be started the first of the year to have them in bloom for Easter; pot-grown plants can be started two weeks later. They should be firmly potted in good rose soil, and placed in a cool house, one not running higher than 45° at night, and syringed often to soften the wood. Before the eyes start into growth the plants should be tied out into the shape they are to be grown. These plants can by a little ingenuity and care be trained into any shape desired. Many fancy as well as grotesque forms are now seen every year. To the inexperienced the round spreading plant should be the first attempted. Five or six stakes at the edge of the pot with the stems wound around and two or three arching over the center is the simplest form. Experienced growers have them in the shape of umbrellas, large balls, ships, and any form they desire. When the growths have got well started the plants should be moved into a temperature of 55° at night, and the syringing on bright days should be kept up to prevent insects from getting a foothold. By the middle of March the flowers should begin to show color and if they do not a little warmer temperature will be required to have them well in bloom for the first week in April. A regular rose temperature of 60° at night will be necessary, but the flowers are not of as good color nor do they last as well if they are unduly forced. A fine assortment of these includes Crimson Rambler, Philadelphia Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, White Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Lady Gay, Hiawatha and American Pillar, and in the baby ramblers, Crimson Baby, Jessie, Phyllis and Orleans.

Geraniums.

After the holiday trade there will be room enough to space out the geraniums and other bedding stock. The cuttings that were placed in flats, and the young stock in 2-inch pots, should be shifted to the 3-inch size and spaced on the benches so that a good growth is encouraged. As soon as well established in these pots the top can be cut off and another cutting obtained. All the young stock possible should be taken from the plants selected in the fall for propagating purposes, for all the cuttings from which it is expected to produce good sized plants should be in the propagating bench by February 1. Any rooted after March 1 will make small plants for bedding purposes. The best stock for late May and early June planting should be in 4-inch pots by April, that they may be well enough established by the middle of May to begin to flower, and should have at that time three or four good branches so that a succession of bloom is assured.

RACINE, WIS.—According to B. Bruz, prices this year showed an increase of from 25 to 50 per cent with double the volume of Christmas business compared with that of 1918. In cut flowers, roses, carnations, violets and bulbous stock were plentiful and of usual good quality. Paper Whites and roses took the lead and there was an increased call for both flowering and foliage plants. Wreaths could not be made fast enough to supply the demand, especially in boxwood and magnolia.

HARRISBURG, PA.—With prices 100 per cent higher than last year the volume of 1919 Christmas sales according to Charles L. Schmidt was about the same in money value. Considering the high prices prevailing the cut of flowers was ample to meet all requirements with quality much better than usual. There was a substantial increase in the call for flowering plants. Buying began early and there were few last-minute calls.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The midwinter season is now on with its cold and snowy bluster, the extremes of which have to be looked out for to insure the safe delivery of plants and cut flowers, from store to destination. The bottom of the cars should have at least a half inch of newspapers, held down by a well fitting piece of linoleum. It is possible to heat the car from the exhaust, but the stove burning artificial coal, is still the standard method.

In all the large cities, this is the time of public or semi-public social affairs, such as balls, dances, dinners and other functions. The largest of these are best handled by those who make a specialty of Society of American Florists' "Say it With Flowers" Campaign.

St. Valentine's Day Paster Stamp

of this class of work, and who in time accumulate the accessories that give them a great advantage. While aside from large decorating, nearly all branches are open to those who understand the business and are capable, yet there are lines which can be given especial attention and made more profitable, as for instance, flowers for funerals, of which work, everybody wants all they can get. The man or firm who features this work, can make it more profitable by working into a steady run or demand. This is possible in a number of ways, for instance, interesting and working with undertakers on a commission basis, or issuing a design book to be placed in the hands of agents in small towns within a radius of 50 miles, who also are allowed a commission.

Keep on the lookout for funerals of public officials, firemen or policemen, also heads of departments in stores, factories and other industrial plants. In all of these, there are likely to be collections taken up for large pieces to be sent in the name of associates or employes. This very good business can be secured in a number of ways that will suggest themselves to the wideawake manager. The daily papers give the list of deaths, and often, obituary notices. To look this work up, is perfectly legitimate, as it has nothing to do with the family of the deceased. "Crepe pulling" is, of course, under the ban of any legitimate self-respecting florist, yet this means of getting business is employed by not a few, generally without stores, in every large city. Another plan worked with considerable success is a miniature booklet, illustrated with a few standard designs, all of which are priced on a sliding scale. This is mailed to family selections, as taken from each day's new death list.

Some make a specialty of corsage bouquets, and work up quite a trade by always having a few made-up in stock, and frequently featured in their windows.

A drawing card is to handle a certain variety of rose at a price that, while it looks low, shows a good profit. If kept constantly displayed, a good trade will be worked up, and draw people to the store who will buy other things. Sweet peas are another flower that will soon be more plentiful and can be featured to advantage. There are a number of ways in which they can be made attractive and still offered at a popular price.

Making a specialty of filling fern dishes is a great factor in drawing new trade. There may seem to be little money in this work of itself, but if satisfaction is given, it is almost sure to lead to other and more profitable business.

Primula malacoides and Townsendii will soon be well in flower, and are two of the best of the flowering plants at this season. Specimens in four-inch pots carry large masses of bloom which are useful in table decorations and plant baskets, or several together in pans to make larger plants. They are popular with the public, and sell at a good profit.

The new valentine stamps or stickers, 1½x2 inches, are the best thing of the kind yet sent out for the trade. At $3 per 1,000, they are wonderfully cheap publicity, which if universally used by florists all over the country on letters and packages, should be of great assistance in working up St. Valentine's day business. The poster, 14x21, an enlargement of the stamp, is a beauty. Displayed in the window, on the glass of the store door, or on the panels of the car, it will attract the attention of all who see it. Briefly, it is a large red heart on a black ground, printed on a green sheet. A winged cupid is standing to one side, just finishing in white script, the slogan, "Say it With Flowers." Below in black letters on the heart is printed, "Valentine's Day, Feb. 14th," and on the bottom of the sheet, at one corner, the words, "You can send flowers by wire." A paint pot and a bow and arrow on the ground finish the picture. The cost is 25 cents each. Send the order and money for a supply of these to John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York, and get them working. They are sure to make a hit with your customers.

St. Valentine's Day Paster Stamp.

The promotion bureau of the national publicity campaign has prepared the gummed paster stamp, 1½x2 inches, reproduced in the accompanying illustration. The heart is in red, on a black background, with an outer background in green. Cupid, of course, is in flesh color. The stamps are offered at low prices, on orders sent to Secretary Young, 1170 Broadway, New York.

Selling Flowers Successfully.

A noted and successful retailer declares the way to sell flowers is to sell them. By that he meant that a man whose business it is to sell flowers, should be on the job all the time, and see to it that every avenue through which trade could be brought to the store, was wide open, with nothing detrimental to obstruct or hinder their sale.

A certain amount of trade comes to everyone in business, those who are progressive and enterprising, and others different and indifferent, the difference being that the wide-awake, up-to-date shop, attracts those who know flowers, and go where they are to be found in quantity and assortment and displayed to the best advantage. There is an atmosphere, if you like, that says, "We know how," a something about various plants and flowers, and their arrangement, the pleasant and courteous manner of the clerks, all of which gives confidence and makes the customer a friend of the house. The different kind of store that is a flower shop only in name, in which, prospective customers are told, in excusing their meagre stock, that "we just sold the last dozen we had, but expect more every minute;" is far too common. The interior generally presents an air of neglect. Passe plants are seen standing about or pushed back in a corner. There are perhaps a few salable flowering plants, but they probably stand on the floor where the grower left them, with no attempt at arrangement or featuring by covering the pots with paper or other decoration. The shelves contain a lot of shopworn baskets and other goods, no longer salable, but kept around, as they may "come in handy some day." There is no attempt to sell flowers in shops run in such a slip-shod manner. What business they get has to be forced on them, and it is a wonder how they manage to make even a bare living.

The stock that is handled by the florist, the plants and the cut flowers, are, of themselves, so beautiful that they should have surroundings in keeping, not necessarily expensive, but always bright, clean and inviting. Having a stock of good flowers on hand, while a step in advance, is not all that is necessary. They must be sold. Flowers are very perishable, and should be moved at once to give the customers the benefit of their longest life. Attractive as they are, artistic arrangement with the aid of the up-to-date accessories, flower vases, bowls, baskets and other receptacles, adds to and helps to feature them, causing favorable attention and sale. It is of great assistance in the sale of flowers to show them in some artistic form, so as to give a better idea of their decorative use. A dozen roses in a vase basket of suitable size will, with a little green, make them so much more attractive and noticeable than when standing in a fibre jar in the flower case, that they are soon sold. In short, flowers should be so kept to the front, and featured in every possible way, as to engage the attention of those who are not particularly looking for them, but who are won over and buy, just as they do from men in the street, because they see them, and they look so pretty.

It is this lack of display that has lost hundreds of dollars to the indifferent storekeeper, the man who thinks he is on the job while waiting for customers to come to him. His window displays are generally formal, and sometimes remain almost the same a month at a time, while to attract attention, and bring people into the store, there must be frequent changes, each studied out to feature something seasonable, and for which there should be ready sale.

Truly, the way to sell flowers is to sell them: if not one way, then another, and so on and on, always striving to create interest and demand for which the stock is to be kept always a little in advance.

Bulb Culture in United States.

Dr. Wm. A. Taylor in his report as chief of the bureau of plant industry has the following:

During the year, one-half of our bulb stocks have been removed to the new bulb farm at Bellingham, Wash. Owing to a shortage of labor, the other half was left undug on rented ground. The total excess production for the year was about 350,000 bulbs, or one minimum carload, which supplied the entire quota of the congressional distribution. These stocks proved to be fully up to the standard. The narcissi were especially commented upon as of superior quality. Of the minor lists of stocks not before handled, the Dutch irises, branching tulips, our native camassias, and some of the newer narcissi have done especially well. The propagation of the lily is promising. Many species grow readily in this region by simply drilling the seed in open ground in autumn. Even such a species as Lilium washingtonianum is now promising under practically open-ground conditions, most of the plants not appearing above ground, however, until the second spring.

The preservation of bulbs taken out of beds after flowering has proved to be thoroughly practicable this season. Some 20 or more thousand tulips and narcissi from the department grounds will give 80 per cent of flowering bulbs, besides an average increase of 160 per cent of small bulbs, which are just as good planting stock as can be secured anywhere. One year will bring the 80 per cent of flowering stock to first-class condition and half of the small stock to flowering size. This class of conservation is to be encouraged and no doubt will be practical now that bulbous stocks have doubled in price.

It has been demonstrated that the beautiful Palestine irises can be grown very satisfactorily in the Sacramento valley, and probably in the other interior valleys of California. Our experiments show that a reproduction of three and one-half fold may be expected the first two years after importation; also, what is known as the "Juno" group succeeds well here. In general, these groups, although in some respects the most attractive of the great iris family, have not been considered successful in this country up to this time.

The investigations of Easter lilies conducted at Arlington Farm, near Washington, have revealed a number of things of importance:

(1) Our seedling stocks after two years give a reproduction of bulblets which is ample for all purposes of propagation. This means that once a seedling strain has been developed a stock can be worked up very rapidly by vegetative methods, and these same methods will serve to continue the increase.

(2) Stem bulblets, which form in the axils of the leaves near the surface of the ground, are six to 12 in number under ordinary conditions, and several of them will give one, two, or three flowers the first year and grow to good flowering size with one year's cultivation.

(3) An increased bulblet propagation can be secured by plunging the pots, by hilling up around the plants, or by layering the stems.

(4) Seed dried for two or three months germinates in a shorter time than that which is sown immediately upon its maturity.

(5) Home-grown bulbs three to 6½ inches in circumference average three to five flowers to the stem when forced for Easter.

(6) A few flowers are secured in one year from seed.

(7) Seed sown in July, when carried on in pots, will produce bulbs which can be forced for the second Easter following.

(8) These facts enable growers to produce their own Easter lily bulbs from seed in one year's time, the seedlings being carried in pots. After flowering, the bulbs not disposed of can be carried out of doors south of Philadelphia and will be ready to force again after one year's recuperation.

(9) Stocks thus produced are free from disease.

THE ROSE.

Planning for 1920.

With Christmas near at hand, the rose growers should be "up on their toes." In the eastern states, we find from personal observation and reports, that the rose crop will be rather short, and the timing of the cut for the holidays, (always a matter of guess work) has seemed more like real guess work than in the old Killarney days and there is no such show of blooms at this time as the Killarneys used to produce, so the question arises, are we as well off, growing the less productive varieties than with the Killarneys? Of course, the newer sorts, like Columbia and Premier, up to the present time, are bringing about double the price of Killarneys, but owing to the Killarneys, producing about three flowers to one on the two varieties mentioned above, one might materially say, "Where do we get off?" This is one way of looking at it, and this is not intended for a "knock" to two exceptionally fine roses, and as I stated several months ago in these columns, I firmly believe, when the grower gets the real "hang" of growing Premier and Columbia, these two varieties are going to make things hum. But the Killarney class of roses also has its drawbacks, with the exception of the Double White. Their tendency to go to pieces in warm weather, threw them out of the class of "all the year around" roses, and that is where their successors begin to loom up very auspiciously, for they will (with the proper care) produce fine blooms summer and winter and after keeping a careful account of the sales of the two rose in the discussion, namely Premier and Columbia, I feel assured that at the end of the season there would be few growers that would care to go back to (we might truthfully say) the over-production days of Killarney.

We have heard more than one rose grower say that the Killarney class of roses did more to cheapen the indoor roses than any other family of roses ever introduced, but in our estimation, we think just the opposite, as the superior quality of Killarney, as it was grown in all sections and selling at a most reasonable price, brought out more buyers of roses and created more sales than any othes variety had ever done previous to the introduction of the finest strain of roses ever introduced, the original "Killarney" and her various sports. Personally, I often wondered how we could ever have pulled through some alarmingly tight places, if it had not been for our old tried and true friend. So we naturally from, let us say, sentimental as well as business reasons, regret the supplanting of the most of them, but we feel somewhat consoled by the fact that in the Double White, we still have our old friend on the job, and likely to stay, as the best white of them all so far. But who knows what may happen within the next few years? It would not surprise the writer to see a few beds of Killarney cropping up here and there, we will say fair for the sake of a little more show of color over the top along about this time of the year, yet, who knows?

If you have been on the job, you have the dates on record of the time when you pinched for your Christmas crop for 1919, and this really will help you very much, as it does eliminate some of the guess work, but every now and then there will be a mild autumn, with lots of muggy weather, when, at times, one can hardly run a one pipe coil through the houses without raising the ventilators in order to keep the temperature down around the 60° mark. Who ever saw a rose grower or a florist who has not an alibi: "We would have done this, if it had not been for so and so, this, that and the other," but from a general standpoint, the season of 1919, has been rather peculiar as a growing season, and fortunate is the grower who has his plants in excellent condition at this time, as we have had perhaps as many cloudy days as clear ones, and the real bracing, brilliantly bright, growing days have been unusually scarce, but this is something we cannot help, and that we should not worry over, but look forward cheerfully to the season of 1920 and prepare to propagate the stock for another season. For the very best of reasons, there will be comparatively llittle grafting done, and that is the scarcity of manetti stocks, good (or bad) English, Irish and French grown. Therefore, the young stock will have to be principally own root plants. This will mean no serious drawback, providing, of course the wood is selected carefully, and the cuttings are properly made, and cared for afterward. In this, we mean that two eyes should be used in working up the cuttings, and sometimes three, but always one at the base of the cutting. As stated many times before, there is no particular virtue in chopping off all the foliage, as the cuttings can be just as easily rooted with every end leaf intact, if one does not crowd them in the cutting bed, and the trimming process need be resorted to only to save space, as of course, the trimmed cuttings take up much less room.

If one has orders for a lot of young stock, and there is any doubt about getting up the quantity, we would suggest getting started at once, and work up the stock gradually. Do not hit the plants too hard at this time, as the growths are slower coming back at this season than during any other period. So do not take too many at one time, If growing stock for home planting, we have always preferred the cuttings rooted in February. The very best of wood can be had at that time, and cutting them then will not retard the plants but instead, will often benefit them. This also saves handling an extra shift, and one can perhaps utilize the space the early cutting would require to good advantage till later.

As to the early stock cuttings being any better and stronger than those propagated, say February 20, there is little if any advantage gained on rooting them early. We bear out this statement by the fact that a batch of Columbia, struck or potted off March 25 last, and planted three weeks later than any of the other Columbias, are far in advance of the early struck and planted stock, as to the size of plants, evenness in growth and quality of blooms, yet, all the wood selected for cuttings was flowering wood and of the same uniformity. Of course, there might have been some little difference in weather conditions following the planting, but not enough difference to lead one to put the most dependence on January progagating. There is one advantage, however, in striking the cuttings fairly early, and that is one can get the bottom heat for the sand bed more uniform about February 1, and I do not advocate March propogating by any means, but merely state the instance above for what it stands for as a comparison, but to repeat, February, starting at the first of the month, is an ideal time as a rule to take the wood and have it in a condition that makes good strikes a possibility, without a serious setback to the plants. We also suggest using blooming wood, believing that there is more to be gained in using the shorter blooming growths for cuttings than to sell the flowers, and blind wood in our estimation, unless unusually strong, is very poor wood to use.

Roses Infested by White Worms.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly tell me the name of the small white worm which is causing trouble among my rose plants, making punctures and deposits of eggs as shown by the sample twig herewith? What are the best methods to employ to get rid of these pests?

Tennessee. P. S. W.

We have examined the specimen, in question, and find no small white worm. Instead, we find injuries, and eggs deposited in the woody portion of the plant beneath the injuries. These injuries and eggs may be those of either tree hoppers (membracidae) or tree crickets (gryllidae), and in order to determine which it is, it will be necessary for us to have more material for the purpose of rearing the insects. As for the control of an insect of this type, we would suggest cutting out and burning the shoots that show the injury.

CHRYSANTHEMUM HAMBURG LATE PINK.

FIRST ANNUAL BANQUET OF SALESMEN OF THE McCALLUM CO., PITTSBURGH, PA., DECEMBER 29.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The campaign for 1920 opens under very auspicious conditions. The florists' industry is in most satisfactory shape, and complaints as to poor business are rare, indeed. The general demand for flowers is running a close race with supply. Our wholesale markets are discharging their heavy loads without signs of gluts in any direction. The horizon of business is clear, and prices were never so remunerative. These conditions have, in the main, prevailed since the opening of the fall season.

Can anyone question that our publicity campaign has not had a great deal to do with this? The public think of flowers now as they never did before. Sentiment, which should be a large factor in creating a demand for our products, has been aroused to a remarkable extent, and gifts of flowers are becoming of common occurrence where not long ago they were altogether too rare. The meaning of our slogan is well understood, and "Say It With Flowers" comes readily to mind at the right time.

The reports covering the Christmas business throughout the country, without exception, describe the volume as unusually large, and most of it record-breaking in character—and this in spite of, perhaps, the highest prices ever experienced by the public. In many localities it was impossible to obtain sufficient stock to meet the demand. A western florist, in writing our promotion bureau, intimated that he was prepared to increase his contribution to the publicity fund. The demand for flowers was very great, he said, and due, of course, to the campaign.

Our efforts certainly have been rewarded with success, in measure far greater than could have been anticipated. The predictions of our large band of optimists have been entirely fulfilled, and we are going into the year just opened to us with the feeling of satisfaction that we are not experimenting, we are not taking chances, for we know absolutely that the money we have expended is returning to us with the proverbial hundredfold increase, and much more.

Just think this over, Mr. Non-subscriber, and ask yourself what you have done to deserve your share in this benefit. Do not think we are scolding, but we do want you to think that we need your support to carry along our campaign. Remember, that we have now not only to keep alive the interest already created, but to extend that interest. The more we can spread our propaganda, the greater the benefit to enjoy.

Our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," is worthy of all we can lavish upon it. It cannot be over-popularized—it would mean loss to us as an industry did we not popularize it enough. Help us to keep our publicity going—going all the time, not spasmodically. And do your best to assist the movement personally, in your own vicinity, where you can easily link up with our campaign announcements to your personal advantage. Drop us a line and we will tell you how.

At the present time our auditors are going over our finances; therefore, for a week or two we are not able to make a statement as to what our resources will be for the season extending beyond St. Valentine's day. Every subscriber to the fund, however, will, in a few days, receive a notification as to the payment of his 1920 contribution so nobly pledged beforehand. For the same reason we are unable, at this time, to announce the exact amount pledged for the 1920 campaign, but particulars in full will be published in the next issue of this paper.

With the assistance our work deserves, we can make the New Year a banner one for the trade.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

CAMDEN, N. J.—James M. Thoirs reports a 30 per cent increase in Christmas sales, with prices advanced 15 per cent over those of 1918. The supply of cut flowers was limited, with Paper Whites the only bulbous offering. Quality in all lines was of better grade than usual. There was no increase noticeable in the call for any particular flower, but plants showed a gain in favor.

Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late Pink.

As a welcome addition to the cut flower supply in Buffalo, N. Y., and vicinity during December, Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late Pink, shown in the accompanying illustration, occupied a prominent position. Chrysanthemums in that territory were about two weeks earlier than usual, the above variety included, with a certain number available for Thanksgiving.

C. F. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., with whom it originated, in commenting on it, says: "If you want a chrysanthemum for early or midseason, do not touch it, but grown late, so that it will flower during December, it will pay. It should be propagated during March and April, and after being rooted, we watch the plants so that they do not receive a set-back. The young stock is placed in 2-inch pots and later transplanted in benches close together, and, if possible, set out by the middle of June in solid beds six inches each way and grown one flower to the plant. Trials have been made with two flowers, but results were not as satisfactory. No crown buds are taken; all are terminals, and the taking of these begins October 1 and later, which brings the crop during December. Houses are run cool as soon as weather permits, and there is little danger in having the temperature go to 42 degrees, as the petals never dampen off, and the flowers also show better keeping qualities.

"Hamburg Late Pink likes lots of water during the summer, but objects to "wet feet" when fall comes. The most important things to watch are: Not to let the plants get hard; not to let them get too dry during summer, not to let them get too wet in fall and winter; not to take an early bud.

"A sport of Hamburg Late White, this variety is an improved late Maud Dean, the petals being narrower and more numerous, and if brought into bloom in December, will produce very few flowers with open centers. With the exception of the past season, cutting started December 1 and was finished by January 15."

Gullett & Sons' New Year Party.

Gullett & Sons, the well known growers of Lincoln, Ill., began the new year in a pleasant way, tendering a masquerade party to their employes, one of the large service houses at the establishment being used for the occasion, the event originally scheduled for New Year's eve, being postponed to the night of January 3. Of the 150 who attended, about one-half were en masque. The evening's entertainment opened with a grand march, which was led by Ernest and Earl Morrow, gorgeously arrayed in minstrel suits, in black face. Having spent several years with some of the best circuses, they carried their parts to perfection. Following a waltz, there was a vaudeville programme of several numbers with Wilbur Gullett in the role of master of ceremonies. Among the talent was Ike B. Oakman, of the plant range, who in a character sketch, impersonate "Erastus Johnson of New Orleans" featuring "A little Bit of Chicken," followed by a clog dance, both of which were well done and heartily enjoyed. A burlesque trombone solo, staged by Don Lucas, of the carnation section, with Ernest Morrow behind the curtain furnishing the "wind," caused surprise among Mr. Lucas' friends who were unaware of his talent until the expose was made, but the act scored a big hit. Mr. Wiedenhoft presented "Dickey Nightingale," a star warbler, who rendered a number of popular selections in good style and showed "budding" genius. It was later proved that "Dickey" was George Duttlinger. "Caruso and His Trained Monkeys," staged under the personal direction of Wilbur Gullett, brought roars of laughter. Mr. Gullett appeared in the role of an Italian organ grinder, assisted by two small boys, Juel White and Dean Plese, cleverly costumed as dancing monkeys, with tambourines. This turn was followed by the Morrow twins with clever impersonations of John Philip Sousa and Signor Creatore in a fanfare. At intervals during the evening, Vincent Jones, a noted tenor, who sang in many of the French and American war camps, contributed a number of selections. Fine music was provided, and dancing was on until midnight. A hot luncheon was served in the packing room. The accompanying illustration shows the happy gathering.

WILKES-BARRE, PA.—A. W. B. Evans reports Christmas prices about the same as in 1918, while business showed a 10 per cent increase. The cut flower quality was good, the supply including a plentiful offering of roses, violets and Paper Whites, while carnations were a short item. The demand for plants was about as in former years. Wreaths, especially in the larger sizes for cemetery decoration, sold exceptionally well.

HOLIDAY TRADE.

Business Shows Substantial Increase.

As stated in our last week's issue, page 1234, reports received from all parts of the country, indicated that the 1919 Christmas sales had set a new business record for that period. Further advices tell of equally gratifying conditions existing in many other cities in the United States and Canada, exceptions being very rare where a substantial increase in volume of business is not recorded, with prices showing a satisfactory increase in keeping with the cost of production and other general expenses. Where publicity was employed such as advertising in local papers, store circulars, etc., results were most satisfactory. From many cities, comes the information that the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," played an important part in the splendid business, and Florists' Telegraph Delivery orders showed a substantial increase over former years. The following condensed reports show general conditions:

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—At the Brownhurst Greenhouses, Christmas trade this year showed an increase of nearly 38 per cent over that of 1918, with a 12 per cent advance in prices. In cut flowers, the supply in general while of good quality, was below requirements. In plants, there were better sales in both flowering and decorative offerings, especially the former. The demand was for higher priced stock and there was the largest demand for wedding flowers and decorations since this firm started business 28 years ago.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—The Pikes Peak Floral Co. recorded a Christmas sales volume about 12 per cent better than for 1918, with prices about as usual. The supply of roses, violets and carnations was limited, while bulbous flowers fared better and about met the call. Quality in general was finer than last year. Basket arrangements and large plants had the preference, and the heavy demand in cut flowers was for roses of fancy grade, such as Russell, Ophelia, American Beauty and Columbia.

BRISTOL, TENN.—P. S. Wise, proprietor of the Fairmont Garden, reports Christmas prices much better than a year ago, resulting in an increase on sales' volume of more than 45 per cent. Roses, carnations and violets were in short supply, and the call for bulbous stock was greater than could be taken care of. Quality was equally as good as a year ago. Flowering plants showed an increase in popularity. Advanced prices were paid without complaint.

DALLAS, TEX.—At the establishment of the Lang Floral & Nursery Co. sales in money value for Christmas, 1919, were one-third more than a year ago, with a sharp advance in prices. The supply of roses, carnations and violets was far from adequate, but quality was very good. Plant stock showed poor form. Many more of these and fancy baskets were sold than in former years. Money was plentiful, and sales depended not so much on what customers desired as what they could get.

SAVANNAH, GA.—According to A. C. Oelschig & Co., Christmas sales for 1919 were greater both in money value and quantity of flowers disposed of and prices much higher than last year. In carnations, violets and roses, many more could have been sold, if available, but an ample supply of bulbous stock moved freely. Roses were of better quality than a year ago. In the plant section there was an increased demand over former years.

PEORIA, ILL.—Twenty per cent better Christmas business than last year with prices advanced in about the same ratio is reported by B. Juerjens. In roses, carnations and violets the supply was only half as plentiful as a year ago with bulbous flowers also below requirements. Low temperatures resulted in much poor stock. Everything sold, however, and due to the shortage in cut stock, plants moved very well.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—J. B. Keller Sons report Christmas business about 30 per cent greater than in 1918 with prices advanced from 25 to 35 per cent. Roses, violets and carnations were in good supply and of excellent quality, but with the exception of Paper Whites, the market was bare of bulbous stock. An increased demand for flowering plants was noticeable.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Clark Bros. report a 20 per cent increase in volume of sales, with prices higher than last year. The cut flower supply, with the exception of chrysanthemums and white carnations, was not equal to the demand, with roses more popular than ever before. Great numbers of flowering plants were disposed of and represented the bulk of the sales.

WICHITA, KAN.—Charles P. Mueller reports 1919 Christmas business about 60 per cent better than last year, with prices much higher than a year ago. Roses, carnations and violets were in short supply and the same was true of bulbous stock. Flowering plants were more popular than ever before. Florists' Telegraph Delivery business showed a great increase.

BANGOR, ME.—Adam Sekenger enjoyed 50 per cent better Christmas business than in 1918, with prices double those of that period. Roses were plentiful and of unusually fine quality, and stock in general was better than usual. The greatest call was for red roses. There was less demand for plants, and anything not in flower met with little favor.

MASQUERADE PARTY OF EMPLOYES OF GULLETT & SONS, LINCOLN, ILL., JANUARY 3, 1920.

New York Federation of Societies.

The Albany Florists' Club has invited the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs to be its guest, January 15, 1920. There will be a short business session of the federation at 3:30 p. m., followed by a lecture by Dr. S. W. Fletcher, of the Pennsylvania State College, on "French Horticulture." A banquet will be followed by informal after-dinner speaking and a general good time. The affiliated societies are asked to send delegates and thus show the Albany horticulturists that their hospitality is appreciated, and incidentally help advance the horticultural interests in New York state. Let us all join in making the federation a live organization. There is much that can be accomplished in New York state through co-operation. We have the largest horticultural interests of any state. Make your slogan "On to Albany, January 15!" The Albany florists will "say their welcome with flowers," and a feed. All delegates should report at the store of F. A. Danker by 1 p. m., Thursday, January 15.

Another meeting of the Federation will be held in Ithaca, Wednesday, February 11. The following programme has been prepared for this meeting:

10 a. m. "Some Disease Problems of Florists' Crops." L. M. Massey.

11 a. m. "The Agricultural College and the Florist." Prof. E. A. White.

12 m. "Winter Flowers of California." Dr. A. C. Beal.

1 p. m. Luncheon to delegates of the federation, followed by business session.

Farmers 'week will be in progress, and the New York State College of Agriculture can assure the visitors that much of interest will be on the programme any day during the week.

LIMITED SUPPLY HOLDS PRICES UP.

Stock of all kinds has been very scarce since Christmas. The demand for New Year's was very good, but owing to the limited supply, prices were up instead of down, as is usually the case after a holiday. Funeral work has increased greatly of late, which also helps to keep the market on the tight side. While the old year went out like a lamb, 1920 was ushered in with zero weather, which dropped to 10 below, January 2. This cold period continued up to, and including, January 5. Prospects are that cut flowers will be scarce for some time to come.

NOTES.

The first 17 days of December constituted the coldest similar period in the history of the local office of the weather bureau that extends back to 1871. Among low temperatures on these days were two below December 3, three below December 13, four below December 9, six below December 17, eight below December 14, and 15, and nine below December 10.

Walter Maas & Co., Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., M. A. McKenney & Co., A. Currie Co., Currie Bros. Co. and Anderton & Seeman, who are all in the vicinity of the wholesale houses, had elaborate window displays and report business as very fine.

Edw. J. Hamme, of Wauwatosa, is in bed nursing internal injuries, caused by an accident while tobogganing, December 26. This is his second serious accident within the past two months.

William Zimmermann and Gimbel Bros., on Grand avenue, went heavy into the plant business, due to the scarcity of cut flowers and it was a case of sold out when the rush was over.

Announcement of the engagement of Carl P. Menger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Menger, retail florists at 536 Twenty-seventh street, to Miss Clara Heiber, was made January 4.

All wholesalers, Holton & Hunkel Co., Gust Rusch & Co., and the C. C. Pollworth Co. found it necessary to cut all shipping orders, as it was impossible to get the stock.

The A. F. Keelner Co., decorators on a large scale, report being swamped with orders for the holidays. It was the best since pre-war times.

Baumgarten, Inc., who located in their new store, at 93 Wisconsin street, only a short time ago, report business way ahead of expectations.

We greatly regret to report that Mrs. Seaman, who has been on the sick list for some time, is very low at this writing.

C. E. Dillmann, who was confined to his home with a severe cold, is again able to be out and around.

GOOD CHRISTMAS SALES AT HIGH PRICES.

Christmas trade this year came true to expectations and stock sold out completely at enormous prices. As early as the Saturday previous the retail stores found themselves short of flowering plants, but with mild weather prevailing, some growers were enabled to make additional shipments on Monday and Tuesday. Azaleas proved strong favorites and quite a number of these were offered at prices ranging from $8 to $15, trimmed. Cyclamens held second place, with poinsettias third in popularity. Boston ferns sold remarkably well. There were a few palms on sale, but prices were too high to be attractive. Basket arrangements sold very well. Solanums were the only plants which were in good supply. Primula obconica was scarce and the same was true of begonias. Cut flowers were plentiful on Wednesday, with roses in the majority, prices ranging from $6 to $50 per dozen. Stock was very good and in good supply. Carnations sold at $4 per dozen. Sweet peas, violets and yellow and white narcissi concluded the cut flower list. The weather was ideal for delivery, streets in good condition and temperature above zero. Prices obtained were double those of last year and profits were better in proportion.

JANUARY TRADE OPENS STRONG.

Business during the past week has been exceptionally active in every way, according to the statements of the down-town florists. New Year's business was much heavier than anticipated, and many of the stores had their stocks entirely cleaned up before the evening arrived. There was a large number of dances, receptions and parties, and many flowers were required for decorative purposes. In fact, it was the best New Year ever experienced by florists in this city, and they were well satisfied with the results. Flowers are quite plentiful, although there is some shortage reported in certain items. Roses are in good supply, and the quality is exceptionally good. They retail from $4 to $12 per dozen. The varieties are principally Russell, Ophelia, Columbia and Sunburst. Sweet peas are plentiful and of fine quality and sell from $1 to $2 per bunch. Carnations are rather scarce, and the better flowers are hard to get. They retail about $3 per dozen. The offerings are principally white and pink varieties. Narcissi are arriving in excellent shape and of good quality. They sell at $2 per dozen. Violets are exceptionally strong and the supply is generally good. Plants are not in such demand as during the holiday period. Florists are united in saying that the prospects for the month of January are exceptionally good.

CHRISTMAS TRADE BEST IN HISTORY.

Christmas trade for 1919 will long be remembered as the best in the history of the business in this city. Due to favorable weather, there was a large supply of cut flowers of nearly every description. There was a much heavier supply than last year. The great surprise was the enormous increase in the plant trade. It is conservatively estimated that the plant business was about 100 per cent greater than last year. There certainly never has been such a supply of pot plants offered and disposed of. This was anticipated by the trade in general, and the stores put in twice as much stock as in former years and disposed of it all. The popular demand was for medium priced stock. There was, however, a big supply of select quality, which, although offered at a higher price, was sold without the slightest difficulty. Cyclamens, begonias and poinsettias were the best selling mediums-priced stock. The poinsettia supply was extra fine. It was much finer than last year, and an enormous quantity was sold. Both pink and red were to be had. Made-up plants were very popular. The demand for boxes of flowering and foliage plants was very strong. Erica melanthera in all sizes were freely offered and sold along with the rest. Azaleas, in pink, white and red, were seen everywhere. This stock cleaned up at fancy figures, ranging from $15 to $20 each. Many of them were planted in rustic baskets and brought a higher figure. All sorts of foliage plants were in excellent demand, and the day after Christmas, found the stores cleaned out completely. While the supply of cut flowers was much heavier than last year, prices ruled about the same. There was a splendid supply of red roses of the very finest quality. They sold out quickly. The demand for Russell was greater than the supply, but fancy prices were realized for all offerings. There was a nice supply of American Beauties. Ophelia, Shawyer, Radiance and Columbia were all in equal favor and brought the best returns. There was a splendid lot of chrysanthemums for so late in the season. Some of the Bonnaffon were as good as a month ago. Appleton shared the honors with the former variety. Helen Frick was the only pink to be had. There was a very strong shipping demand for this stock for some days previous to Christmas, but not withstanding all this, there was enough to go around. Very few white sorts were on the market. The supply of carnations improved greatly before Christmas and some very good stock found a ready market. There was a great shortage of good reds. Whatever stock was obtainable brought $8.00 per 100 at wholesale. Colored stock sold at from $5 to $6. There were enough violets to meet all requirements, thanks to favorable weather. There was no noticeable increase in the prices. A great quantity was shipped out of the city daily during the week before Christmas. Cut poinsettias were not in very great supply, the growers preferring to sell their pot stock rather than cut it. The first freesias of the season came in, and were a welcome addition to the list. They sold out in a hurry at good figures. Paper Whites were to be had, but the supply was not abundant. Cattleyas came in freely for several days before Christmas, and met with instant demand from the public. Cypripediums were largely featured and proved popular. Gardenias were in good supply and commanded good prices. There was a limited amount of sweet peas to be had, but not nearly enough for the demand. Probably more greens were used for decorative purposes this season than any other. There were more California red berries than the market could readily absorb, and quite a quantity arrived too late for any use. More English holly was seen this year than ever before. Large shipments came in from British Columbia. This stock was peddled at every street corner. The stores report only a small demand, owing to the large supply on the market. A limited amount of holly in tubs found a ready sale. The growers certainly did their share this Christmas in producing such a splendid lot of flowering plants. The weather was all that could be wished for, and deliveries, as a rule, were prompt.

NOTES.

The first Christmas trade experienced at the store of J. A. Axell was much beyond his expectations. For many days previous to Christmas his force was busy shipping violets, chrysanthemums, roses and asparagus. His growers were in with heavy cuts of roses of excellent quality. He was particularly fortunate in having a large supply of red roses, for which high prices were obtained.

The high grade of plants and flowers that the firm of Podesta & Baldocchi handled was never so beautifully arranged, as it was for the Christmas trade. Everything they had to offer was sold out completely on Christmas day. They featured many beautiful specimen azaleas, ericas, cattleyas and other stock, all of which found a ready market.

The Art Floral Company had three floors full of decorative and flowering plants for Christmas. Manager Matraia estimates the increase in the plant trade this year at fully 100 per cent, or practically double that of last year. He had a large force of extra salesmen and is much pleased.

Domoto Bros., at Oakland, had over 1,800 azaleas in full bloom for the holiday trade. It was the finest lot ever handled in this market and brought fancy prices. Their poinsettias and begonias were also of a high grade, and they had had no difficulty in disposing of the entire stock.

Frank R. Mills, of Palo Alto, says business was equal to other years in his city. He had a large suply of flowering plants of every description. His carnation houses were in full crop, and he shipped large quantities of this flower every day. He has a nice cut of Cattleya labiata at present.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co., according to Frank Pelicano, had the largest business in the firm's history. Double the amount of plants were carried and sold than was the case last year. The demand for the higher priced stock was strong at this store, which has a very exclusive clientele.

The E. W. McLellan Company had a good supply of American Beauty and Russell roses from both their ranges of glass. Their shipping business is reported as being heavier than in former years. They also handled large quantities of violets and chrysanthemums.

George Angus, one of the best-known gardeners in California, has been elected president of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society. Mr. Angus is a plant grower of much ability, and is always well up among the prize-winners at the society's exhibitions every year.

Eric James, the Elmhurst plant grower, is being congratulated by the trade on the quality of the stock he produced for the holidays. It was no doubt as fine as was ever handled by this market. His shipping trade was beyond expectations.

At the Chas C. Navlet store, on Market street, a fine trade was admirably handled. The demand for flowering plants was greater than they expected. They report business at their San Jose, Calif., store to be far ahead of any other year.

Sidney Pay, head gardener at the Grant estate, at Burlingame, has returned from a vacation spent in Australia. He was accompanied by his wife ,and both report having a splendid trip.

The United Flower & Supply Co. did a large retail plant business, and deliveries were being made nearly all day. Christmas business was ahead of expectations with them.

SHORT SUPPLY ADVANCES PRICES.

What is known in this section as ideal tourist weather prevails, with cold, crisp nights and clear, warm days. The large amount of moisture in the ground, however, as the result of recent rains, has retarded outdoor growth of roses and in some cases killed geraniums. Carnations appear to be the best outdoor stock available at present, but prices are a trifle high, and the same applies to greenhouse offerings. Consequently sales are not as good as usual. Outdoor roses are scarce and pot plants are not as plentiful as in former years, although the quality is good and they find ready buyers.

NOTES.

E. C. Amling, of Chicago, has bought 33 acres of ground on Santa Monica boulevard in Sawtelle, right across the city limits of Santa Monica. The present plan is to build a range of rose houses, covering about five acres, and 10 acres of lath houses for growing greens. Work will be started immediately and pushed as fast as material and help can be secured. Mr. Amling has also incorporated the E. C. Amling Co. of Los Angeles, a $50,000 corporation, to wholesale or retail cut flowers, plants, seeds, bulbs, supplies, etc. This move was decided upon last sping.

When one thinks of roses, it seems to call to mind Wright's Flower Shop, at which establishment a splendid supply in variety is offered to its customers throughout the year. Mr. Wright recently purchased a large stock of orchids, another flower for which his store is noted.

A visit to the establishment of the Los Angeles Floral Co. proves that this firm's slogan, "The House of Quality and Service," is well chosen. Manager Richards and his force are kept busy at all times.

Geo. J. Hall & Co., considering the short time they have been in business, have been doing a gratifying volume of trade. Their store was well prepared for the holiday demand.

With deep regret, we learn of the death of the mother of Charles Mattin, which occurred December 17, in her seventieth year.

Walter Armacost & Co. had a varied stock of baskets, which they displayed to excellent advantage, for the holiday trade.

BUSINESS SHOWS SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE.

The holiday business in this section is generally reported as being from 25 to 50 per cent larger than last year, and with many, was the best ever experienced. There could have been considerable more business done had there been stock of the cheaper grades, but the method of growing for the Christmas trade usually produces flowers which all grade high, so that many customers were lost who were looking for medium or shorter grades. American Beauties were not to be had, and it goes against the grain to have to refuse an order for 25 dozen at $35 per dozen, which was our experience with a customer. Premier. Russell and Columbia were the varieties that brought the higher prices, and they were fine and gave general satisfaction. Carnations were not as plentiful as in other seasons and the quality was somewhat inferior, but at the high figures at which they were sold, it lessened the demand considerably, so that the scarcity was not as noticeable as it would have been otherwise. The great help to the storemen was the splendid plants of azalea which were to be had in quantity. It is to these that a large part of the increased sales can be accounted for, and which helped considerably in giving the stores their holiday attire. Cyclamens and poinsettias were also prominent in the different arrangements, and many good combination baskets were noticed. Primulas, begonias, solanums and ferns and foliage plants for the cheaper baskets were plentiful, so the shortage on cut flowers was not so keenly felt. December 24, the temperature dropped to near the zero mark, which made the delivery of stock difficult, but with the extra precaution used, there were very few complaints from frozen stock. Since Christmas the trade has kept up well. Stock has shortened up, and most lines are still selling at the holiday quotations, so that the bulbous stock, which is starting to be more plentiful, is welcomed.

GOOD SUPPLY AT STEADY PRICES.

Business conditions are now about normal, with stock more plentiful and little change in prices. Roses are arriving in good numbers and the quality is fine. Carnations are holding high at $12, with Laddie bringing $20 per 100. There is a good strain of freesia at $8 per 100. Among other offerings are French Golden Spurs, pans of hyacinths, marguerites, and calendulas. Orchids bring $12 and $18 per dozen. Gardenias are seen in large numbers and sell easily at $6 per dozen.

NOTES.

Alfred E. Walsh, of the flower market, was tendered a farewell dinner by his many friends in the trade January 1, upon his departure for Denver, Colo., where he will enter a new field.

William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, lost his crop of sweet peas New Year's morning when coal piled against the woodwork of the house caught fire.

B. A. Snyder & Co. report a good New Year's trade with heavy demand for orchids, roses and sweet peas.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report the closing of one of the firm's most successful years.

Thomas Roland is now cutting heavily on roses at his Revere range.

S. K. G.

Rochester, N. Y.

GOOD DEMAND BUT SUPPLY LIMITED.

The holiday business was excellent, but might have been much better had there been a more adequate supply and prices had been more liberal. Due to the shortage of coal and extremely cold weather the crops, both of cut flowers and plants, did not mature as expected. Poinsettias sold well, although the quality was nothing extra. Begonias, primroses, heathers, peppers and solanums also found ready buyers. All decorative material, such as laurel, pine and arbor vitæ moved well, as did wreaths, red bells, frieze, etc.

NOTES.

At George B. Hart's commission house, business was somewhat greater than last year, and had prices been more moderate a still better showing would have resulted.

H. E. Wilson reports a splendid business and a practical cleanup of his holiday stock. His winter crop of Dutch hyacinths has now commenced to come in.

J. B. Keller Sons arranged excellent displays in both show windows.

BUSINESS EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS.

Business for both Christmas and New Years was unusually good, and much better than anticipated, the better grades of stock bringing high prices and quality in demand. Cut stock was none too plentiful and the supply ran short in most cases, especially violets and sweet peas for corsage work. Roses in all leading varieties were exceptionally fine and brought from 18 to 60 cents wholesale. Carnations were in shorter supply than ever before at the holiday season, owing to the long period of cloudy weather. Pot plants were never finer and brought good returns. Made-up baskets and plant arrangements went well. Strawflowers made up in many ways and cemetery wreaths were popular.

NOTES.

At Samuel Murray's attractive shop, it would have been impossible to handle a greater volume of business, despite every facility for up-to-date service. Large plants and basket arrangements were immensely popular and their delivery was easily accomplished. He is more than pleased with the large business done.

Arthur Newell, at his up-to-date establishment, had a very heavy call for fine stock and every detail moved with precision that left no chance for complaint. His offerings met with quick and remunerative sales. Arrangements of strawflowers, one of his leaders, were especially popular and moved at sight.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. had their greatest Christmas business with a large supply of cut flowers and plants to care for the demand. Quality stock cleaned up first. The line of wreaths, never more attractive, sold out completely.

The Pinehurst Gardens Co. received large shipments of cut and pot stock from the range at Pleasant Hill, all of which was easily disposed of. Their first real holiday trade was most gratifying.

W. J. Barnes had the best holiday trade in his career, both in cut flowers and plants, while wreaths went exceptionally well. Palms were also on the move and brought good returns.

Bob McGrail reports the largest business he ever had with the principal call for quality stock. Wreaths were a strong factor in the demand.

Miss J. E. Murray is glad of a breathing spell after the rush. Business at her establishment was unusually good.

Miss Lou Boggess reports she had all she could handle and had to turn away orders, but is glad the rush is over.

H. Kusik & Co. sold out completely each day and could have moved much more stock had it been available.

T. J. Noll & Co. report the best holiday business, both local and out-of-town, they ever experienced.

Ed. Humfeld did a wonderful business at his new store, with a good gain over previous years.

The Alpha Floral Co. had fine sales in every line, with total business much better than last year.

August Luther had a fine trade, especially in plants. E. J. B.

PLANTS LED HOLIDAY DEMAND.

On the whole, the holiday market was favorable to a large business with the possible exception of roses which were scarcer than usual, and of rather poor quality. Most of the florists, however, had put in a large stock of plants, and where cut flowers could not be had, it was easy to divert the demand to plants. Such favorite Christmas plants as the cyclamen and the poinsettia were quite plentiful, of excellent quality and enjoyed a brisk sale. All offerings were higher priced than usual. Cyclamens brought from $1 to $10 and poinsettias were retailed for $1 per bloom. Combination baskets and hampers of mixed plants sold well. The call for made-up baskets of artificial materials such as ruscus and boxwood, of which some handsome examples were seen, was about normal. There was a good sale for wreaths and the variety of these on display was greater than usual. Cut flowers did not sell quite as well as plants this year and the supply was hardly equal to the demand. Violets and narcissi were plentiful. There was little demand for orchids at $5 per bloom. Incoming telegraph orders were numerous, but the outgoing ones were not as large as on other occasions. Funeral work was quite heavy during the week. The business for New Year's was lighter than usual, but there were many wedding orders in that week.

NOTES.

Schramm Bros., who were closed a year ago, certainly reaped a harvest this season. The day before Christmas was the largest in sales ever enjoyed by this firm. They made a bid for a great business by extensive advertising, both in the newspapers and by mail. They had a splendid array of cyclamens and poinsettias, for which there was a great call. Cut flowers were scarce, but most of the customers bought plants instead.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman, though handicapped somewhat by the loss of her decorator, Charles Bailiff, who resigned his position shortly before Christmas, reports that she broke all records. There was a heavy call for corsages at her store and a good demand for plants.

Growers cleaned out completely at good prices and among other retailers interviewed who report a fine trade were S. N. Peck, Metz & Bateman, Feniger, Scottwood Greenhouse, Mrs. Suder, Helen Patten, Mussbach Sisters, A. E. Warning and A. G. Imoberstag.

Max Spanner reports a splendid business. The demand for cut poinsettias was not heavy enough to clean up his tremendous stock and he had some plants left. On the whole, however, he reports a most profitable trade.

A. C. K.

Newark, N. J.

In a day's visit among the Newark florists, we found a unanimous sentiment of satisfaction over the results of the holiday business. We could not, in one day, visit all of them, but so far as we could learn, business was excellent. This was to be expected, as it is an old, populous and wealthy city. It has many manufacturing establishments in which the help receives high wages. Writing in particular of the florists, in addition to a number of fine retail stores, there are also a number of good growers, and amicable relations seem to exist between the two branches. Much of the stock sold by the retailers reaches them direct from the growers. Particularly, in carnations, fine stock was noticed.

The manager of the Rosery Floral Co., Broad and Market streets, stated that it was the greatest holiday business they ever had. They had four autos running in delivery, besides a number of boys for short trips. Everything in plants cleaned up, and there were good sales of cut flowers.

Philips Brothers, prominent Broad street retailers, stated that they sold out well in both plants and cut flowers, and that their holiday business was much better than last year. An almost exactly similar report was received at Beyerow's, also of Broad-street.

W. R. James has a store at 220 Clinton avenue, and greenhouses in the suburban town of Irvington. At the store, which for the day, was in charge of Mrs. James, it was stated that they had a fine holiday trade.

Connelly & Plunkett, Bloomfield and Mt. Prospect avenue, who are heavy buyers in the New York market, report excellent business.

George Penek, whose store is just across the park from the Hudson tube terminal, reported an enormous business.

McLaughlin & Murphy, of Clinton avenue, reported fine business and satisfied customers. A. F. F.

Cleveland.

LIMITED SUPPLY MOVES FAST.

Stock in the local wholesale houses has been short of the demand since the holidays, with prices still on a high level. A few days' sunshine has improved the supply of sweet peas, both in quality and quantity. For those in the trade who had funeral orders to handle, white and yellow narcissi have been a "life saver." Stevia is in fair supply. Carnations clean up quickly on advance orders as do roses and violets. Greens are plentiful. There is a marked shortage of novelties in the cut flower line.

NOTES.

The Brookline Floral Co. has converted its heating system from gas to coal, the change being made necessary by the gas company being unable to maintain a sufficient supply.

Charles Reep, of North Olmstead, O., has been cutting a fine lot of Paper White and yellow narcissi.

William Lisy has taken a position with the Heights Flower Shop on Cedar road. C. F. B.

The Late Peter Gottfried Pearson.

Peter Gottfried Pearson, of Bettendorf, Ia., whose death occurred recently following a brief illness, was well and favorably known as a landscape gardener, having at one time been in the employ of Mr. Studebaker at South Bend, Ind., and later with W. L. Velie, at Moline, Ill., where he also had charge of the city park system. For the past five years he was employed by Joseph Bettendorf.

TRI-CITY FLORISTS' CLUB RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased the Great Master to take from our midst our brother and co-worker, Peter Gottfried Pearson, in whose demise we feel the loss of a noble and worthy member of our association and craft, and as such voice our sentiment; therefore, be it

Resolved, that The Tri-City Florists' Club, as a body, hereby extends to the family, its profoundest sympathy and condolement in their bereavement. Be it further

Resolved, that, in recognition of the faithful allegiance and affiliation to the order of his vocation, a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be spread on the minutes of the association, and copies be sent the various trade journals and the press in general.

Foreign Notes.

Thomas W. Turner, superintendent of the Royal Hospital Gardens, Chelsea, London, Eng., and for many years foreman at the Chiswick Gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society, in the eventful days of the late Superintendent A. F. Barrows, died November 13, last.

The Japanese Bulb Import Control Committee of London, Eng., was relieved of its duties early last November, the restrictions on imports of these bulbs having been removed last August.

The Rev. W. Wilks has retired from the secretaryship of the Royal Horticultural Society of England after many years service. W. R. Dyhes has been mentioned as his successor.

The death is announced of M. de la Rocheterie, for many years president of the French Society of Chrysanthemum Growers.

LEAD has advanced from 7¾ to 8 cents at New York.

GREENHOUSE builders are complaining of the scarcity and high price of building material.

DEALERS say the severe cold weather of the past two weeks has delayed shipments of gladiolus and other bulbs.

MANY kinds of flower seeds are in short supply and, to avoid disappointment, florists should cover their needs early.

THE first trade calendar to reach us this year, is that of Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., the well known manufacturer of insecticides, greenhouse paint, putty, etc.

Personal.

Adam Graham, Cleveland, O., and two daughters, were in Chicago this week en route to San Francisco, Calif., whence they expect to sail to the orient early in February.

Society of American Florists.

The following telegram was received from Secretary Young, December 31, unfortunately, too late for last week's issue, which was printed one day earlier than usual, on account of the holiday: "Add affiliated directors, Wm. F. Ekas, president florists' club at Baltimore."

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Adiantum Pelicanii.—Public notice is hereby given that as no objection has been filed against the registration of Adiantum Pelicanii by Frank D. Pelícano, 119 Guttenburg street, San Francisco, Calif., the same becomes complete.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS' MEETING.

By order of President A. L. Miller, a meeting of the board of directors is called for Friday, January 23, and Saturday, January 24, at the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, O.

By order of Henry Penn, chairman, a meeting of the national publicity committee is called for Wednesday, January 21, and Thursday, January 22, at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago.

Members of the board, and the publicity committee, should make their hotel reservations at once.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Edgeplain Floral Co.

The Edgeplain Floral Co., St. Leonard station, Bucks county, Pa., has been incorporated with an authorized capital of $100,000 under charter from the state for the purpose of growing roses for cut blooms, the officers being Ellwood Heacock, president; John Burt, director, and Robert C. Strafford, secretary-treasurer, Edgar W. Bailey, a practical rose grower, is to be superintendent of the greenhouses. As a location for its range, the company has purchased 70 acres at the above place, 23 miles from Philadelphia, Pa., on the Philadelphia, Newtown and New York railroad, from which there will be a siding to facilitate the handling of coal. The erection of the first iron-frame house, 72x600 feet, for which a contract has been awarded the Lord & Burnham Co., will be started in March, the structure to be finished in May. A stack 100 feet high is provided for, which will allow for increased boiler installation as found necessary. It will require 28,000 plants to fill the house. The company expects to market its product through commission houses in Philadelphia and New York.

Ellwood Heacock, president of the company, is a nephew of the late Joseph Heacock, and was for six years actively engaged with him as treasurer of the Joseph Heacock Co.

Horticultural and Garden Competitions.

Under the title, "Horticultural Exhibitions and Garden Competitions," the United States department of agriculture has issued Department Circular 62, with 38 pages and numerous illustrations. It calls attention to the fact that the spirit of competition in an organized way, will do much for the community in helping to create added interest in vegetable, fruit and flower growing, and in holding such exhibitions, a large number of small exhibits should be the aim, rather than a few large displays. Under horticultural exhibits, the circular treats of organization, competitors, classification and schedules, the last named covering spring and fall shows, and exhibitions of vegetables, autumn fruits, narcissi, irises, peonies, roses, sweet peas, gladioli, dahlias and chrysanthemums, sweepstakes prizes, arrangement of exhibits, judging premiums, rules, etc. Several pages are also devoted to lawn and garden competitions, with rules for the judging and arrangement of classes.

The circular contains much information useful to beginners in flower show work. The matter of numbering the classes in schedules is treated rather lightly, however. Practical exhibition men have found that the consecutive numbering of all classes is strictly necessary for convenience of management, exhibitors, judges and the visitors.

Carnation Convention Hotel Rates.

Members and friends of the American Carnation Society and the Illinois State Florists' Association expecting to attend the annual meeting and exhibition to be held at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, January 21-22, should make their reservations at once. The hotels are filled up all the time, and unless reservations are made early, visitors are very likely to be disappointed in securing the accommodations they want. Rates are as follows:

ONE PERSON	Per Day
Room with detached bath	$2.00 to $4.00
Room with private bath	3.50 to 7.00

TWO PERSONS	Per Day
Room with detached bath	$3.50 to $6.00
Room with private bath	5.00 to 10.00
Two connecting rooms with bath	Per Day
Two persons	$ 6.50 to $10.00
Three persons	8.50 to 16.00
Four persons	10.50 to 19.00

Make your reservations direct to the Hotel La Salle, Chicago.

QUALITY OFFERINGS LEAD DEMAND.

Local florists agree that the 1919 holiday trade was something to be remembered with pleasure, and barring a few small poinsettias, the entire offerings were cleaned up in good style. So good was the demand that on ordinary funeral orders, for the three days after Christmas, the retailers found themselves obliged to scour the town. The general puplic was apparently prepared to meet higher asked prices, and cases where complaints were made at the figures the retailer charged, were extremely rare. The day before Christmas saw a rush that taxed the sales force of every store in town, and the volume of trade for Christmas day itself was also heavy. Local greenhouses sold everything they could offer. All of the California arrivals went the same way, and even this week, some of the trade complain of a scarcity of top offerings. Still another phase of the sales which promises future business, was the heavy percentage of telephone orders received from business men. This week, there has been a general scarcity reported in all lines from local greenhouses, and the trade between Christmas and New Years held up in such good style that the heavy arrivals from California are all moving freely. Rose Premier has been featured in a number of stores with good results. Ophelia and Russell are enjoying their usual good call, and two firms have featured Shawyers lately. The shipment of Irish Elegance from the south has been halted, as it was found the stock opened too fully en route. Some splendid carnations have been received, and the reds have sold on sight, while nearly every dealer reports his cooler bare of this offering at the close of the day's business. Orchids were in heavy demand at Christmas, as there were more than 20 large weddings held during the period. Bouvardias were big sellers, in reflection of this condition, and freesias seem to have caught the eye of buyers to a noticeable degree. Pot azaleas were big sellers in several stores, and sweet peas are kept cleaned up by the shortage, or absence, of Brunner roses and lily of the valley. Palms were in heavier demand than expected during Christmas week, and most firms had to send rush calls to the greenhouses for more stock. The cyclamen crop is still the object of comment from every visitor, and shipping orders far exceed the amount the trade has to offer in excess of local requirements. Ferns attracted many buyers, and the additions of thistles and ruscus enabled the retailer to get unheard of prices for his stock this year. The active social sea-

A FIELD OF TRUE TYPE RUBRUM LILIES
Grown Especially for the American Bulb Co.

A few cases of Hardy Lilies planted now will come in very handy, for they will bloom at the time when flowers are scarce. These flowers last longer than any others you can use in a floral piece. They improve the character of the floral design when used with other flowers.

We offer for immediate shipment the following varieties: Rubrum, Album, Magnificum and Auratum. Sizes: 7-9, 8-9, 9-10, 9-11, 10-11 and 11-12.

The quality of our Lily Bulbs cannot be surpassed. We positively assure you that these bulbs have been properly cultivated to produce the best bulbs for florists' forcing. This type of Lily in Japan grows wild, and during the war very few were cultivated for export purposes; so when our Mr. Miller arrived in Japan, and knowing of the scarcity, he immediately purchased fields that had been cultivated

To produce a good Hardy Lily, it is necessary to gather the bulbs in the mountains, where they grow wild, and then cultivate them for a season or two in open land. This method improves the quality and has long been practiced by the Japanese growers. Very few are available this season, so we can expect many uncultivated Lily Bulbs. In trusting us with your order, you assure yourself of the best cultivated bulbs from the Orient.

son, the great increase in store decorations, more elaborate club and theatre dresses, and a better demand from the general public, combined to make Christmas of 1919 one of the finest ever experienced here.

NOTES.

A Christmas luncheon decoration at the Sunset Club by Rosaia Bros. drew coments from the local press. The table was banked with cotton batting for snow, with holly scattered about, and in the center was a small Christmas tree, dipped in white kalsomine and decorated with cattails, green cones and red and green baby ribbon streamers. This was illuminated. At the drawing room door was a huge tree, docorated with green cones and brightly lighted, which was placed in the center of a holly, cedar and ruscus wreath, 12 feet in diameter. In the hall were two small trees, placed before mirrors, and at either end of the table were tall Italian candlesticks in polychrome treatment.

The most elaborate wedding decoration of the year was handled here last week by Mr. Holmes, of the Hollywood Gardens. In the church, twelve tall, five-branched candlesticks (six to a side) and the usual greens, formed the aisle decorations, while on top of each of these was a stand holding a basket of white chrysanthemums. The altar was a banked mass of Woodwardia ferns and white chrysanthemums, and the bouquets for the bride and bridesmaids were all of colonial pattern. The home decorations were just as noteworthy.

A shop which shows clearly how system can be used by the retail florist, is that of the Woodlawn Flower Shop. Not only is a full basement under the store in use, but mezzanine floors for packing are found in the rear of the store. A novel carrying system between the basement and this floor is installed so in reality three floors can be used at once in getting out orders. Harry A. Crouch reports a Christmas business far in excess of that for 1918.

Santa Claus put in an early appearance this year at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Walter A. Moore, leaving behind a charming baby daughter. Dr. Moore states that with another stockholder to support, the sales of the Hollywood Gardens will have to show a further gain. This concern is getting the heaviest cut of roses from its own range of any local dealer, but still had to draw on outside growers.

Two faces familiar to local florists are again to be seen. Gus Burkman and William Hawkins being attached to the sales force of Rosaia Bros. Mr. Burkman was formerly with this house, but has been connected with the Butte Floral Company, of Butte, Mont., lately, while Bill Hawkins has been in California since he closed his own establishment, the Pacific Greenhouse Company, at Ravenna.

The Pathe News Weekly, shown at a local theatre last week, carried several hundred feet of film showing the greenhouses of the Thomas Floral Company. George F. Rosaia was seen beside some of the large pot cyclamens, which have made him famous, and showed not the slightest trace of camera shyness.

"Keeney's Home of Flowers" opened the day before Christmas on Pine street, between Second and Third avenues, although it will be several weeks before all of the decorations are completed. Joseph Goldberry, formerly with Rosaia Bros., is manager here and reports a splendid holiday trade.

Felix Rosaia reports that the holiday business was notable by the way that buyers were demanding the best quality, regardless of cost. The usual thing this year, was for the customer to say, "I want some of your best——," not "How much will —— cost me?"

Lambert Peterson, one of the best known growers of the Pacific northwest is confined at the Seattle General Hospital with a serious attack of pneumonia. His many friends here are wishing him quick recovery.

MARKET SUFFERS FROM SEVERE SHORTAGE.

At present this market is experiencing one of the worst shortages of stock it has known for some time. The demand is largely for cheap and medium-priced stock, with not nearly enough to go round. American Beauties and long-stemmed roses are in fair supply, and clean up daily at high prices, owing to the shortage of everything else. To make matters worse, this city has been in the grip of zero weather for several days and many shipments have arrived frozen. Carnations are on the short side, but what few do arrive are of fine quality. Callas are more plentiful, but not strong enough to make them a factor. Paper White narcissus are arriving in large quantities, but sell on sight, while sweet peas, baby primroses, calendulas and mignonette are only seen in limited amounts. Violets are of fine quality, with just about enough to supply the demand. The quantity of orchids and lily of the valley is small, with a light sale. A summary of the New Year's business shows a larger increase than anyone counted on. Stock sold on sight and brought prices that would have been considered high for Christmas several years ago. When the wholesale houses closed on New Year's eve, they did not have a flower in their boxes and have had none to put there since.

NOTES.

On Monday evening December 29, the McCallum Company held its first annual banquet and convention of salesmen at the Seventh Avenue hotel. Covers were laid for 75, and it was a success in every sense of the word. One of the features was in having each of the salesmen tell about the hardest sale he ever made. The territory covered by the men employed by the McCallum Company takes in all of the United States, Canada and the West Indies. After the dinner, all hands repaired to the garden dancing parlors, on the north side, where dancing was indulged in till midnight. Everybody pronounced it a great success and it has been voted to make it an annual occurrence.

Joseph Thomas, the well-known grower, of Greensburg, Pa., had the largest business in his history for Christmas. Where possible, Mr. Thomas made his deliveries by auto. As an illustration, he had an order for 500 assorted plants to be delivered in Wheeling, W. Va. It was during the zero weather, just before Christmas, yet every plant was delivered to the retailers in Wheeling by auto, in first-class condition.

The business outlook is brighter for this district than it has been for some time. There are no strikes in progress, labor is at a premium, and all things point to the most successful and largest season in all lines that this section has ever known.

We Are Rose Growers

And are now cutting roses from 245,000 rose plants all in one big range of glass. Our growers are the highest paid of any rose ranges in the West and they produce the best and most even run of roses in this market. Remember all our stock is grown, handled and sold only by ourselves. Compare our prices, quality and length of stems and freshness of stock with what you may buy from others, and then see the advantage of buying direct of a large grower.

STOCK IS STILL SCARCE.

Stock of all kind is still scarce at this writing and is cleaning up completely every day in practically every item at high prices. American Beauty roses are good property and move fast. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier are in strong demand, which holds true for roses in general. Some particularly fine Sunburst are noticed at the wholesale houses and command high figures. Carnations are in short supply and are cleaning up fast at prices ranging from $10 to $12 per 100 in the fancy grades and in some instances more. Sweet peas are bringing $3 to $4 per 100 and extra select $5 per 100. Violets are having a good call but are on the short side. Lily of the valley is not bringing as high prices as it did formerly and choice stock is obtainable at figures around the $12 per 100 mark. Gardenias are sold as fast as they arrive and the demand for orchids continues to be as brisk as ever. Stevia is having a good call. Calendulas, white and yellow narcissi, daisies and callas are included in the offerings together with a few poinsettias which came in too late for Christmas. The first jonquils arrived this week and are bringing high market prices. Green goods are in strong demand, owing to the scarcity of cut flowers, with boxwood and galax having an extra heavy call. The New Year demand was very brisk with a heavy out-of-town call for stock and while the local trade was reported brisk by some of the retailers, others claim it was not as good as last year. The market has never been cleaned up so completely nor were prices so high all through December and the early part of January as this year. The usual after-holiday glut has failed to make its appearance so far, and according to some of the growers, stock will be in short supply for several weeks to come.

The American Carnation Society and the Illinois State Florists' Association will hold their annual conventions and exhibitions at the Hotel La Salle, January 21-22, and Joseph Kohout, president of the Commercial Flower Growers' Association, is urging every grower in this vicinity to make a display. The public will be invited to attend the exhibition, so it is up to every grower to send as much stock as possible so there will be something to show the visitors. The growers in this vicinity ought to exhibit, inasmuch as they are right on the ground and everyone should make it his business to have at least a couple of vases on display.

The Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co. has increased its capital stock to $22,000 and has taken over the business of the Embee Artificial Flower Co., located in the same building. The Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co. will manufacture artificial flowers and will continue business at both of their stores until larger and more suitable quarters can be obtained. Morris Grossberg left January 5 on an extended business trip.

Matters of greatest importance to the growers, wholesalers and retailers of this city and vicinity will be discussed at a meeting to be held at the Hotel Randolph, Monday, January 12, at 7:30 p. m., and every florist engaged in these lines commercially should be present to take care of his own special interests. Existing conditions call for immediate and decisive action.

The St. Valentine's day sticker is a fine one this year, and is causing much favorable comment among those in the trade. Every retail florist should use them, and can obtain a supply from any one of the wholesale houses. The profit made in sales of this sticker, above expense of handling, will revert to the national publicity fund.

Stewart Spalding, manager of the Coliseum, died in New York last month, age 65 years. Mr. Spalding was always generous and courteous to the managers of the Coliseum flower shows in the years that are gone, and his passing will be greatly regretted by all who knew him. He was a native of Vermont.

The Central Floral Co. did a splendid New Year's business, with the demand exceptionally heavy for corsages, which cost Louis Duris a new pair of shoes. He told Walter Walters if he sold 100 corsages for $10 each, he would buy him the best pair in the city. Mr. Walters won easily.

Bassett & Washburn's sales for New Year's were much ahead of last year, owing to the fact that they were in heavy crop with roses. Mr. Washburn says that the shipping demand is holding up remarkably well.

The A. L. Randall Co. treated all its traveling men to a dinner at the Winter Garden, which proved to be one of the most enjoyable affairs ever held. There was plenty of entertainment besides a splendid feast.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports a brisk New Year's trade, with a clean-up in all lines of cut flowers. The demand is continuing strong at this establishment and there is never any surplus to speak of.

Civil service examinations for city park and nursery men will be held January 5-12. Application blanks may be had from the civil service commission, room 619, city hall.

President Peter Reinberg, of the forest preserve, has added the names of J. C. Vaughan and Wm. A. Peterson to his list of co-workers in developing the plans of the preserve.

Wietor Bros.' sales for January 1 were $23 greater than those of December 25. Some particularly fine Premier and Sunburst are included in the rose shipments.

A. L. Vaughan, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., is more than pleased with business, especially from out-of-town points, which demand continues to be exceedingly brisk.

P. L. McKee has recently purchased nearly all the outstanding stock of the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., which makes him practically sole owner.

Miss Anna Brice, of Vaughan's Seed Store, who has been on the sick list many weeks, is progressing favorably, and expects to return to work soon.

Zech & Mann are now offering a good supply of jonquils, in addition to a complete line of other seasonable stock.

Phil Schupp says that the New Year's demand, like Christmas, was the best J. A. Budlong Co. ever experienced.

The Joseph Foerster Co. is having a heavy call for fancy sweet peas, which they are handling in quantity.

H. Van Gelder, president of Percy Jones, Inc., was on the sick list for a few days this week.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association reports a steady demand for orchids, especially cattleyas.

The many traveling men who spent the holidays at home have resumed the trails of commerce.

Visitors: Morris Le Vine, with Lion & Co., New York; L. C. Hecock, Elyria, O.; Ruby M. Elam, manager of the Galloway Flower Shop, Waterloo, Ia.; A. Glaser, Dubuque, Ia.

Peoria, Ill.

Local florists are unanimous in saying that the holiday trade of 1919 has never been equalled. The sales averaged about 20 per cent greater than last year. Owing to the great shortage of cut flowers, plants were in strong demand and few of the stores had any left over for New Year's. In cut stock, roses took the lead. Very few carnations were to be seen. Some of the shops displayed narcissi and a few had some late chrysanthemums. Very fine cyclamens and poinsettias were also seen. The absence of holly was quite noticeable. J.

SHEBOYGAN, WIS.—James Matthewson, Jr., was operated upon January 6, and came through the ordeal safely.

SHORTENED SUPPLY FOLLOWS HOLIDAYS.

Now that cold weather has arrived, we can all be thankful that we were spared the excessive wrapping of plants and cut flowers for the holidays. While Christmas weather was mild, New Year's day the mercury began to go down fast, and some cases of frozen plants were reported, but nothing of a serious nature. The great demand for stock of all kinds at Christmas time caused an unusual shortage the following week, since all growers were cutting everything in sight, with the result that some stock was cut too green to open or to be of much use. At the present time, it is next to impossible to obtain enough short and medium grade flowers to supply the demand. With New Year's activities over, and the young folks returning to their studies, the big demand will shorten up for a while and stock and prices may get a chance to become normal again. January is noted, however, for its short, cloudy days, and we really cannot expect much lowering of prices until February. The unusually high prices of Christmas have prevailed the past week, and from present appearances, there is little change forecast for the week. Carnations are scarce and bring record prices. This market is lacking in good carnation stock, but we hope the shortage will soon right itself through outside shipments. Orchids are practically a negative quality, since our source of supply has been cut off through a bad boiler leak, and the ruination of a house of cattleyas. The public here has been educated to recognize the fact that lily of the valley is not a necessity, and in consequence, we do not have much call for it. There is a limit to price setting. Poinsettias, in cut blooms, were a good article for profit this year. In the past, every florist used to be stocked with cut poinsettias before Christmas and also after that day. The unusual demand was caused by the high price of roses and the carnation shortage. The better grade sold at $12 per dozen, and found ready buyers. Paper Whites are on the short side at present, but will soon be equal to demand. Yellow narcissus is a wonderful flower, but the perfume is nauseating to a degree. Were it not for this fault, it would outsell Paper Whites, even though higher priced. Pussy willows were in big demand, as were also colored cattails and teasles. In corsage work, the best seller was, perhaps, an arrangement consisting of three partly open Columbia roses, surrounded by Sweetheart, and the small foliage Mexican ivy. In basket work, a popular seller was an arrangement of calendulas, yellow narcissus, Ward roses, baby primroses and stevia. The growers and commission men are reaping a harvest, but could do more if they were in full crop at this time.

NOTES.

The funeral of a prominent newspaper man was the occasion for a great many designs, one florist getting an order for a wreath made of orchids, violets and Premier roses from New York through the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, which was one of the most elaborate and artistic ever made in this city.

HEAVY DEMAND AND SHORT SUPPLY.

The week following the holidays was characterized by an unusually strong demand for flowers and a distressing shortness of supply of blooms of all kinds. Social activity seemed to take on new life and a number of debutantes were introduced to society at parties with decorations calling for roses in no small quantity. There was also a greatly increased demand for corsages at prices varying from $2.50 to $15 each. Roses have been scarce in this market and carnations are almost negligible. There are some cut narcissi and a few of the smaller flowers such as stevia. Funeral work holds its own. Prices continue to hold firm and with the present scarcity, are not likely to become much lower. Roses are bringing from $4 to $12, and in some cases, $15 per dozen. There are still good plants in the market. Cyclamens are now coming in profusely and solanums and Lorraine begonias are to be had. A small pot of narcissi with from five to six bulbs bring $1.50. The southern smilax sells well and is much used at present in the decorations.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Company had a superb supply of both cut flowers and plants and did a wonderful business. For choice Columbia roses, they got as high as $15.00 per dozen. They virtually sold out of everything. Their Chattanooga house went way over last year in the bulk of their sales, selling every plant that was shipped to them, with a large demand for more, which they were unable to supply. There was an enormous sale of prepared wreaths and the sale on vases, baskets and Christmas novelties was very fine.

Geny Bros. could not be excelled in the quality of their Columbias, fine blossoms, long stems and rich foliage. They easily brought top notch prices. Of a very large supply of poinsettia plants, they had an absolute clean up, while their pot narcissi, both white and yellow, sold in the greatest profusion. They had very few carnations, but plenty of roses. In plants they also had primulas and cyclamens, as well as nice solanums.

At the annual meeting of the state florists' association, which will be held in Knoxville, probably the first week in February, the leading florists of this city will be represented and make displays. Thomas H. Joy, of the Joy Floral Co., Leon Geny, of Geny Bros., and Will McIntyre, of the McIntyre Floral Co., have signified their intention of being present.

Mount Olivet Cemetery advertised their stock, and as they have a good call always right there in the greenhouses, did a fine business. Their plants consisted largely of Paper White narcissi, of which they had many, and the prepared wreaths and dried flowers.

The McIntyre Floral Company had fine Columbia, Ophelia and Russell roses, with not a small supply of carnations. They had a wonderful trade, but could have sold more had they had it, but are well pleased with their holiday business.

L. H. Haury & Sons had a very good stock of cut flowers and plants, with many poinsettias and solanums. They had a good clean up on all kinds of stocks.

HOLIDAY TRADE BREAKS RECORD.

Regardless of a scarcity of stock and higher prices than in previous years, the 1919 holiday trade in this city not only exceeded expectations but broke all records for both wholesalers and retailers, the former doing more business with the usual working force, while the retailers, with a fewer number of orders, were enabled to give them better attention and service. With the prevailing high prices, the grower shared in the same proportion, and many of them had the most satisfactory trade in many years.

NOTES.

Mayor Broenning has accepted an invitation to be present at the next meeting of the florists' club, January 12, on which occasion, Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, will also be a guest. The ladies, too, have been invited, and refreshments will be served.

Robert Halliday, of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., sent out some very handsome engraved Christmas cards with compliments of the firm, with his own card, as local representative, attached.

DULL PERIOD FOLLOWS HOLIDAYS.

As is usual at this period, flowers have been scarce the past week. Dull and cloudy with snow was the rule, with a touch of almost zero weather, January 3, which reduced the shipments of all kinds of stock to the lowest point of the season. While the demand has been light, the supply has not been sufficient to go around, and only steady buyers met with any success. While prices are not up to the Christmas mark, they are not far from it, as carnations sold at from 10 to 15 cents. It sems to be the general opinion that this crop is 50 per cent below last year's production. Roses are grabbed up quickly, being portioned out in small lots immediately on arrival. Columbia shows quite a lot of imperfect flowers. Ophelia and Ward are very popular, while there are no good American Beauties less than $1.00. Lilac takes the place of lily of the valley, and a continuous supply can be depended on from now until the end of the season. Sweet peas are a disappointment. With more planted than ever before, the supply is not much over half of that of last year. Reports of buds dropping is general, caused by the dark, gloomy weather. A big crop is looked for when sunny days come again. Cattleyas are more plentiful; some fair flowers may be bought as low as $1.00. Stevia, which was so plentiful at Christmas that it sold three bunches for $1.00, is now scarce at 50 cents a bunch and poor at that. There are plenty of Paper White and the yellow narcissi that are held firmly at $6 to $10, if anything, higher than at the holidays. Single violets are $2.00 per hundred. In discussing the situation, one of the large wholesalers said there was nothing to be worried about; flowers were always scarce the first two weeks in January, smaller growers having to an extent closed up their places, and the bad growing season of last summer had considerably shortened the stock of carnation plants, so the shortage in this staple was to be expected. The Killarneys, which for years were the quantity rose of midwinter, have had to give way to newer varieties, which are not nearly so productive at this season. Within the next two weeks, he fully expected an increasing supply all along the line, when the situation would again become normal.

January 5.—Shipments from the growers were very light this morning and there was a scurrying for stock all along the line, a number of the stores having orders for baskets of flowers for the installation of the mayor, the members of the new city council and other officials.

NOTES.

The January meeting of the florists' club was intensely interesting and was largely attended by greenhouse men. Burning low grade oil and culm was described by three well informed speakers. Henry Thomas, of the Sun Oil Co., stated that when shipping facilities were improved there would be oil for everybody. He also proved that it was more efficient than coal as fuel. J. C. Harley exhibited portions of a burner and showed its ease of operation and simplicity. John Klinger explained the water grate which made possible the burning of culm and other low grade coal at a saving of 40 per cent. The speakers were all heartily applauded at the close of their remarks.

In speaking of the variation of market prices, a good judge, with long experience, said: "A thing is worth what it will bring, no more, no less. This is irrespective of what it costs to produce. If it can be placed on the market for 5 cents, and will sell for 25 cents, that is what is is worth. An article that costs 25 cents to produce, but will only bring five cents proves that is all it is worth. Conditions are controlled in a degree by judgment and salesmanship, but in the main the law of supply and demand governs and makes the price, and the growers of flowers should, in planning their crops, work closely to this law so as to get the best results."

H. I. Faust, of Merion, is justly proud of his many improvements of the past summer. The two new houses erected are the last word in economy of space, heating, side ventilation and light, having glass sides from the benches up to the eaves. One is filled with exceptionally fine cyclamens; the other contains poinsettias and Christmas peppers. A new office between the packing shed and the last new greenhouse, is very bright and cheerful, in which it is a pleasure, as Mr. Faust says, to take his customers and receive their orders.

Frank M. Ross and wife left December 31 for a month's sojourn in Florida's sunny clime. Their destination is Palm Beach. As a diversion, Mr. Ross will try his luck at tarpon fishing, having taken along the latest and best in tackle. Their Pullman state room was a bower of flowers, furnished by friends in the trade, who were on hand to see them off.

Ellwood Heacock and Edgar W. Bailey paid a flying visit to Duckham & Pierson and the Chas. H. Totty Co., at Madison, N. J., January 2, also A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., the following day. The roses seen were all in splendid condition.

Reports from long distance shipments to commission houses in this city, invariably tell of a record Christmas business ,and that many more flowers could have been sold had they been obtainable.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., spent several days the past week visiting the rose growers of this vicinity. He was particularly gratified that all were so well pleased with Premier.

MODERATE NEW YEAR'S DEMAND.

The business of New Year's day was only fair. In the wholesale district, December 31, 1919, one wholesaler remarked that business was "hardly up to a good Saturday." The wholesale stores kept open for a few hours in the evening, but most of them had closed before 10 p. m. The supply of stock, so soon after Christmas, was necessarily light, but there was more than enough to supply the demand. In several lines there was a considerable cut from Christmas prices. Special American Beauty roses went as a rule, from $150 to $200 per 100, but moved slowly. The shorter grades of tea roses, being more in demand, held firm, but some of the special stock was hard to move at asking prices. Carnations were $12 to $15 per 100 and violets $1 to $2.00 per 100, and slow at that, many being left over. Orchids continued slow at $1.50 to $2.00 per flower for the best cattleyas. Lily of the valley has been and continues cheap and hard to move. A considerable stock of cut poinsettias was left over from Christmas, which no one seemed to want at any price. In the minor stocks, such as callas, calendulas, pansies, stevia, etc., there was about the usual movement . January 1 being an exceptionally fine and mild day, there was considerable activity in the leading reail stores, but the smaller stores had but little business. The weather turned cold that night, the temperature going down to five above zero, with a piercing wind, on the morning of January 3. This will further reduce the supply, but there is no immediate prospect of a scarcity. American Beauties are very slow at $100 and $125 for specials.

January 5.—The weather continues cold, with the night temperature five to nine degrees above zero. There is a light supply of stock and still lighter demand. All special American Beauty roses are hard to move.

NOTES.

The Christmas tree market seems to have been overloaded all along the line. The Boston Transcript, January 2, had the following editorial note: "The fact that the would-be Christmas tree profiteers were badly stung will not cause much long-felt grief except by those who were the immediate victims." There is a moral in this, that sensible people will note. The other kind of people never note anything—till it hits them in the neck.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held on the night of January 12. It is to be "ladies' night," and it is expected that the installation of officers and minor business will be speedily transacted, after which there will be music and dancing, and refreshments will be served. Each member that has notified Chairman Gerlaird of the house committee, will be entitled to take with him not more than two ladies.

The organization of an iris society, which is announced to take place January 29, in the Museum building, Bronx park, should attract attention. Flowers that wholesale for $1 each as the irises are now doing in this market, may be classed among the "upper ten" of flowerdom and deserve a society of their own.

It has been stated that the greenhouses of the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., a few years ago the finest carnation range in this section, are soon to be torn down. It is understood that David S. Ward and R. T. Brown will continue the nursery business.

J. Litchenberger, formerly in the retail business at 1564 Avenue A, has removed to 1560, and is now exclusively engaged in the manufacture of florists' gold letters. S. J. Bretz, his former employe, has taken the store at 1564, and carries a good stock.

Peter F. McKenney, the retailer of Fifth avenue and 42d street, who was laid up for several weeks with a severe attack of pleurisy, has completely recovered, and is again at business. His many friends are glad to see him about again, as he is a good mn.

A retail store that is always attractive is A. T. Bunyard's, 413 Madison avenue. He had an exceptionally fine stock of plants and cut flowers for Christmas, and sold out well. He also reports a good New Year's business.

William H. Miller, a florist well known in the trade, recently arranged a fine decoration in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, for the wedding of Miss Alexandra Blaine Thaw. Many fine flowers were used.

Matthew Battieta, a clever young man well known in the retail trade, has taken the store at 44 Carmine street, formerly occupied by Buonfiglio, and has made improvements and is doing a good business.

Herman Weiss has removed his wholesale business from 130 West 28th street to the basement of the Coogan building, Sixth avenue and 26th street, which was recently fitted up for business.

The Rosary Flower Co. is now well located in a handsome store at 423 Park avenue, between 55th and 56th streets. They removed a short time ago from Park avenue and 80th street.

The basement of the Coogan building, Sixth avenue and 26th street, which has been vacant for many months, is being refitted for several wholesale florists to occupy.

Manager Perry, of the Dards store, states that their New Year's business in both plants and cut flowers was excellent.

A. F. F.

LAWRENCE, KAN.—Ralph W. Ward, of Clinton, Mo., according to the Journal-World, of this city, has purchased seven acres at 15th street and Barker avenue, and will erect a $30,000 range here.

TAMPA, FLA.—The Tampa Floral Co. enjoyed a 40 per cent greater Christmas trade than in 1918, with prices considerably advanced over those of that period. Roses were plentiful and of good quality, but carnations, especially red, were short of the demand. There was a good call for palms, ferns and crotons. Money seemed to be plentiful.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Fred G. Horn reports Christmas prices about 50 per cent higher than in 1918, with a satisfactory volume of sales. In roses, carnations and violets, the supply was short and there were no bulbous flowers. The quality in general was about as in former years. Plant sales showed an increase and there was a good demand for boxwood wreaths.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, January 7, was $60.

ASPARAGUS SPRENGERI seed is among the very scarce items this season.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, has returned from New York.

PALM BEACH, FLA.—J. Chas. McCullough and family, of Cincinnati, Ohio, are now at their winter home here.

GILROY, CALIF.—L. W. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., are making an eastern trip.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district continue in strong demand with prices about the same as last week's, namely, $3.00 for colors and $3.50 for whites, prompt shipment.

J. C. BODGER, of the John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., is making a trip to Europe, sailing from New York on the S. S. Mauretania, January 28. Passport No. 150954.

THE handsome calendar of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., features a bunch of Vick's Scarlet Globe radish, natural size, in colors, an excellent reproduction, Michigan grown radish being one of this firm's specialties.

VISITED CHICAGO.—Kirby B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., returning from the St. Louis convention of the Association of Official Seed Analysts; J. S. Michael, of the Sioux City Seed Co., Sioux City, Ia.; Alling Woodruff, of the Woodruff-Boyce Seed Co., Seattle Wash.; Mrs. M. Johansen and H. Winslow, of the Johansen-Winslow Co., El Monte, Calif.; J. C. Bodger, of the John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif.

New York Seed Trade.

Eugene Schaettel, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, who sailed for home this week, carried in his baggage a parcel of hard coal for use in his Paris home.

E. A. Hartland, of Vaughan's Seed Store, is rejoicing in his New Year's gift of a bouncing baby boy.

Eighteen Holland bulb salesmen arrived on the S. S. New Amsterdam last week.

Catalogues Received.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York, wholesale dealers' list: seeds and bulbs for spring planting; W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., seeds; Wm. Henry Maule, Philadelphia, Pa., seeds; Bessie Boston Dahlia Farms, San Mateo, Calif., dahlias; Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, Calif., seeds; W. C. Slate, South Boston, Mass., garden and field seeds; Walter S. Schell, Harrisburg, Pa., seeds; Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia., seeds; O. R. Jackson Seed Co., Houston, Tex., seeds.

Pape & Bergmann, Quedlinburg, Germany, chrysanthemum, petunia and godetia seeds.

Association of Official Seed Analysts.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Association of Official Seed Analysts, held at St. Louis, Mo., December 29-30, was a very successful one. The sessions were well attended by a live group of analysts and seedsmen, and the enthusiasm and spirit of co-operation shown, make it stand out as one of the best, if not the best, ever held. The different factions were well represented and tried to get together on the points at issue. It is rumored there may be a meeting of the official seed analysts and the seedsmen of the country to consider new legislation. The St. Louis seedsmen outdid themselves in hospitality and contributed considerably to the success of the convention.

The programme was varied and interesting. Edgar Brown, of the seed laboratory, Washington, D. C., brought out some important facts on seed legislation and seed importation. He also announced that during the past year, 79 per cent of the seedsmen of the country did not label their seeds. Mr. Brown expressed his disappointment over the seedsmen not living up to their promises. In connection with seed importation, he said there will be a heavy importation of Italian red clover this year, and that it is very inferior when used in this country. F. H. Hillman and Miss Helen H. Henry, of the seed laboratory, Washington, D. C., sent in a paper on the "Identification of Seed of Italian Alfalfa and Red Clover," which was read by Mr. Brown.

G. T. Herrington, of Washington, D. C., gave several papers on research problems he has been working on. He discussed the nature of dormancy and after-ripening of seeds, and his paper on "Forcing the Germination of Freshly Harvested Wheat and Other Cereals" was very interesting. Three methods were suggested: Drying the seed, scratching the embryo, and treating with sulphuric acid.

A valuable and interesting paper on the "Identity of Certain Sweet Clover" was given by R. C. Dahlberg, of St. Paul, Minn. A. C. Wilson, of Springfield, Ill., explained and discussed the new Illinois seed law. Dr. J. G. Dickson, Madison, Wis., presented some valuable data on seed sterilization and its effects on germination. Results on the germination of Kentucky blue grass were contributed by C. H. Waldron, of Raleigh, N. C. Several other important papers were read, among them one by Kirby B. White of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., entitled "Some Objections to Governmental Control of Garden Seed Sales."

All papers presented at the meeting will be printed in the publication of proceedings. The Association of Official Seed Analysis expects to issue a bulletin on "Methods of Seed Testing" some time during the coming year. It has not been definitely decided where the next meeting will be held. Chicago or Milwaukee have been suggested.

Officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: Edgar Brown, Washington, D. C., president; J. P. Helver, New Brunswick, N. J., vice-president; A. L. Stone, Madison, Wis., secretary-treasurer. The executive committee consists of the president, the secretary, George Eddington, Ft. Collins, Colo., and John Dymond, Ottawa, Ont.

A pleasant feature of the local hospitalities was the dinner tendered the visitors by the St. Louis seedsmen at the Missouri Athletic Club.

THE ATTENDANCE.

Gladiolus Bulbs

AND NOW IS THE TIME TO FILL YOUR EMPTY BENCHES

or Plant Between Your Carnations as a Catch Crop.

THIS season's Bulb Crop on our Michigan Farms was first-class. The giant cut spikes we showed at the S. A. F. Detroit Exhibition dominated the show, and in size and foliage were double the size of the average exhibits there. The harvest has put into our warehouse a big stock of bulbs in which our "first size" grade showed a strong percentage of "overs," many bulbs from 1¾ to 2 inches in diameter.

Bulbs for forcing under glass are carefully selected for this purpose. Following prices are for January only:

New York, Jan. 3.—Celery, per doz. roots, 15 to 75 cents; cucumbers, per dozen, $1.00 to $3.00; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.25 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 12 to 40 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $3.00 to $6.00.

Vegetable Markets.

As indicated by reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, markets were strong and active, with sharp advances in potatoes and cabbage and most other lines firm. In potatoes, gains of from 20 to 50 cents occurred in shipping sections and in most consuming markets. New York sacked round whites closed nearly 50 cents above last week at $3.70-$3.90 per 100 pounds f. o. b. and consuming markets advanced moderately for this stock, reaching $3.35-$3.65 with bulk sales at $3.15-$3.35. Maine sacked Green Mountains advanced about 25 cents at shipping points, closing at $3.25-$3.30 f. o. b. and bulk stock sold at $3-$3.15, while New York and Boston made similar gains, closing at $3.35-$3.80 sacked. Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota shipping points advanced about 50 cents, closing with sales Cadillac basis $3.50-$3.80 per 100 pounds sacked. General range for the week was $3.35-$3.80. Middlewestern distributing markets made corresponding advance, ranging $3.50-$4. Colorado round whites advanced sharply, closing at $3.80 sacked cash to growers. Idaho rurals advanced 35 cents, closing at $3.85, and Russets at $4.-$4.10 per 100 pounds sacked cash to growers. The situation was strong at eastern shipping points and most stock is reported showing fine quality and keeping well. Onions at western New York shipping points continued very firm. Most of the stock seems to be in possession of dealers. Shipments have been light with best lots quoted $6 per 100 pounds f. o. b., sacked, for medium to large sizes, occasionally $6.25 for fancy lots. Price range for desirable stock in consuming markets continued generally $5.50-$6.50. The Chicago market was weak and draggy, dropping to $4.75-$5.25. Other markets were dull and steady.

In western New York cabbage shipping sections further sharp advances occurred, Danish seed stock reaching $80-$85 per ton f. o. b. bulk, with sales for advance delivery reported as high as $100. Consuming markets advanced about $10, ranging generally $80-$100 per ton bulk. New York domestic stock strengthened to a range of $50-$65. Wisconsin Holland seed in middlewestern markets advanced to $70-$100. New California cabbage, ball head type, was steady at $4 per 100 pounds, and new Florida stock was in fair demand in a few markets at $3.25-$3.50 per 1½ bushel hamper.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

William P. Rich, secretary of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, announces that the inaugural meeting of that organization will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, January 10, at 2 o'clock p. m. The business of the session will include the address of President Endicott, the report of the board of trustees and of the chairmen of the various committees. At the close of the business meeting, E. H. Wilson, assistant director of Arnold Arboretum, will deliver his lecture, illustrated with 100 lantern slides from photographs, on "My Sixth Journey to the Far East in Search of Plants for American Gardens."

The programme for the usual course of lectures to be given in February, March and April is in preparation and will be issued shortly.

Extensive preparations are now going forward for the exhibition of orchids and plants to be held in March.

VAUGHAN'S GIANT PANSIES

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSIES

Vaughan's International Pansy Mixture was first offered by us in 1889. We import from all the best European sources. Each year has added to the quality of its flowers and variety of its colors. We buy every year novelties of known merit to improve the mixture; it is always complete, always the latest and always the best mixture. We add to all Pansy Mixtures which we now buy more than 50 per cent of the choicest named kinds obtainable, each in correct proportion. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds, and one which we maintain most carefully.

Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

Vaughan's Giant Pansy Mixture

Embraces, besides all the separate shades and colors, five special strains not listed elsewhere, and which can only be had in this and our International Mixture. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid, Cassier strain.

Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., 75c; oz. $5.00; ¼ lb. $18.00.

Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better results.

Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

New Early-Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bore from 3 to 5 of their giant flowers.

Early Flowering Giant White, Yellow, Light Blue, Dark Blue and Mixed (Four Colors). Trade pkt., (500 seeds) 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

The Tulip-Tree.

The tulip-tree (Liriodendron) is unfortunately not a native of eastern Massachusetts, although it occurs in the western part of the state and in Rhode Island. It is perfectly hardy here, and has grown to a large size in the neighborhood of Boston. It is, therefore, surprising that this tree is not more generally planted here for the American liriodendron is one of the most magnificent trees of the northern hemisphere, growing as it does when all the conditions of soil and climate favor it, as in the rich "coves" of the southern Appalachian mountains, to the height of 200 feet and forming a trunk eight or 10 feet in diameter and free of branches for half its height. The tulip-shaped flowers and the leaves, which are of unusual shape, are beautiful and interesting, but attention is now called to this tree on account of the beautiful color of the autumn foliage. This, when the leaves first lose their green color, is bright clear yellow, but later as they begin to fall, becomes darker and the color of old gold. In October, in those parts of the country like Delaware county in eastern Pennsylvania, and on the slopes of the southern mountains, where the tulip-tree forms a considerable part of the forest, and often raises its head high above its humbler companions, its spire-like, bright golden crowns produce a beauty which can be found in no other part of the world. The Chinese tulip-tree of recent discovery has not proved hardy in the Arboretum. It is a much smaller tree than the American species with smaller flowers, but larger and handsomer leaves.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Trees Influence Property Sales.

A real estate transaction of particular significance was completed in South Bend recently, one that has a meaning for every holder of residential property in this or any other city. Trees sold a dwelling. They were the compelling sales agents for a property that without them might have begged for a buyer for years. A man loved the trees which surrounded the house; he wanted to live among them. The building was not what he desired; but he bought in spite of that objecton on account of the trees.

This example ought to appeal strongly to the younger householders who are just beginning their family life under their own roofs. Does the lot have enough trees? Do they need attention? Should more be set out now? Families who think about these things and plant trees and shrubberry are adding to their inheritance many times the value of the saplings and the labor. They are putting hundreds of dollars on their real estate and may be insuring it of ready sale. A poor house, badly located and meanly built will sell if it is set among trees, growing on its own lot, when a desirable building on treeless ground will not.—South Bend Tribune.

How to Keep the Greenhouse Heating System PERFECT This Winter

WHEN you start the heating system this winter you may find water dripping from small leaks or cracks in the boiler.

Putting off the repair may mean serious trouble later with heavy bills to face.

The proper thing to do is to pour "X" Liquid into the boiler now. This will repair the leaks and prevent new ones.

"X" is a marvelous liquid. When poured in the boiler it instantly combines with the water. In sizzling out through the leak or crack the "X" is changed by the oxygen in the air from a liquid into a solid, thus repairing the break.

The heat in the boiler then hardens this repair, making it as tough as metal, so that it will stand over 2,000 pounds pressure!

The surplus "X" being left in the system automatically stops all new leaks which may develop due to expansion or from other causes. In this way "X" makes the boiler (and in a hot water system, the entire system) LEAK-PROOF. Keep "X" always in the water and you will never have trouble from leaks, cracks, rust or scale.

"X" Eliminates Rust and Scale. Saves Coal.

"X" positively prevents all metal from pitting and rust. It eliminates scale in the boiler by chemically preventing the lime and other scale-forming matter in the water from crusting on the boiler walls. In this way "X" Liquid makes the boiler RUST-PROOF and SCALE-PROOF.

Greenhouse owners who use "X" Liquid report a gratifying saving in coal and greatly increased heating efficiency.

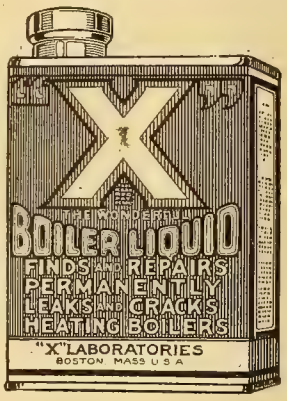
"X" Liquid is the surest and most economical method of repairing boilers. It is used by the United States Government, by thousands of apartment house owners, and is recommended by over 28,000 plumbers who use it regularly.

If you want to do the job yourself, get a can of "X" Liquid. Otherwise ask your plumber to do the job. His charges will be very reasonable.

The main thing is that "X" Liquid may save you thousands of dollars in an emergency. It is wise to keep "X" Liquid always on hand.

Unconditionally Guaranteed!

"X" will make good on any leaky or cracked boiler job—or we will return your money. You take no chances. "X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious substances. Beware of imitations which cannot do what the genuine "X" Liquid does.



1 Quart, $6 in the U. S. A.
2 Quarts, $10 in the U.S.A.
Get "X" Liquid from your steam-fitter—or we will ship direct, postage prepaid, on receipt of price.

WIZARD BRAND
TRADE MARK

PULVERIZED SHEEP—PULVERIZED CATTLE
SHREDDED CATTLE
MANURE

PROTECTS YOUR CROP

It is direct heat dried and sterilized, weed seeds, grass seeds, fungus and disease germs destroyed in a direct heat rotary drying process that does not change or destroy any of the valuable elements in crude manure.

Air dried manures cannot be sterilized and usually carry excess moisture that actually makes them cost more per ton than WIZARD BRAND even at the same or a lower price.

Look for the WIZARD BRAND Trade Mark tagged or printed on every bag. If it is not there you are not getting WIZARD BRAND protection for your crop and pocket book.

Your dealer can get WIZARD BRAND for you if you insist or we will quote with freight rate on any quantity from a bag to a carload promptly.

ALL Nurserymen, Seedsmen and Florists wishing to do business with Europe should send for the

Horticultural Advertiser

This is the British Trade Paper, being read weekly by all the horticultural trade; it is also taken by over 1,000 of the best continental houses. Annual subscriptions, to cover postage, $1.00.

As the H. A. is a purely TRADE medium applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalog or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade. Money orders payable at Lowdham, Notts.

THE CLIPPER

There are three things that destroy your lawns—Dandelions, Buck Plaintain and Crab Grass. In one season the Clipper will drive them all out. Your dealer should have them—if he has not, drop us a line and we will send circulars and prices.
